TRIBUNE AIDS IRISH PEACE

POLITE GIRL LOANS "RUBE" 50C; WINS $50

Telegraph Agent in Station Gets Prize.

Every day a reporter goes forth, like Diogenes with his lantern, and rubs elbows with the city folk. He is likely to speak to any one. The one who is most polite to him that day, no matter how aggravating the circumstances, will receive $50. Below is the story of yesterday's quest.

The "stranger" within our gates found several friends in the Dearborn station yesterday—especially Miss Anna Ahlgrim.

She is the pretty young lady in the depot Western Union office. THE TRIBUNE's politeness reporter, wandering wearily about in search of a recipient for the daily $50 prize, found her sitting behind the glass window with a phone transmitter strapped to her shoulders. In the reporter's hand was a small grip. On his face was a look of despair. He was obviously a rustic—and as such sure to be made sport of by this worldly wise city girl.

"Say," said the reporter timidly. "I wonder if I can send a telegram to Shelbyville. I need some money and so I can't pay for it. I reckon I must've been robbed by somebody."

She Sizes Him Up.

The blue eyes of the Western Union girl appraised the stranger for an instant.

"You want to send the message collect? Who to? Your folks?"

"Yes, my uncle in Shelbyville."

"It's against the—." Miss Anna interrupted herself. "All right, go ahead," she finished.

It took several minutes for the reporter to write the request for money. Several times he broke into the official duties of the Western Union girl to ask a question, but the reply was always kind and courteous. Finally he pushed the following message through the window:

"Dear Uncle: I got robbed and need some money. Please send some to Dearborn station telegraph office. Lots of love. John."

"Is that all right?" asked the reporter. "You see, I don't want to make it too long. Uncle's kind of close."

Strikes Out Unnecessary Words.

Miss Anna smiled and straightway read copy on the telegram.

"Are you sure he will pay for this?" she asked. "If he doesn't it will be charged to me."

As she talked her busy pencil was moving over the yellow telegraph blank.

"The main idea's to get the money," she said, and submitted the following amended demand on uncle:

"Was robbed. Need some money. Wire care Dearborn station. Love. John."

She Loans Him "Chow" Money.

Thereupon Miss Anna started to get the message under way. She told the politeness seeker to return in about an hour. He lingered a second, a bit embarrassed.

"Say," he finally said. "I haven't eaten for a long while. I wonder if I could borrow a quarter from you to get a bit of something."

The Western Union girl still smiled.

"Why, did they get all your money?" she inquired. She cogitated a second and then placed a coin upon the counter. "I guess you had better take 50 cents," she said.

The next instant she was gazing at a card which bestowed upon her 100 times that amount—just for a few minutes of kindness and politeness to a "stranger" alone in a big city.

Others in Station Polite.

There were others in the Dearborn station who treated the rustic with consideration. The flamboyant-haired youth at the information counter gave him first aid in trying to get in touch with a mythical friend, and baggageman No. 4 was genuinely concerned in the politeness seeker's "loss" of a trunk.

Five minutes before train time the latter had rushed in to demand his baggage. He had no check—didn't know what one was, in fact.

"The man at the hotel"—naming a disreputable place near the river—"told me all I'd have to do was come in and ask for it," said the reporter. "Do you s'pose he was slicking me?"

Baggageman No. 4 made haste to quiet his alarm, hurried him back to inspect the baggage, and, when the trunk could not be found, gave him sane counsel and promised to keep an eye open for it. He was a real Samaritan.

Blood Vessel Breaks While Caruso Sings

New York, Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Enrico Caruso ruptured a small blood vessel in his throat during the first act of "Elisir d'Amore" in Brooklyn tonight and was unable to continue. He struggled through to the end of the first act. Then the audience, after loud cries of sympathy for the tenor, was dismissed and the performance closed.

According to William Guard, publicity director of the Metropolitan, the accident was not a serious one and did not interfere with his singing, except that the accumulations of blood in the throat made articulation difficult.

Explains to Audience.

Mr. Guard appeared upon the stage, the audience having gotten restive, as nearly thirty minutes had elapsed since the curtain was rung down.

A few of the 3,000 who sat near the stage had observed the blood stains about the singer's mouth.

Briefly, Mr. Guard announced the nature of the accident, and said:

"It might mean permanent injury for Mr. Caruso to continue. Surely you do not wish him to undergo that danger."

From all parts of the house came cries of "No, no!" and "Send us home."

Mr. Guard said the decision to call the opera to a halt was reached on the advice of Caruso's personal physician, Dr. Philip Horowitz.

After Dr. Horowitz had applied temporary treatment Caruso was able to return by automobile to the Hotel Vanderbilt. There the singer retired to his suite, where he remained under the care of Dr. Horowitz. It was said that he was undergoing further treatment.

Expect Early Return.

No word was obtained as to just how long Caruso would have to wait before he could resume singing. The Metropolitan management allowed it to be understood that no long absence of the tenor was anticipated.

On Nov. 24, it was reported in operatic circles, one of the pillars used in staging the last act of "Samson and Delilah" fell upon Caruso and hurt him painfully.

Singing in "I Pagliacci" at the Metropolitan last Wednesday night, Caruso, as he finished the famous aria, slipped and fell, twisting his ankle badly.

KILLS HIMSELF, LEAVING NOTE BLAMING BOSS

Leaving a note written on the border of a newspaper, in which he claimed that if his employer "had only treated him half white he wouldn't be dead today," Theodore Evans, 1100 West Forty-second street, a chef, committed suicide last night by shooting himself on the street at 4513 North Clifton avenue.

The note, addressed to George Momeatys, his employer, was signed "Teddy." It read:

"If you had treated me only half way white I would not be dead today. Good by, I have not any hard feelings towards you. I depended on you so much and you did not keep any of your promises."

The police are looking for Momeatys to question him.

DEATH OF RICH WIDOW BARES HER DUAL LIFE

Mystery Marks End of Mrs. Reynolds.

The problem of an odd dual existence was given the police for solution yesterday when Mrs. Minnie Viola Reynolds, pretty widow of a wealthy Chicago coal dealer, was found asphyxiated in mysterious circumstances in her sumptuously furnished apartment at 1340 North Dearborn street.

Mrs. Reynolds' body, clad in expensive silks, was found on the floor of the dining room. A large pearl necklace was about her throat and she wore several large diamond rings. Two burners of the gas range in the kitchen were found open.

If she had planned suicide, the police determined, she had made the decision suddenly, because the well filled refrigerator showed every preparation had been made for a bountiful Sunday dinner, while stocks of beer and vermuth and many empty whisky bottles in the cupboards hinted at gay parties held and yet to be.

Known as Rich and Cultured.

To the small coterie of her intimate friends, Mrs. Reynolds had been known as a cultured woman of independent means, living quietly among her books and religious and philosophical studies, venturing out at infrequent intervals for an occasional game of golf or attendance at some concert or lecture.

From a tangled mass of personal effects, photographs of many men, telegrams, post cards, memoranda of names and telephone numbers and even bits of lively verse, the police last night had linked together a chain of evidence tending to show that for some months past Mrs. Reynolds had stepped out of her sedate role to pose as the vivacious wife of H. C. May, general superintendent of the Monon railroad.

Told to Send Bills to May.

A Cadillac car found in the M. & S. garage at 1337 North Clark street, bore on its doors the monogram "H. C. M." In this motor, the police were told, the couple, known variously as "Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds" and "Mr. and Mrs. May," went forth on pleasure jaunts.

Harry S. Salmon, proprietor of the garage, told the police he knew Mrs. Reynolds as "Mrs. May" and that he had been directed to send the monthly fuel and repair bills to a Mr. May in room 1444 Transportation building. The Monon offices are listed as room 1414, Transportation building.

The police found many telegrams signed "H. C. May" sent from Lafayette and other points in Indiana, informing Mrs. Reynolds of his expected arrival in town. One of two dressers in the apartment was half filled with silk shirts, men's collars, pajamas, and socks, all bearing the laundry mark "May."

Lease in Reynolds' Name.

The 1919 lease for the apartment, which is owned by Judge Oscar Hebel, was made out to C. A. Reynolds, the name of Mrs. Reynolds' husband, who died in April, 1918. Mrs. Hebel told a TRIBUNE reporter, however, that there was no Mr. Reynolds, but that the man who lived in the apartment was Mr. May. Richard H. Williams, janitor of the building, declared he had known the couple only as Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds.

"But it's a funny thing," he added. "The garage man back there knows them as Mr. and Mrs. May."

Mr. May, when at home, resides with his wife and children at 904 Highland avenue, Lafayette, Ind., but he could not be reached there last night. Mrs. May answered the phone.

May Away, Wife Says.

"My husband will not be back until Sunday," she said. "He is in Chicago a great deal and when there usually stops at some of the clubs."

Officials of the Monon declared Mr. May usually stopped at the Auditorium hotel. At the hotel, the clerks said Mr. May was not known there.

"Mr. May always keeps two cars," said one rail man, "one in Lafayette and one in Chicago somewhere up on Clark street."

Although it was stated it was believed Mr. May was in Chicago yesterday no trace of him could be found. This information served to puzzle the police still more as to the motive for the apparent suicide. Mrs. Reynolds evidently had just come in from a walk before she met her death.

Her fur coat and hat were thrown over a chair in the living room. It is believed she had been dead since Friday morning, as the ice man delivered ice there then and the card had not been removed from the window.

MINISTER SLAYS WOMAN AND SELF; WIFE LOOKS ON

Mount Vernon, Tex., Dec. 11.—[United Press.]—While his wife looked on, W. R. Crumpley, a minister, today shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Oscar Kennedy, wife of a farmer, and then shot himself, dying instantly.

A note was found in Crumpley's pocket declaring he loved Mrs. Kennedy and "she loves me," but as they "both had life companions and could not live together we can die together."

Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Crumpley were working in the Crumpley yard when Crumpley called to Mrs. Kennedy, the authorities said. As she arose he shot her, the bullet entering her right eye. She died a short time later. Her husband and three children survive.

Crumpley fired the shot that ended his own life without uttering a word. He was about 45 years old.

JAPAN ANGRY IT WASN'T INVITED TO CHILE AFFAIR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SANTIAGO, Dec. 11.—It is reported in diplomatic circles that Chile and Japan are verging on an incident of more or less gravity following a formal protest from Japan because she was not invited to attend the Magellan straits celebration.

Although the foreign ministry is reserved, well informed circles insist that a protest already has been submitted stating that because of Japan's importance in the Pacific she keenly feels the slight of not being invited to an event of such interest to Pacific nations, and especially as two other naval powers, Great Britain and the United States, have been invited.

Two Banks Add to List of Christmas Bonuses

Christmas bonuses were announced by two more Chicago banks yesterday. The Harris Trust and Savings bank will give 10 per cent of yearly salaries to all employés except officers and department heads. This is in addition to the regular contribution of 5 per cent of net profits to the employés' savings and profit sharing fund. The Bowmanville National bank will give a 10 per cent bonus to all officers and employés and the stockholders will receive an extra dividend of 4 per cent.

This Landlord Knows the War Is Over; Cuts Rent

New York, Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Tenants at 506 West One Hundred and Seventy-sixth street found landlord's notices in their letter boxes today. But when they opened them and found they called for a decrease in rent their astonishment was as great as their gratification.

Charles Galewski, landlord, predicts that "the moderate waged man need not fear further rent increases, for war conditions are correcting themselves."

Raiders Eye Booze Hoards of Rich Men

Lieut. Col. A. V. Smith, the newly elected state's attorney of Lake county, after a week spent in making nearly 100 raids on bootleggers and blind pigs and confiscating thousands of gallons of booze, yesterday turned his attention to north shore cities—and wealthy residents of Lake Forest, Waukegan, Lake Bluff, Highland Park, and Ravinia, who have liquor in their cellars are wondering.

After the colonel and a squad of his trusty deputies had descended on Highwood and left with more than 1,000 gallons of alleged bootleg, Mr. Smith stated his stand in the matter.

"Can Enter Any Home."

"I am going to enforce the law to the limit," he said. "I interpret the Illinois search and seizure law as meaning it is illegal to have intoxicating liquor in one's possesson, whether for personal or other use. Under the law I and my men can enter any home or residence and confiscate liquor containing more than one-half of 1 per cent alcohol.

"I take no particular delight in raiding homes, but as a public official entrusted with the enforcement of the law I must perform the duty I have sworn to do."

S-o-m-e Moonshine!

Ten moonshiners were arrested on Friday in Waukegan and 2,500 gallons of whisky confiscated. Two barrels of mash and two barrels of wine were seized in another Waukegan store.

"The moonshine being made and sold around here is so deadly it paralyzes the drinker," declared Assistant Chief of Police Thomas Tyrrell, who has accompanied Col. Smith on the raiding parties. "It will remove varnish from wood. A piece of beefsteak left in it will be consumed in twenty-four hours. The doctors are reporting more and more stomach trouble and Col. Smith intends to stop it."

Fourth Robbery in Year.

The summer home of C. H. Ackert, railroad magnate, northwest of Lake Forest, which was robbed by booze thieves three times within the year, was ransacked Friday night by three masked men, who bound Carl Mahler, the caretaker, hand and foot to his bed and went through the house at their leisure. The men drove off with an automobile filled with loot.

The robbery marked the sixth visit paid to homes in and near Lake Forest by booze thieves within the last week.

Since the robberies of a year ago Mr. Ackert had employed Mahler as night watchman. Mahler works on the Culver estate in the daytime and sleeps at the Ackert home. Employés of the Culver estate, wondering at Mahler's absence yesterday, visited the Ackert home and released him.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 11.—Great loss of life and vast destruction were caused by the earthquake which rocked southern Chile Thursday, according to reports which reached Santiago asking assistance for the sufferers today.

BRINGS ENVOY OF SINN FEIN INTO TOUCH WITH BRITISH

John Steele, London Correspondent, Arranges Meetings at Which Common Ground Was Found.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 11.—I am now at liberty to tell the full story of the conversations leading to Mr. Lloyd George's offer toward Ireland in the house of commons yesterday.

I have had the good fortune to act as representative of The Chicago Tribune as the intermediary who first brought the two sides together and I have been present at all but one or two of these conversations, some of which took place at a government office and some in my room at The Tribune's London bureau, 125 Pall Mall.

At these conversations a "bridge was built" which has been adopted by the premier. That bridge is the allowing of the Irish members of parliament to meet, but not as members of Dail Eirann.

I am not, however, at liberty to disclose the names of the parties to these conversations. The government's side was carried on by an official who had spent much time in America as a member of a British mission. His name is not mentioned because it is a tradition of the British civil service to subordinate the personality of its members in such cases. On the Irish side was a leading Irish business man directly representing the Sinn Fein leaders. The reason for concealing his name for the present is that it might place him in peril at the hands of extremists in Ireland who desire no settlement.

Gains Friendly Relations

I have been visiting Ireland at short intervals during the last two years and I had established friendly relations both with British officials and Sinn Fein leaders, who talked frankly with me on their views as to the outcome of the struggle.

I may say now that few of them expected to gain full independence and most were ready to accept any honorable compromise. I was in Dublin the first week of October. Just before my return to London a number of members of the Sinn Fein executive committee expressed a desire that I meet a leading Irish business man who had had certain experiences which they thought interesting. One Sinn Feiner brought him to my hotel on Oct. 8, where friendly relations were established.

I returned next day to London and on Oct. 12 this man, whom I will now call an envoy, walked into my office and talked vaguely about the terrible state of affairs in Ireland and his hope of a settlement soon, finally hinting that he would like to get into touch with the government, and asked my help.

I telephoned a civil servant, making an appointment for the same afternoon when the first conversation took place, and the envoy was taken to see a member of the cabinet—not the premier.

At this meeting the envoy was asked if Ireland would insist on the full "republican" demand, and he replied: "I am a fisherman. I fish for salmon, but never reject a trout."

The minister replied: "Suppose we give you a salmon trout?"

Envoy Visits Griffith

As a result of this conversation it became apparent that the envoy did not have clear instructions from the Sinn Fein leaders, and the next day he returned to Ireland to ascertain their views. On Oct. 15 he had a conference with Arthur Griffith, acting president of the Sinn Fein organization, who summoned a conference of the leaders of Dail Eirann for Oct. 16.

Two days later the envoy saw Mr. Griffith again, and he returned to London Oct. 20 and conferred with British officials in The Tribune office.

At this conference the envoy suggested that members of Dail Eirann be allowed to meet and choose two or three men to confer with an equal number of British officials with a view to discussing a basis for a formal conference.

The following day they conferred again, and at this meeting it was stated that the prime minister was "interested."

Agree to End Outlawry

Next day the envoy returned to Dublin for consultation, returning to London Nov. 10. Several conferences followed, at which the difficulty of conferring while Sinn Fein murders and British reprisals continued was discussed, and on Nov. 12 the following proposal was formed:

"Suppose Dail Eirann were allowed to meet under guarantees of safety for its members, would its first act be to call off the murders of police and soldiers if the British, on their side, ordered reprisals to cease?"

The envoy's answer was "Yes," but he agreed to go to Ireland again to get an authoritative answer.

On Nov. 17 I received a letter from Ireland stating that action had been taken to restore order, and the next day the envoy returned to London with a letter from Arthur Griffith which, while not committing the Sinn Fein to anything more than a desire for peace, formally identified the envoy as an authorized agent of the organization.

Urges Speedy Action

At the same time he urged haste, as he wrote, "Wild men in Ireland were planning a campaign of outrages in England." (This proved true later when fires occurred in Liverpool.

The envoy also announced he was definitely authorized to start peace negotiations. The envoy's letter also was shown to men close to, and in personal touch with, Mr. Lloyd George, who were impressed by its importance.

Of course, the prime minister had been kept informed daily of the conversations.

On Nov. 20 a transcript of the several conversations was taken by

Mr. Lloyd George to the country for a week-end study, and every one concerned was hopeful of speedy action toward peace, but on Sunday, Nov. 21, the Dublin massacre of British officers took place and British public opinion was so dangerously inflammed that it was evident nothing could be done immediately.

Urge Envoy to "Keep Head."

As may be imagined the conversations next day were very serious and earnest. All concerned on the government's side urged the envoy to remain in London and "keep his head," hoping within a week or so to resume with a chance for success.

I went to Dublin on the night of the 22d carrying messages from the envoy and the British officials to Mr. Griffith, imploring him to keep his head and to try and restrain the Irish and not break the link already established. I delivered these messages the morning of Nov. 23, receiving Mr. Griffith's assurance that he would do all in his power, and that he hoped the British would do all in their power to prevent reprisals, but expressing the fear that if reprisals continued he would be unable to restrain the Irish extremists.

I telegraphed these messages to London.

Griffith Wants Conference.

I saw Mr. Griffith again before returning to London on Nov. 25, when he repeated his message, declaring he wished an unconditional conference, the outcome of which might be submitted to the Irish people for decision.

The day after my return to London Arthur Griffith and Prof. McNeil were arrested without the knowledge and, I believe, against the wishes of Downing street. It was thought at this time the mistake would be rectified by their release immediately, but nothing was done.

On Nov. 27 I was informed by one of the officials that Mr. Lloyd George thought if there was peace in Ireland for three weeks, Dail Eirann might be allowed to meet on the terms already mentioned and it was arranged in the London office of THE TRIBUNE that the envoy should return to Ireland at once and see not only the political leaders but also the "military" chiefs of the Sinn Fein and arrange for an immediate cessation of outrages.

Plan Safety for Envoy.

As part of this bargain the envoy was not to be watched nor molested, and the safety of the men he met was guaranteed. This arrangement was not carried out because of the Liverpool fires the next day, which roused another storm of public indignation in England.

The next day the envoy told the officials that unless action was taken quickly the whole of Ireland would swing to the extremists and the following day he repeated this warning, adding:

"Every day you keep Arthur Griffith in jail weakens the sane element in Ireland and adds strength to the extremists."

The envoy, disgusted over the delay, wanted to go home, but the officials urged me to keep him at all costs.

Outrage Causes Delay.

Another Irish outrage that day, the killing of fifteen black and tans at Macroom, caused another delay. The envoy returned to Ireland on Dec. 3, immediately beginning work to suppress murders, and wired me that he was succeeding.

On Dec. 5 came Father O'Flanagan's peace offer and the resolution of the Galway county council. These evidently caused the premier's decision to act on the formula already agreed upon, allowing members of Dail Eirann to meet as members of the British parliament.

Of course during this time Mr. Lloyd George saw others concerning Ireland, including George Russell and Archbishop Clune of Perth, Australia. He also saw the laborites who had been in Ireland, and I am informed all told him that the only men who could "deliver the goods" were members of Dail Eirann.

There is no doubt, however, that the proposal to allow Dail Eirann members to meet while not recognizing the "republic" was worked out in the conversations with Griffith's envoy in my office.

There ought to be little trouble in securing acceptance of Mr. Lloyd George's offer to Ireland. The only members of Dail Eirann affected by proscription are men who are guilty of crimes. I have been assured that Michael Collins would be willing to eliminate himself for the good of his country.

Times Tells Tribune's Part.

Under martial law every offender would be sure of trial before a military tribunal. Under the black and tan method, prisoners are shot out of hand. The Times tells the story of the negotiations, including THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's part, saying:

"The premier's action is all the more promising because it has been taken at the suggestion of Irishmen. We print today a message the London correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has sent this journal. It discloses the story of an exchange of views, in which that correspondent played a prominent part, that have taken place between government officials and a representative of the Sinn Fein.

"A Hopeful Record."

"We cannot but regard it as a hopeful record. On one hand it shows how shrewdly the Irish extremists stuck to hope for an Irish settlement, as the result of murders of officers in Dublin and the fatal ambush at Macroom. On the other it seems to prove that the arrest of Arthur Griffith at best was a blunder.

"But still more important, it clears the government of any suspicion of duplicity or bad faith in their efforts to achieve a settlement of the Irish question."

The Morning Post, the Tory organ, is opposed to any talk with Dail Eirann, but approves the imposition of martial law. It is now up to the Sinn Fein to make the next move replying to the suggestion for a conference.

Press Lauds Exploit.

The London evening papers reprint in full THE TRIBUNE's part in the conversations, also commenting editorially upon the important part THE TRIBUNE played.

The Star has a long editorial headed "The Salmon Trout." The Evening News in its editorial says:

"The remarkable story of the London correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE makes it clear that the Irish gunmen are the enemies to any negotiation as much as they are enemies to the British government. Thus it is not strange that the government appears with an olive branch in one hand and a sword in the other."

The Ulster Unionist council committee after considering the home rule bill today issued a statement refusing to agree to the house of lords amendments and declaring their intention of accepting the measure as passed by the house of commons.

MASON DEMANDS LEAGUE OBTAIN IRISH PASSPORTS

"No Faith in You, but Make Britain Act."

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—A cablegram calling upon the league of nations to "permit America to know the truth as to conditions in Ireland" was sent today to Paul Hymans, president of the council of the league of nations, by Representative William E. Mason, Illinois, in his capacity as a member of the house foreign affairs committee.

"Five distinguished Americans," the cablegram reads, "representing a committee of 100 eminent citizens of all shades of opinion organized to study all phases of the war in Ireland in the interest of international understanding and world peace obtained passports from the American government for a visit to England and Ireland to make first hand inquiries.

"We Have No Faith in You."

"The British government has refused vises. America as evidenced in the recent election, has little faith in the league of nations as at present constituted, believing it dominated by British and other imperialist governments for selfish ends.

"Neverthelss, you and your colleagues at Geneva can do much to advance the league's influence with the common people of the world by affirming the inviolability of international communication of fact and opinion as the fundamental requisite of international understanding and world peace.

"In the present instance, the league of nations is afforded an extraordinary opportunity to prove to Americans its freedom from British domination by inducing the British government to permit the truth to be known to America as to conditions in Ireland.

"No Truth in London."

"Americans do not accept the issuances from London as the truth of the situation, and until the British government vouchsafes to the peoples of the world the right of free and untrammeled international communication the American people will, in my opinion, continue to consider the world as a vast jail to which the British government holds the keys."

Mrs. Muriel MacSwiney, widow of the late lord mayor of Cork, and Miss Mary MacSwiney, his sister, who have been giving testimony on Irish conditions before the American investigating commission here, were guests of honor at a public reception here today and expect to remain in Washington several days, although their testimony before the commission is concluded.

Widow Wants Letters.

Mrs. MacSwiney in an interview today appealed to the men and women of America to aid in procuring Irish emancipation. She urged them to write to their senators and congressmen on the subject.

Her sister-in-law said that she did not know whether the British government would permit Mrs. MacSwiney and herself to return to Ireland, and even if it did, she said she feared "the black and tans will exert every effort to kill me."

ATHENS WILD AS TINO GETS BID TO COME AND REIGN

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—Official notification of the result of the plebiscite in Greece and an invitation to return to Athens and reascend the Greek throne immediately, were received by former King Constantine here this morning.

The Greek government notified Constantine it will have a Greek cruiser and an escort of warships to receive him and his family at Venice on Wednesday. The family will leave Lucerne on an ordinary train Monday.

Prof. Georgios Streit, former foreign minister and Constantine's chief adviser during his exile, who is reputed to be pro-German, and Capt. Stefan Paparrigopoulos, commandant in the Greek navy and Constantine's aid de camp, are prohibited from returning to Greece in the telegram inviting Constantine to return.

The captain was twice condemned to death by the Venizelist government. He said he did not believe England was responsible for his continued exile, and was inclined to blame France.

PLANT TO MAKE BOMBS IS FOUND BUSY IN DUBLIN

One Man Shot When Soldiers Raid It.

BULLETIN.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—Twelve auxiliary cadets were wounded tonight in an ambush at Cork by bombs thrown from a lorry. At Shankill, near Dublin, during a raid on a club, when the club members were ranged against a wall, William Owens, a clerk, was shot dead by some unknown person from the outside.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—An arsenal was discovered by the police today in a Dublin raid which yielded 500 grenades fully prepared and many others partly completed. A large number of revolvers and three sacks of gelignite also were discovered. The munitions were found in a shop used for bicycle repairs and three men found in the vicinity were arrested and one other was shot while escaping.

William Owens was shot dead in a raid on a social club at Shankill, County Dublin, last night and ten men found there were placed against a wall with their hands raised while being interrogated. A shot fired from the doorway by a nervous soldier killed Owens.

Find Irish Bomb Plant.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—By the Associated Press.]—Dublin castle's report on the bomb plant discovered here today describes the factory as extensively and completely equipped with furnaces and machinery of a modern character. No workers were there at the time, but the molds still were warm, as though bombs had been freshly cast. Two hundred bombs in various stages of manufacture were found.

There was evidence, says the castle report, that the filling of the bombs was done in an extremely haphazard and dangerous manner, as detonators, loose powder mixed with all kinds of cartridges, and sacks full of gelignite and other explosives were found lying all about the place.

Find Infernal Machine.

A particularly sinister discovery was the incomplete portion of an infernal machine, which showed it was to have been about the size of an ordinary typewriter, and that it probably was intended for use with a time device.

The accommodations at the plant were rather cramped for the ten workmen who were employed, it is understood. The plant was in a populous district. Had an explosion occurred, there might have been heavy loss of life.

Loaded revolvers were on the benches, presumably for the use of the workers if necessary. It is estimated the factory could turn out hundreds of bombs monthly.

MAY EXTEND MARTIAL LAW.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Martial law in Ireland, initially applied to a limited area in the southwestern portion of that country, will be immediately extended "should conditions develop subsequently justifying it," according to the latest proclamation issued by the British government.

The proclamation, which was supplementary to Premier Lloyd George's announcement in the house of commons yesterday, stated:

"Martial law will be initially applied to a limited area in southwest Ireland, where lawlessness and outrages have been especially prevalent. The government hopes it will be possible to confine its application to that area, but without hesitation, the area will be immediately extended should conditions develop subsequently justifying it."

British Troops Mobilize.

A dispatch from Plymouth said that the 2d battalion of the Scottish Borderers and the 1st battalion of the Yorkshire light infantry have been ordered held in readiness to proceed to Ireland.

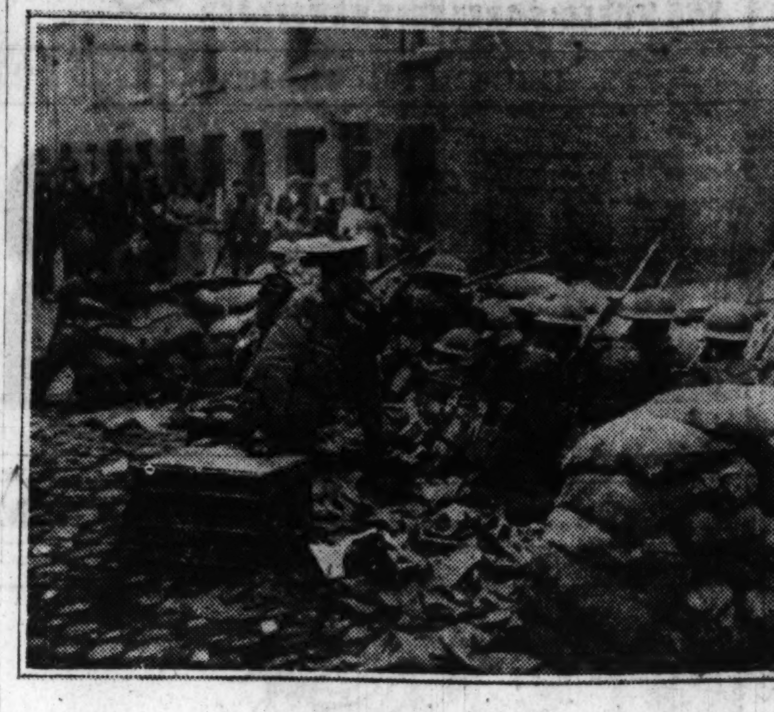
"THE MUSTARD POT"



Scene in Old Park road, Belfast, Ireland, photographed by Capt. Edwin F. Weigle, Tribune photographer, during the recent riots. Capt. Weigle has brought to Chicago thousands of feet of film showing actual fighting between the Black and Tans and Sinn Feiners and other stirring views of the Emerald isle.

WEIGLE AND WIFE BRAVE DEATH TO FILM IRISH RIOTS

Tribune Man of War Fame Gets Views.

Capt. Edwin F. Weigle, war photographer of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the same man who in 1916 scored a sensational newspaper "scoop" by bringing to Chicago the famous motion picture films of the world war, has just arrived in Chicago from Ireland with thousands of feet of new films in which true conditions in Ireland today are clearly shown for the first time.

These new motion pictures vividly portray the raids, riots, reprisals, and destruction in general which are daily occurrences in Ireland. They are actual photographs of real events—Irish history in the making. In them may be seen the royal Irish constabulary (black and tans) and the Sinn Feiners meeting in armed conflict before the camera's eye. For the first time they bring to Chicagoans actual views of mob scenes in the famed "Mustard Pot" of Belfast—the armored motor cars in use, the barbed wire barricades in the streets, the store windows boarded up along the main business streets, factories burned to the ground, the smoking ruins of once peaceful homes.

Pictures Shown Wednesday.

Capt. Weigle has been busy for the last week editing the pictures, and arrangements have been made to show them for the first time on Wednesday morning at the Randolph theater, State and Randolph streets, and daily thereafter from 8:30 to 12 p. m. The pictures are titled "Ireland in Revolt."

THE TRIBUNE dispatched Capt. Weigle on Aug. 2, 1920, with instructions to "get the truth about Ireland—first hand facts in pictures!" He spent three months on the job and carried out instructions to the letter.

Throughout his journeyings Capt. Weigle was accompanied by his wife, who shared with him the hardships and dangers he encountered while on his quest for "facts in pictures," who dodged cobblestones when the two were attacked by rioters who mistook them for representatives of "the enemy," and whose tact and woman's wit on several occasions aided considerably in securing actual motion pictures of historic events which would otherwise have been missed.

Hard to Convince of Neutrality.

"It wasn't easy, but the pictures will convince you we succeeded," said Capt. Weigle as he replied to queries regarding his latest exploit. "Convincing representatives of first one side and then the other that we were really neutral was our hardest task.

"Our first view of the results of rioting was obtained at Lisburn, where some seventy houses were destroyed after a black and tan constable had been shot. We arrived while the ruins were still smoking and the population was at fever heat.

"Some days later we visited Belfast, where many of the pictures were obtained. For two entire days the main business street of this Irish city—what corresponds to State street in Chicago—was given over to street riots and fighting, absolutely dominated by the shipyard workers and union men, without any semblance of law or order. Most of the fighting centered in Ballymacarrett—the 'Mustard Pot' or Old Park road.

Threatened with Death.

"I set up my camera in the street, but had hardly begun to 'shoot' when the mob overwhelmed me, demanded to know who I was, why the pictures were being taken, and threats were made to stone me to death unless I immediately ceased taking pictures. I later learned that the Sinn Feiners particularly feared a camera since some British newspaper photographs had been secured by the military authorities and used as a means of identifying the leaders in the rioting going on at the time the pictures were taken.

"However, by concealing myself and the camera in second story windows along the streets in which rioting most frequently occurred I was able to get some exclusive pictures of the street fighting. It was from a position of this sort that the beating of men to death was photographed, also views of the women engaged in digging up cobblestones from the paving (the Irish call them 'kidney stones') and passing them along to their men folk as ammunition in the street battles."

He also obtained views in Mallow, the location of the second largest creamery in Ireland, where several raids and counter raids occurred; in Galway, the most primitive section of Ireland, where the populace was wholly unacquainted with a motion picture camera and hadn't the remotest idea what it was all about, and in Killarney, where some exceptionally beautiful pictures were made of the celebrated lakes. Some unique views of the Blarney stone also were filmed.

LEAGUE'S ARMY BASE AT MEMEL FOR VILNA VOTE

WARSAW, Dec. 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—The league of nations international army to supervise the plebiscite at Vilna will probably establish its base at Memel, which is under the league's control. Troops and supplies could be landed there without touching Prussian territory.

An army of 2,000 from Sweden, Spain, Denmark, Belgium, France, and England probably will march into Vilna in January ready for the plesbiscite.

Col. Charigny, commanding the league's army, will establish his headquarters at Vilna. The army's flag will be a blue square with a white field in the left hand corner, bearing a red swastika in the center.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Paris banker M. Frezouls, who left his home last Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock and was seen to take a taxicab with the intention of going to the ministry of finance, has not been seen or heard of since.

All his books and affairs are in perfect order and the police are at work on the theory that he was kidnaped by an unknown debtor whom he had been pressing for the repayment of a loan of over half a million francs.

All his actions during the last few days before he disappeared have been carefully "reconstructed" by the police and the theory has been formed that there is a close connection between the operations on which he was engaged and his disappearance.

Germany Finds Wonderful Kick in "Liquid Coal"

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—Discussing many new methods and inventions tried to obtain the greatest energy from coal, due to a coal shortage the world over, the noted engineer, Kurt Lasswitz, declared that liquid coal will help solve the world fuel problem.

Coal under 200 atmospheres pressure, writes Lasswitz, heated to between 540 and 720 degrees Fahrenheit and mixed with hydrogen gas, becomes liquid, and its energy, he says, is greatly increased. In the near future liquid coal will be used by many big plants, he declares.

ILLION WORLD TRADE LEAGUE BEGINS CAREER

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

The billion dollar baby in the world's markets was born yesterday. The project to form a corporation with $100,000,000 capital and $1,000,000,000 capacity was adopted by the conference of finance, industry, farming, and business at the Congress.

A committee of thirty was appointed to organize the company and start it moving and in 10 minutes the delegates raised $100,000 to meet the expenses of launching the venture. Last night the thirty organizers decided upon an executive body of nine to work out the details. Its personnel will be announced in New York in a few days.

The enterprise is christened the Foreign Trade Financing corporation. It is expected to start actual business soon after New Year's, or as soon as $25,000,000 is subscribed.

McHugh Heads Organizers.

The committee on permanent organization, which represents all prime lines of business, commerce, finance, and production, is as follows:

John McHugh [chairman], New York.
Herbert Hoover, Palo Alto, Cal.
Paul M. Warburg, New York.
John S. Drum, San Francisco.
James B. Forgan, Chicago.
F. O. Watts, St. Louis.
Lewis E. Pierson, New York.
Charles H. Sabin, New York.
Arthur Reynolds, Chicago.
J. R. Howard, Clinton, Ia.
Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago.
Fred I. Kent, New York.
J. G. Culbertson, Wichita Falls, Tex.
Levi L. Rue, Philadelphia.
Philip Stockton, Boston.
Oscar Wells, Birmingham, Ala.
Julius H. Barnes, Duluth.
A. C. Bedford, New York.
Herbert Myrick, Springfield, Mass.
Alexander Legge, Chicago.
Joseph H. Defrees, Chicago.
John S. Lawrence, Boston.
E. M. Herr, Pittsburgh.
Roy D. Chapin, Detroit.
John J. Raskob, Wilmington, Del.
Charles A. Hinsch, Cincinnati.
Peter W. Goebel, Kansas City.
Thomas B. McAdams, Richmond, Va.
John Sherwin, Cleveland.
George Ed Smith, New York.

Given Full Powers.

The personnel of this creative body was reported by the committee on plan and scope, John H. Fahey of Boston, chairman. It is invested with full authority to add to its numbers and "to take all steps deemed by it necessary or appropriate to organize and bring into operation a corporation under the provisions of the Edge act, with a capital of $100,000,000 for financing American foreign trade."

Resolutions adopted by the conference set down two guiding principles:

"Extension of credit by the corporation should be confined to countries where there is a stable government and where there is an assurance of integrity of purpose.

"Operations of the corporation should be confined to financing for the benefit of future foreign trade."

Out After New Business.

The latter principle emanated from the agricultural interests. Its purpose was to prevent the unloading of some of the "floating debt" of $3,500,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 owed America by Europe upon the new company. In other words, new foreign business, instead of liquidation of old credits, piled up in seaboard banks, is what the new corporation is established for.

The tone of the conference throughout was one of harmony and coöperation among the groups from agriculture, banking, industry, commerce and ordinary business. It marked the first time farmers, bankers, and manufacturers have pulled together on the problem of foreign markets. Union labor will be urged to participate in the subscriptions to get it in closer touch with the financing of industry.

"Marks New Era"—Hurley.

"It marks the opening of a new era," said Edward N. Hurley, former head of the Emergency Fleet corporation. "It should help us greatly in taking our place in world trade as the great creditor nation of the earth."

"The fact this corporation was formed in the open, without any inside group, founders' stock, or any of the other corporation methods, gives it a moral start of the highest kind," said Willis H. Booth, New York, chairman of the conference. "It is as unusual as it is inspiring. It is formed for America and America will reap the profits."

"It's a momentous step," said Charles H. Sabin, president of the Guaranty Trust company of New York. "As creditor nation we shall be dependent on our foreign markets. This should open the markets, give us an outlet, increase our production and employment, and at the same time aid the rest of the world."

John McHugh of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank of New York is to be head of the board of directors, without compensation.

U. S. Dollar at Premium.

The argument hammered home during two days' addresses by leading financiers and producers was set forth again by Fred I. Kent of the Bankers' Trust company of New York, who made the chief speech of the day.

"The fact that the United States dollar is at a premium throughout the world," he said, "or, to be more explicit, the underlying cause for this fact, is at the bottom of our trouble.

"The principal and most disastrous effect lies in the brake put upon the distribution of the world's products, as it is this stagnation in distribution which throws commodities on markets which cannot absorb them, resulting in the falling of prices at a dangerous speed, with the consequent enforced idleness of labor.

Long Term Credit Needed.

"We are therefore brought face to face with the question as to how we can best extend long time credits to Europe on a basis that will enable her to reconstruct her industries and to other countries of the world, to enable them in turn to make advances to Europe for goods which they can furnish."

WORK AND WORK AND THEN WORK HARDER: SCHWAB

Steelmaster Has World Panacea.

New York, Dec. 11.—"Unless the great body of men throughout the world work with might and main to restore that which has been lost by the destructiveness of the war this world will sink to a lower level of civilization than we have been accustomed to enjoy," Charles M. Schwab said at the annual dinner of the Pennsylvania Society of New York tonight.

Mr. Schwab further declared that:

The more severe the present business depression is the sooner it will be over.

If the cost of living is reduced, the laborer can maintain his present standard of living, even though his wages are less.

Loafers in the Way.

There is no place in America today for the loafer.

The laborer should receive his full share of the wealth he produces.

Efficient production is the only guarantee of employment and higher wages.

The government must set an example in economy and thrift.

"Uppermost in the minds of American citizens today is the question: What is the meaning of the existing slump in business, and what of the future?" Mr. Schwab said.

"The existing moment is full of difficulties and complexities. But I want to go on record here as saying that nothing could be healthier for American business than the very condition through which we are now passing.

Slack Days Inevitable.

"It had to come. I only wish it had come sooner. The severer the storm is now the quicker it will be over and the sooner we can emerged into clear weather.

"The great need of the world today is to work hard and save. This applies not alone to the laboring man but to the man of means.

"The laboring man is entitled to his full share for the contribution he makes to the value of an article. The laboring man should be taken into the full confidence of his employers. He should be so sure of getting his fair share of the wealth he produces that he will work with zeal and enthusiasm.

For Government Economy.

"Economy in government expenditures is also of vital importance. We should expect and demand the same degree of efficiency in the conduct of our governmental business as we require in private business. Reckless expenditures necessitate higher taxes. These taxes increase prices, and higher prices curtail consumption."

"The whole world owes the United States money, and the whole world is hungry for the things the United States can supply," Mr. Schwab said in explaining that for lack of ability to sell to Europe through having insufficient credit available the value of farm products which Europe would like to buy had decreased billions of dollars.

Austria Would Sell Rare Tapestries to Buy Food

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Austrian chancellor again has brought to the notice of the allied governments, the desperate condition of Austria as regards foodstuffs, of which he says there is only sufficient to last the country until the end of December. To raise $4,000,000 to buy American flour, and as it is not forthcoming from any of the allies the Austrian government would sell rare tapestries.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11.

B. M. BARUCH, Daniel Willard, Alexander Legge, J. Leonard Replogle and others gathered here for the reunion of the war industries board today, predicted an early era of prosperity.

SENATOR WALSH of Montana introduced a resolution authorizing President Wilson to appoint an American delegate to the international disarmament conference. He said he considered it a misfortune that the United States should not be represented.

THE JOHNSON immigration bill went over by unanimous consent this afternoon until Monday, when a final vote will be taken.

A BILL imposing a general sales tax of 1 per cent was introduced by Representative Mott of New York, a Republican member of the house ways and means committee, as a substitute for the excess profits tax.

DISCUSSION of the resolution to revive the war finance corporation as a means of aiding in the financing of the exportation of agricultural products continued in the senate without final action being taken. Opposition developed to some features of the resolution.

A NEW HIGH RECORD for production of both bituminous and anthracite coal during 1920 was set during the week ended Dec. 4.

GERMANS RESENT ALLIED CURB ON SPEECH MAKING

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—The German press and people are aroused over the entente note prohibiting the German chancellor and foreign minister from making speeches in the occupied zones.

It is understood, from official sources, that France was painfully astonished by speeches made by Herr Fehrenbach and Herr Simon at Cologne, and in other towns which French, British, and American troops are holding. The entente requests no more oratory without submitting typewritten copies to the allies before government heads visit the areas again.

The Germans consider the Rhineland as being held in pawn by the entente. In other words, they believe that while it was fair in wartime to make use of captured property, in peacetime it is wrong for the pawnbroker to tinker with articles left in pawn.

The free speech prohibition follows closely on the notes regarding the destruction of Diesel motors and the turning over of milch cows to the entente. Each of these questions has come up within a month, and they have kept Germany thoroughly aroused.

JAP 'SOCIALISTS,' MOSTLY FLY COPS, ARE DISPERSED

TOKIO, Dec. 10.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—The first attempt to hold a massmeeting of Socialists representing all parts of Japan was broken up by the police today.

Five hundred persons attended the meeting, but of these about half were plain clothes policemen. In addition 200 policemen in uniform were present.

When the first speaker commenced his address an officer ordered the crowd to disperse and it obeyed, the Socialists singing revolutionary songs.

Ten of them were arrested and thirty were detained provisionally. Reports were in circulation yesterday that the Socialists had met privately and inaugurated the Socialist League of Japan.

700 A MINUTE FOR NEW GUN OF UNCLE SAM

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—Successful tests of a new machine gun firing half inch bullets and with at least double the range of the caliber .30 machine gun now in use was announced today by the war department. The new weapon gave "remarkable results," the statement declared.

John M. Browning, inventor of the Browning machine gun, used during the world war, collaborated with war department experts in development of the new gun. The tests demonstrated "unusual possibilities," the announcement said. Mechanical details were withheld, but it was stated the new weapon had a maximum rapidity of fire of 700 shots a minute and an efficient minimum of 400 shots a minute. The gun is water cooled and weighs about twice as much as the caliber .30 Browning.

Preliminary tests indicated that the gun was extremely accurate even at long ranges, the grouping of the shots being good and penetration satisfactory, the statement said, adding that defects encountered in the caliber .30 Browning had been to a large extent overcome.

Fritzi Scheff Sues for Divorce; Blames Liquor

MAJ. W. I. SHUMAN MARRIES Y.W.C.A. GIRL IN PARIS

Former Subtreasurer Will Return to U. S.

A romance of the battlefields whose tragic overtone has caused international discussion culminated yesterday at Paris with the marriage of Maj. W. Irving Shuman, formerly U. S. subtreasurer in Chicago, and Miss Mabel Salmon of Omaha, Neb.

W. IRVING SHUMAN

A cablegram from John Clayton of THE TRIBUNE Foreign News Service stated it was a simple home ceremony, that none was present save close friends of the couple, and that Maj. Shuman issued a post-wedding statement, which read:

"At this late date I have no explanation to make concerning my divorce. Miss Salmon's position concerning her acquaintance with the facts is best indicated by the fact that we were married today."

Said He Could Not Return.

This was interpreted as referring to a letter introduced as evidence by his former wife, Mrs. Pearl Shuman, 4521 North Whipple avenue, when she obtained her divorce last November. The letter was from Maj. Shuman and read that he could not again return to America because, "I am not as clean as I was when I entered the army."

Concerninbg allegations of nonsupport made by Mrs. Shuman, his statemet of yesterday read:

"I will declare that this charge is absolutely untrue. On two separate occasions I have settled with her the question of money and property and I am still paying a rather important alimony.

"On completion of my present work with the Polish mission it is my intention to return to America and take up commercial work at Washington."

Adviser to Poland.

Maj. Shuman went to France with the 86th division as a captain in 1918. After the armistice he was assigned to the liquidation commission, and after demobilization of the American forces he became commercial adviser to Ignace Paderewski, until Paderewski retired as Polish premier. Since then he has been with the Polish mission in Paris in an advisory capacity.

The bride met him in France while manager of a hostess house for the Y. W. C. A. Soon after the war ended she returned to her home in Omaha. No one suspected a romance until last October, when Miss Salmon announced her intention of returning to Europe to marry as soon as he obtained a divorce.

Her parents objected. John Salmon, a brother, went to New York to dissuade her. But she sailed on the Le Havre on Nov. 6.

Autoists Rejoice, Here's a Speed Cop Getting His

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 11.—A speed officer was indicted here for perjury today, the charge being that he swore in court a motorist had exceeded the speed limit when he had not. L. Bert Wayne of Venice was the defendant. The charge against him was that he recently swore that a local man had driven thirty miles an hour when the "speed trap" record clearly showed that he had traveled at less than twenty-five.

GERMANY BARS U. S. FILMS, BUT FANS LIKE 'EM

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—The war of German film producers against the widespread production of American made motion pictures which have been smuggled across the frontiers of Germany since the armistice was today carried before the ministers of finance and economics, who, on the request of the German concerns, directed the police authorities to prevent further exhibitions of the American pictures.

The German producers pointed out that Americans had succeeded in flooding the German market with thousands of feet of films, the majority of them several years old, which they sold so cheaply theatrical proprietors were able to exhibit them at only a fraction of the cost of German films, upon which royalties have to be paid.

The American pictures proved so popular in the provinces that the German producers complained they virtually were unable to sell their products so long as American films were obtainable.

The money, in new $20 bills, had been kept inviolate in the Moody home for sixteen years. Moody's widow, who became his second wife years after he set the money aside, will have to make good the loss.

Fraternity Boys Caught Swiping Evergreen Trees

Robert Logan, a student at Lake Forest college, and several of his brother members in the Digamma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, sallied forth yesterday to the Lake Forest lake front park and cast speculative eyes on the many evergreen trees thereabouts. The fraternity was to give a party and wanted decorations. The decorations were transferred from the trees to a wagon. Then a policeman took the wagon and boys to the station. They were allowed to go after a reprimand.

ANGRY U. S. REDS TRY TO BLOW UP RUSSIAN HOSTS

Now Enjoying Guest Cells in Moscow.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—Members of the party deported nearly a year ago on the "Soviet Ark" Buford with Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman have attempted to blow up officials of the Russian soviet government, according to information received today at the department of justice.

Two Are in Jail.

The advices said Marcus Orodwosky and Arthur Katjes were in jail at Moscow for attempting to plant bombs in a building occupied by the general executive committee of the soviet government there.

Schnabel, formerly head of the union of Russian workmen, the reports said, had been killed by the Japanese in Siberia while engaged in railroad work there.

One Is Press Agent.

Peter Branky was reported to have entered the ranks of the Communist party and to be associated with the international propaganda bureau at Petrograd. Hyman Perkins was said to be employed in Odessa, both the Schatz brothers in Kieff, Kushneroff working in the soviet bureau in Moscow, and Paul Kovaloff working on a tug boat near Petrograd.

GRAVE FAUX PAS IS COMMITTED BY GUATEMALAN AID

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Dr. Julio Bianchi, minister of Guatemala to the United States, will be called on by the state department for an explanation of his undiplomatic procedure in paying a visit yesterday to Senator Moses, foreign relations committee, in connection with a resolution which the senator had introduced on the preceding day asking the state department to explain this government's attitude toward the treatment accorded former President Estrada Cabrera by the new Guatemala government.

The state department necessarily must take cognizance of such a breach, but doubt was expressed in official quarters as to whether it would lead to a demand for the minister's recall. This post is the minister's first diplomatic experience.

An affair in which the minister was to have been one of the principal participants and which was to have been held at the Pan-American Union building tomorrow, has been called off, it was stated today.

This was the sending of the first through land wire message from Washington to Panama, made possible by the completion of a short stretch of telegraph wire along the Mexican-Guatemalan border.

HARDING TEST AS DIPLOMAT TO BE SEVERE

Will Confront Serious Foreign Problems.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—With the domestic economic situation calling for long delayed reconstruction measures of the highest order of statesmanship, President Elect Harding also faces one of the biggest diplomatic jobs that ever fell to the lot of a new administration. Here is a partial survey of the international problems he intends to tackle as soon as he assumes office:

1. Restoration of peace with Germany, settlement of war claims between Germany and the United States, including disposition of the $500,000,000 German property in the hands of the alien property custodian, and negotiation of new treaties of amity and commerce with Berlin.

Recognition of Russia.

2. Determination of attitude toward Russia, involving the question of recognition of the soviet government and the reopening of trade relations between the two countries.

3. Development of the Harding plan to invite other powers to a consideration of the preservation of world peace through an association of nations and an international court of justice.

4. Completion of negotiations for the refunding of the $12,000,000,000 allied debt to the United States into bonds of a stated period, including in the principal all interest in arrears and all interest accruing in the next two years which the allies are unable to pay.

Canal Tolls and Waterway.

5. Negotiation with Great Britain for a revision of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty which will permit the exemption of American ships from the payment of Panama canal tolls and negotiation with Canada for the creation of the lakes to the Atlantic waterway, also toll free.

6. Exclusion of the Japanese, either by termination of the existing treaty and legislation or by a new agreement with the Japanese government, in connection with which Senator Lodgo has proposed an alliance with Canada and Australia for the common defense from the yellow peril.

7. Negotiations with England for recognition of the rights of American oil development concerns in Mesopotamia and other mandate territories.

Protect Cable Rights.

8. Protection of American cable, radio, and commercial rights in the Pacific which are endangered by the aim of Japan to incorporate the former German islands in the North Pacific into the Nipponese empire, and thereby gain complete control of the Yap island cable and radio center.

9. Payment by Mexico of damages for the lives and property of Americans lost during the revolutionary period and the recognition of the rights of American oil and other investors.

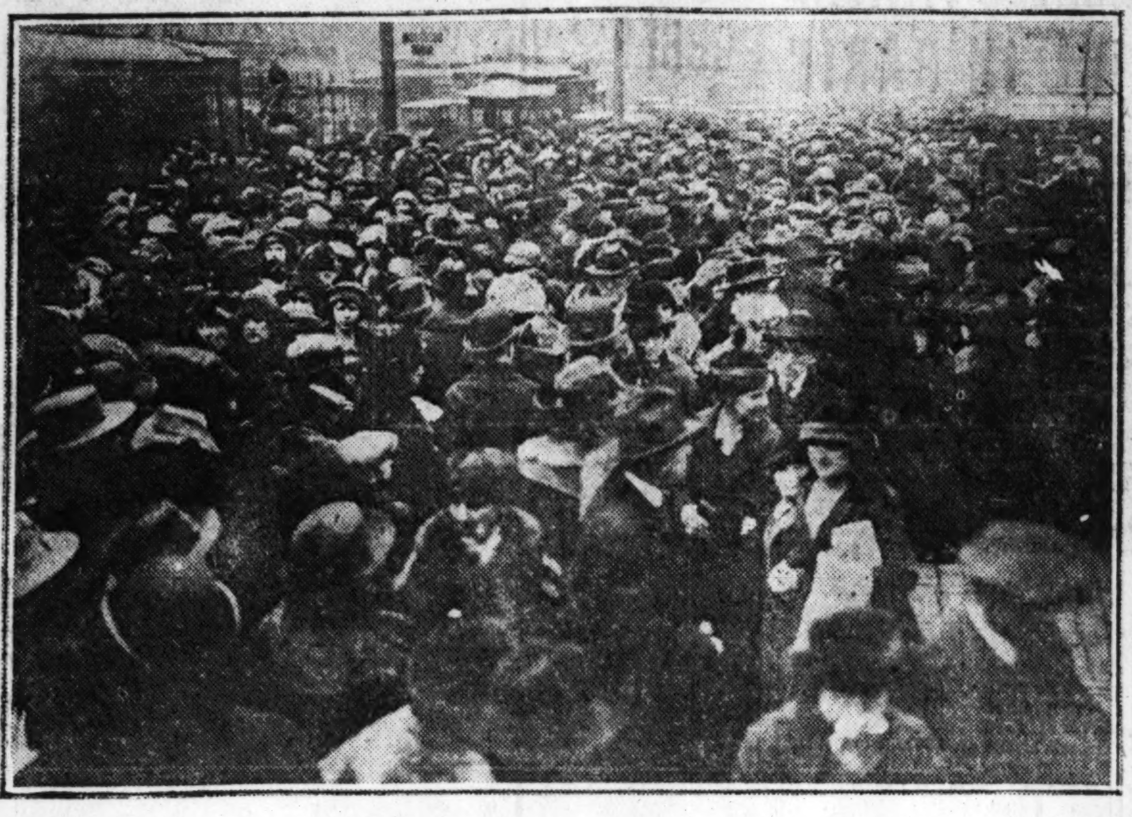
10. Reorganization of American supervision of Haiti and Santo Domingo with a view to early withdrawal of armed forces from those republics.

When President Elect Harding was here this week he made it clear that he had as yet no definite plan of procedure in regard to the conclusion of peace with Germany and the establishment of an association of nations and international court. He said he would not formulate any policy in this matter until he has concluded his consultation with the "best minds of the country," which he will continue at Marion until the latter part of January.

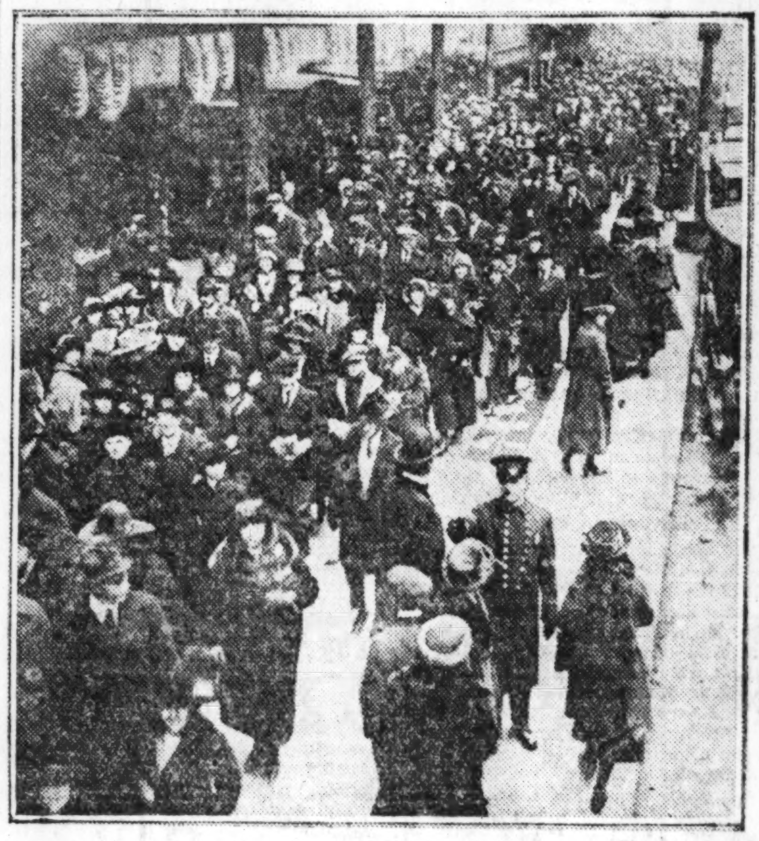
It is not without significance, however, that the closest advisers of the president elect contemplate the complete rejection of the Versailles treaty and Wilson league. They believe that peace will be reëstablished by a resolution similar to the Knox measure vetoed by President Wilson and that the United States never will become a party to the peace of Paris.

They also believe that Mr. Harding when he becomes president will make overtures to the powers looking to the establishment of an association of nations dedicated to the preservation of world peace, but devoid of the features of an alliance which dominate the Wilson convenant. It is believed not unlikely that the allies will counter with a proposition to modify the provisions of the Wilson covenant to suit the United States with a view to bringing this country into the present league.

PUZZLE: WHAT HOLIDAY IS NEARING?



Just half a second's glimpse through the camera's eye at the great crowds of Christmas shoppers that jammed the loop all day yesterday, as seen at State and Madison streets, the world's busiest corner. It won its right to the name all over again during the day.



More of the same, this time on State between Monroe and Adams streets. And they're all buying generously, but rather critically and with an eye to getting their full money's worth, merchants assert.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

We Whirl

AND now we whirl into the final two weeks of Christmas shopping. State and Madison streets—well, yesterday it looked as though the whole town had come down to stampede along these two arteries of trade and spend all its money in one grand splurge. The police thought so.

Loop merchants say the crowds apparently are going to be generous this year in their exchange of presents, but not lavish. They are going to scan the goods offered somewhat critically, that they may get the greatest worth for their money. At least, the proprietors declare, this is the prognostication based on what the clerks experienced yesterday.

There's only one more Saturday—one more pay day for the majority of workers—before Christmas, and if it's any worse than yesterday's affair, How do the police keep so good natured?

THIS IS 'LEAGUE' WEEK AT MARION; BRYAN IS CALLED

Harding Seeks Wide Range of Advice.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, O., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—William Jennings Bryan and Elihu Root will come to Marion next week at the invitation of President Elect Harding in order that he may seek through their minds to find some ground upon which American public opinion can be united in a foreign policy.

It would appear that Mr. Harding is searching for a definite international program or platform before he seeks the man to help him carry out that policy in the office of chief of his cabinet. Herbert Hoover will be here tomorrow to help in the same quest. Mr. Root will come next Monday and Mr. Bryan on Friday.

Above all things Mr. Harding seeks to lay a foundation at these conferences which will provide smooth political action at Washington when he assumes office and remove the possibility of a split in the party over the league issue at least.

Believes Common Ground Possible.

Mr. Harding said to newspaper men: "I am trying to find what middle ground on which we can unite American public opinion in the matter of foreign policies. I am desirous of talking not only with proleaguers, but with irreconciliables, those who would have America play her part in the world, and those who would have America retain her freedom. Between the two it would seem likely that we can find some middle viewpoint—possibly one that has not been brought out before, but one on which all shades of opinion agree. This may prove to be impracticable, but at the present time I do not think it is."

Mr. Harding said he intended to talk to about 100 persons on this subject. At the end of the conferences he intimated that an outline of the conclusions reached would be made public.

Delays Cabinet Plans.

Mr. Harding will not announce any cabinet selections for several weeks. His friends describe him as an "eleventh hour man" in matters of that kind. Nothing has occurred that would put Mr. Knox, Dr. David Jayne Hill, or Mr. Root himself out of the running. Mr. Harding had no new callers today. He was busy with the correspondence which accumulates rapidly.

Col. George Harvey is a house guest for the week-end. He says he has nothing to say to the public.

Former President Taft is expected next week.

Coolidge Coming Wednesday.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 11.—Gov. Calvin Coolidge, vice president elect, will go to Marion on Wednesday for a conference with Senator Warren G. Harding.

CLARA SMITH STILL MISSING; CLEWS BLOW UP

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—Applications for letters of administration on the Missouri estate of the late Jake L. VINCENT TELLS OF WORLD WAR ON YELLOW FEVER

"A League of Nations" for the purpose of stamping out yellow fever in Central and South America was described by Dr. George E. Vincent of New York, president of the Rockefeller foundation, at a dinner of the Industrial club of Chicago at the Blackstone hotel last night. He declared that the disease would soon be "stamped from the face of the world."

"The seed beds of yellow fever are largely confined to a few spots in Ecuador, Venezuela, Yucatan, and Brazil," he said. "This league of Central and South American countries had its beginning in the work of the late Gen. William C. Gorgas of canal zone fame.

"They have already reached a point in their work where nearly eighteen months of immunity have been experienced at Guayaquil, Ecuador, and there is reason to hope that the yellow fever will never again establish itself there."

JAPAN REFUSES TO CURTAIL HER NAVAL PROGRAM

League's Disarming Plan Gets Rude Jolt.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—Japan will continue her intensive naval construction program this year, and next year and possibly in 1922.

Viscount Ishii, Japanese ambassador to Paris, this morning warned commission No. 6 that he could not consent to any proposal dealing with the limitation or reduction of armaments. His remarks contained a direct reference to the United States.

Viscount Ishii said:

"The Japanese empire cannot be a party to any plan for disarmament while a greater power remains outside the league and, accordingly, is not included in the disarmament scheme. "Japan intends to go ahead with her naval program this year and next. It is possible that, if all nations in the world reach an agreement as to limitation of armaments, Japan might be willing to modify her building program for 1922."

Holds Up Assembly.

Viscount Ishii's attitude threatened for a time to blockade proceedings today until Lord Robert Cecil reminded him that any decision taken by the disarmament commission was not binding upon any member of the league.

By a vote of 27 to 4, the assembly tonight voted a "recommendation," instead of direct instructions, that Asia be assured of a seat in the election of four nonpermanent members of the council. This action was taken after Mr. Balfour pleaded for some agreement in order to permit the election to take place and thus wind up the sessions.

Japan voted in favor of China on this ballot. Italy, Sweden, Holland, and Switzerland voted against her.

Australia Jolts Assembly.

Earlier in the day Edward Davis Millen of Australia astounded the assembly by pointing out that the covenant did not provide any machinery for the election of nonpermanent members and made a motion that the present members be retained for one year and that the matter be referred to the international court of justice when it starts to function for a rule as to porcedure.

There was considerable opposition from the Latin America group and the neutrals, but, when Dr. Wellington Koo came to the rescue with an amendment stating that the recommendation would be valid only for one year, it was passed in that form.

Expect United States Visitor.

Interest is keen among the league delegates over the arrival of Senator McCormick of Chicago in Geneva tomorrow morning. Arrangements already have been made for the senator to meet Mr. Balfour, Lord Robert Cecil, Leon Bourgeois, M. W. Rowell, Edward Millen, Ingace Paderewski, Edouard Benes, Dr. Wellington Koo, and Viscount Ishii.

The delegates from South American republics are particularly anxious to converse with Senator McCormick to find out if it is his opinion that the American official view will support the withdrawal of Argentina.

The delegates are chiefly hopeful, however, of hearing from the senator some details of the proposed conference in the United States for the establishment of a new association of nations.

The British are anxious to learn what changes the new American administration will demand in the covenant.

WANTS WILSON TO ACT.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Senator Walsh of Montana, Democrat, introduced a resolution in the senate today authorizing President Wilson to appoint a delegate to represent the United States in the International disarmament conference recently arranged under the auspices of the league of nations. At the suggestion of Senator Lodge, Republican leader, the resolution was referred to the foreign relations committee.

"We are advised," Senator Walsh said, "that the estimates for the army and navy amount to the almost inconceivable sum of $1,500,000,000. It is an easy step to the conclusion that we do not wish to participate because we do not wish to reduce armaments. From that it is but another step to the conclusion that we want heavy armaments because we have imperialistic designs."

STRAIT LACED MONACO WANTS SEAT IN LEAGUE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—The question of admitting Monaco to the league of nations promises to arouse a bitter fight between certain nations interested in camouflaging their concern and those objecting to the gambling there and a world wide religious campaign on the subject is threatened.

Hoping to stave off the objections, the prince of Monaco has promised to close the gaming rooms as soon as employment can be found in the principality for the thousands of casino employés. He is considering coöperation with the Swiss government in the construction of a railway line from Switzerland to Monaco, thus giving the former nation a seaport.

Switzerland is backing the proposition, and it hopes to have the proposed railway placed under the protection of the league of nations, thus assuring their independence from the Italians.

The French object to closing the gambling houses because they collect revenue from Monte Carlo winnings, and the Italians, French, Belgians, and Dutch oppose Monaco becoming a Swiss port because Switzerland is now obliged to use foreign railways or the Rhine to the sea.

C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—The appeal of the Economy Light and Power company from an injunction secured by the state of Illinois in conjunction with the federal authorities restraining it from completing a power dam at Dresden Heights, on the Desplaines river, near Joliet, will come before the Supreme court Monday.

Air of Culture Here

An odd atmospher of culture and refinement commingled with evidences of a gayer Epicurean existence pervaded the tastefully appointed apartment at 1340 North Dearborn street in which Mrs. Minnie Viola Reynolds, widow of Crosbie Aylsworth Reynolds, wealthy coal dealer, was found asphyxiated yesterday. Empty whisky bottles shared with handsomely bound tomes the various shelves. Upon the dining room table near which the woman's body lay was a card she evidently had placed there before the gas fumes overcame her. Upon it was printed this verse:

Who wants a baby—a baby to love?
Won't some one volunteer to be my Daddy dear
'Cause I'm so lonesome all by my ownsome?
In some Daddy's arms I'll find true love and charms.
Who'll hear my plea? Who wants a lonesome little baby just like me?

On another table lay a pamphlet labeled, "Comforting Words," in which scattering scriptural passages had been underlined:

"When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up . . . For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure it at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith . . ."

There were pictures of men, a piece of paper torn from a cigar box on which had been scribbled in pencil a map of the Forty-second street section of New York; many telegrams signed "H. C. May"; a typewrittene copy of a philosophical treatise supporting the immortality of the soul from the basis of reason; a Christian Science book, a Bible, post cards and a marriage certificate showing that Minnie Viola Milliken had been married to A. C. Reynolds at Crown Point, Ind., on Feb. 22, 1913.

IS LEAGUE DEAD? WELL, IT'S PUNY, PERTINAX SAYS

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, Dec. 11.—"Is the league of nations on its deathbed?" is a question asked by Pertinax in the Echo de Paris today. In the first paragraph he practically answers it in the affirmative.

"We never had any doubts about its final fate, but we thought that for some years it would linger on somehow like the old Hague tribunal. Today, however, one may ask whether the league is not going to pass away within a brief interval?"

"While the league was talking, Moscow acted," Pertinax says.

Pertinax is no less severe towards the league plan for economic blockade, which he dismisses as impracticable.

"The blockade instituted by France, England and America," he cries, "in a death struggle against a common foe was only established after immense preparation and delays and at the price of most daring interference with the internal affairs of neutrals. In short, that blockade was made possible only by a state of war.

"America seems decided to reject the covenant in all its aspects. Soon we shall be forced to choose—either we shall transform the league into a mere executive organization of the Versailles treaty, or we shall see the United States become the center of the final association which surely will not lack adherents."

CHINA PROBLEM A WORLD PROBLEM, DR. KOO ASSERTS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—Dr. Wellington Koo, in an address to newspaper correspondents last night, warned that Chinese problems are world problems.

"A great deal depends on how the Chinese problems are solved and upon whether China is allowed to work out her own salvation, free from restrictions and obstructions from the outside.

"We have a great people, great natural resources, and immense reserves of man power. China wants to utilize these for the peace of the world, but these same assets might be utilized, if caution were not taken, for purposes alien to the highest aims of the league.

"Shall we leave China free to contribute to the world's happiness? Or shall we leave her with her hands tied?

"China is confident that the league will help her pursue her tasks in complete freedom."

LACK OF NICKEL COSTS LIFE OF ROBBERS' VICTIM

Shot; Cash Gone; No Phone Coin to Call Aid.

JOHN BUDZ.

Half an hour after he had cautioned his bartender never to resist holdup men, John Budz, a saloonkeeper at 4408 South Ashland avenue, was himself shot and killed by one of a trio of robbers.

Budz was in a rear room of the saloon, called the Mountaineer's Club, when the bandits entered. Tony Mrozak, the bartender, was behind the bar.

"Throw up your hands," said one of the robbers, pointing a revolver at the bartender. Another of the thieves ran behind the bar and began to empty the register. The other man stood at the end of the bar with revolver in hand.

Fights Robber; Is Slain.

Budz heard the commotion and came from the rear room. He seized the man at the end of the bar and attempted to wrest the revolver from him. A shot was fired and the bullet struck Budz in the right leg below the knee.

The man at the cash register grabbed the contents and shouted to his pals, "Come on." They fled north in Ashland avenue.

Budz was so excited he did not know he had been shot. The bartender saw a pool of blood on the floor. He tried to telephone the police, but the robbers had taken every nickel from the register. The delay in procuring medical attention cost the saloonkeeper's life.

Hunt Thieves All Night.

Lieut. John Norton and his squad from the detective bureau arrived as the police of the New City station were carrying the body away. Capt. Matt Zimmer also was on the scene early. The hunt for the bandits, all of whom are described as being young, continued throughout the night.

COLD FEET LOST MARNE BATTLE, GERMAN CLAIMS

General Staff Veteran Blames Two Men.

BY PARKE BROWN.
[Former Berlin Correspondent of The Tribune.]

To the "cold feet" of two men Germany owes the loss of the first battle of the Marne—known in Paris as the "Marne miracle" and in Berlin as the "Marne catastrophe."

This is the verdict of Lieut. Gen. Keim, general staff veteran, based upon a close study and analysis not only of the official records but of the several works written upon this subject by participants in the battle—the books of Von Kluck, former Minister of War Stein, Baumgarten-Crusius, and Von Francis, and Von Buelow's own attempt to explain the sudden order for retreat.

While he, like most other military writers in Germany, says that if Germany had had on the west front the three extra army corps proposed vainly by the general staff in the 1913 budget the capture of Paris would have been certain, Gen. Keim insists that the Germans still could have won had not Von Buelow, commander of the Second army, become panicky and infected with his fright Lieut. Col. Hentsch, the plenipotentiary of the general staff who issued the order for retreat.

Not Due to French.

"Naturally," said Gen. Keim, "the French claim that the decisive turn in the war was due alone to the courage of their troops and the ability of their leaders. But the truth is far different and the time has come to make it plain since now we have official French reports and the several versions of the German army leaders.

"Toward the end of August, 1914, the French and English power of resistance was almost exhausted while the plan of the German troops had not diminished, but, on the contrary, improved. The supreme command and the army leaders still favored attacking.

"General Joffre operated cleverly and attempted a flank attack against the First army under Von Kluck on the right, but this ended in a defeat on Aug. 31. And the new grouping of the French, completed on Sept. 4, did not change the tide of battle except for some local successes for the French.

When Catastrophe Threatened.

'The French reports state: 'On the evening of Sept. 8 it became clear that our movement toward the east had not been successful. Instead of going around the German right wing we were left in a position where we had to guard against being encircled by the Germans.' Their Fourth army corps, which had been sent to the rescue, had to withdraw late in the evening and there was general anxiety for the following morning.

"Thanks to the adroit, energetic advance of the German First army, we had overrun the enemy in all the so-called battles of the Ourcq north of the Marne. On the 9th the encircling attack was to be continued to roll back the French right wing. This threatened the whole French position behind the Marne and a catastrophe seemed extremely likely.

"The Second army under Von Buelow had defeated the enemy all along the line; but, in spite of this, that army began retreating the afternoon of Sept. 9. Here is the key to the Marne mystery which I shall return to later.

Three Armies Plan to Attack.

"The Third army under Von Hausen had successfully attacked on Sept. 8 and the French reports considered the position of their troops on that part of the line as 'not encouraging.' On the 9th Von Hausen intended to continue attacking.

"The Fourth army under Prince Albrecht of Wuerttemberg successfully defended itself in several engagements and was preparing an attack for Sept. 10.

"The Fifth army, commanded by the German crown prince, was planning an attack along its whole section of the front for Sept. 9.

"The Sixth and Seventh armies were engaged in steady fighting in the Vosges. The French had massed strong forces against them, withdrawing them from the front toward the Marne. For that reason the Germans were forming a new Seventh army to march toward the Marne.

"These facts show that, from both the tactical and operating standpoint, the German situation was a favorable one. Then, like a flash from a clear sky, came the order for retreat which lasted days and during which even Reims was abandoned.

Retreat Veiled in Mystery.

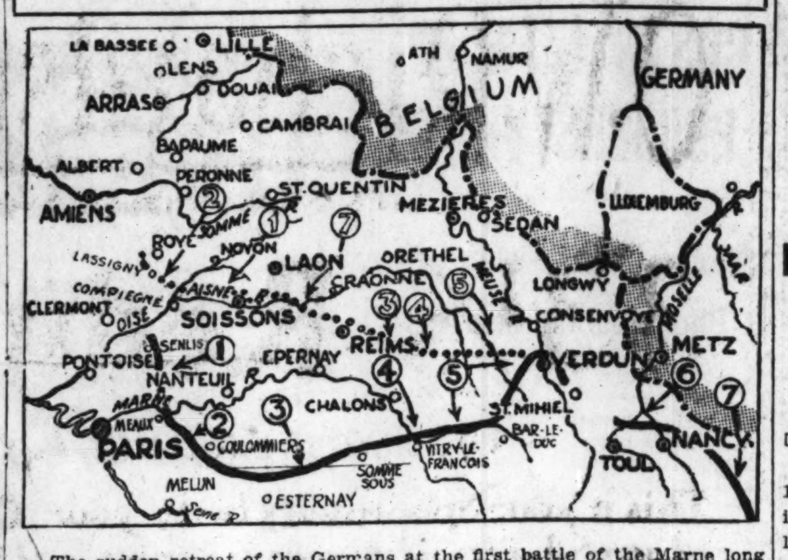
"For years there was a veil of mystery maintained around this tragedy. Until last year the general opinion prevailed that an over-rapid advance by the First army together with tactical setbacks had forced the retreat. Then General Stein, at that time quartermaster general and later minister of war, published his memoirs. But he had little to say about the Marne. General Baumgarten-Crusius also published a book upon the work of the Third army at the Marne and, using official documents, submitted evidence that the nervousness of General von Buelow, who commanded also the First and the Third armies and was constantly demanding reinforcements, and the order for the retreat issued by Lieut. Col. Hentsch, who was on the spot as the representative of the supreme command, were the causes of the terrible development on Sept. 9."

The general went further with his study of the facts and came to the justified conclusion that bad politics, by failing to strengthen the German army sufficiently in peace times, was the indirect cause of the failure of the commander of the Second army as well as that of the supreme command.

High Command Too Far Away.

"That this failure was not due directly to the military position of the Germans on the Marne, which was much better than that of the French," Gen. Keim continues, "was proven clearly in the book written by von Kluck of the First army and that of von Hausen of the Third army. The third participant in the central tragedy, von Buelow, also expressed himself; but a conscientious, impartial military critic must refuse to accept the reasons given by him in attempting to justify the retreat. The supreme command has remained silent, but it also is guilty, as it did not bring general headquarters up nearer the front and give its orders from there as was done in 1870 at St. Privat and Sedan. It was due to this error that the orders did not fit the constantly changing situation. The chief of the general staff himself should have been on the spot when serious decisions were to be made. Instead, the supreme command sent to the front a staff officer with unlimited powers who permitted himself to be influenced by the gloomy views of General von Buelow. This act of the supreme command cannot be forgiven."

WHERE THE GERMANS TURNED BACK



The sudden retreat of the Germans at the first battle of the Marne long was a mystery. The French called the "Marne miracle," but to the Germans it was the "Marne catastrophe."

SIX FAMILIES FLEE FROM FIRE; ONE MAN RESCUED

Six families were driven from their homes early yesterday when fire started in the basement of the four story building at 1157 West Eighteenth street, where they lived. Charles Arendt was overcome by the dense smoke and was carried to safety by members of truck company No. 12. He was revived by the ambulance physician of the Maxwell street station. The fire caused damage estimated at $5,000.

The blaze is believed to have started in the basement of the building and spread to the first floor, occupied by a saloon owned by Frank Pinnar, also owner of the building.

15,000,000 TO PERISH IN CHINA DESPITE RELIEF

Famine Committees Can Aid Only 500,000.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKIN, Dec. 11.—A minimum of 15,000,000 people will die of starvation in China this winter. Efforts of relief committees, missionaries, the American Red Cross, and government projects can save but 500,000.

This conclusion was reached today at a session in Pekin of the representatives of all the relief societies. Blame for this condition was placed squarely on the shoulders of the present tottering government.

Even if Gen. Chang Tsolin succeeds in the approaching election, as seems likely, it means the increased power of the military and lessens the chances of the present government to extend relief. The rival republic set up in the south by Sun Yat Sen and Wu Ting Fang only complicates the situation.

Urge Outside Influence.

Parliament has been dissolved and new elections ordered so the entire official mind is fixed on politics and money and it is extremely difficult to get the cabinet to focus attention on relief for the sufferers. Outside effort is needed, not only to save the best of China's population, but also to bring moral prssure on the cabinet to do something before it is too late, it was decided.

Already north China is covered with a blanket of snow and the last green stuff has been consumed. Deaths from starvation actually are occurring but the real pinch is a month off.

Plough Wheat; Sow Opium.

W. P. Mills of the Hankow Y. M. C. A. and Missionary Shields, both working in Shensi, report that wheat is being ploughed up and the forbidden poppy seed sown, in violation of the protocol, by clandestine orders of the government. This is a section where very little outside aid is possible. Father Jamin reports from Manshenhsin that 4,800 pounds of government wheat have been received as the county's grant, but it was so distributed by the officials as to make the distribution worthless.

In another county the relief was distributed from the city wall and when the crowd had dispersed after the mad scramble for the few handsful thrown them eighteen corpses were found on the ground.

Workers Discouraged.

There are twenty-four Chinese relief committees which originally had representatives attending the international famine relief meetings at Pekin, but one by one they dropped out as so little money was coming in.

The chief of these committees is headed by Liang Shih Yi, who aspires to the presidency. He has raised $700,000, but political opponents say this is only a campaign fund. This Liang denies and Admiral Tsai says he believes Liang sincere, though many think otherwise. Tsai, who is a Yale graduate and is otherwise Americanized, is able to view the situation from an American viewpoint. He favors only foreign direction for the famine relief.

It will be produced under direction of Robert Stevenson and Miss Ellen Osgood. They will enact the leading parts, Tony and Nanette. The other "leads" are Catherine Roberts and George Groendyke. All except Miss Roberts attend the Hyde Park High school. The chorus will contain more than forty young people.

U. S. KEEPS WARY EYE ON MEXICO'S OIL CONCESSIONS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—State department officials today made it clear that the United States is not planning to leave American interests in Mexico to be despoiled as a result of the concessions granted during the last days of the De la Huerta régime.

It was said authoritatively today that a thorough investigation and report have been ordered. The situation was one of the subjects of discussion at the White House today during Acting Secretary of State Davis' conference with the president this morning.

The fact that British oil companies have been the chief beneficiaries of the wholesale concessions is not taken to involve the British government in any way, it was said at the department.

Heretofore, the British government has been in close harmony with the United States government on matters relating to Mexico, both being actuated by a desire to obtain protection of their nationals' lives and interests.

SMALLPOX GERM HUNT IN EATING PLACES ORDERED

Severe measures to stop the spread of smallpox in Chicago were planned yesterday by Health Commissioner Robertson. One of the first steps taken was issuance of an order for the inspection of "suspicious" restaurants and the examination of employés therein.

Dr. Robertson ordered the closing of a restaurant operated by Hanvouras & Denetis at 2535 North Kedzie avenue following the refusal of Peter Hanvouras to allow inspectors to examine him and his employés.

The examination of 6,327 pupils in six public schools of the congested neighborhoods will begin tomorrow.

SALESMAN WANTED

One of our clients requires a high class salesman to sell a nationally advertised specialty to the wholesale drug and dry goods trade, also to large retail stores; a man with thorough appreciation of the value of advertising and who can tell his story to a buyer rather than have the buyer tell his story to him. The product is universally used, better, and sells for less than competitive brands.

If you have more than average intelligence, can enthuse readily, and are between the ages of 25 and 45, we would like to talk to you. We do not want to talk to job hunters—this is an exceptional opportunity for a good man already in a good place to better himself by an affiliation with the largest corporation of its kind.

Write us a letter briefly outlining your qualifications, giving age, experience, present salary and salary you will require, also the names of three business references who will not be referred to until after the interview. Give mail address and telephone number. Do not come for an interview unless requested.

RAIDERS SEIZE 'KICK' FOR MANY CHRISTMAS PIES

Find 1,008 Bottles of Choice Brandy.

A raid last night on the wholesale liquor house of Leopold B. Schulhof, Grace street, netted Prohibition Director Richardson's men 1,008 bottles of choice brandy valued at approximately $25,000.

"I don't see why you should touch that," Schulhof told the raiding party; "a friend just left it with me for a few days."

"Must have been a very dear friend to leave that much high class liquor with anybody in these dry times," was the reply.

Schulhof has a wholesale permit, but his books showed no record of having received the supply, which consisted of forty-eight bottles packed in each of twenty-one barrels. He is said to have been interested in whisky deals with the proprietors of the Rainbo gardens, one of whom, Frederick Mann, is under indictment for liquor violations.

Will "Quarantine" Saloons.

Hundreds of saloons and cabarets will blossom out tomorrow with flaming red and yellow signs on their windows telling the world that "liquor must not be purchased within," according to an announcement made by the district attorney.

"There," he said, pointing to a great yellow sign, "is what I consider the solar plexus blow for saloons and cabarets. I'm going to plaster signs like that on every saloon and cabaret as fast as Judge Landis issues orders restraining the proprietors from selling booze. I'm going to put 'em all in quarantine."

"Beware" Is Admonition.

"Beware" in letters two feet high is the first word to catch the attention. Immediately beneath this the world is informed that the saloon on which this sign has been pasted has disobeyed the law and has been enjoined from selling liquor. The final sentence reads:

"Any person purchasing liquor here is subject to prosecution along with the owner of the saloon. Do not buy your drinks here."

FROLICS IN SCHOOL PLAY

TWENTY-FIVE comely members of the junior class of the Chicago Normal School of Physical Education appeared in three playlets last night in the school gymnasium at 430 South Wabash avenue. Many fancy dances also were given. The girls designed and made their own costumes and the scenery and stage settings were also the work of school members.

The proceeds will be used to buy new equipment for the English department.

3 PLAY INDIANS BURN $2,000 HAY STACK IN GAME

Three boys playing "Cowboy and Indian" on a hay stack belonging to John Evens, a farmer living just outside of Evanston, accidently started a fire yesterday which resulted in the destruction of the hay stack and a wooden shelter, the combined value of which was $2,000. The boys are: George Long, 1421 Darrow avenue; Jerome Harse, 1418 Darrow avenue, and Svend Hansson, 1417 Darrow avenue, all of Evanston.

They had to "explore" a cave near the drainage canal and were returning home when one of them suggested the wild west game. The others assented eagerly and one of the boys was tied to a post on top of the shelter covering the hay stack.

Jerome Harse then produced a toy gun in which matches were used as ammunition, and fired several "shots" at the "prisoner."

In a few moments the boys noticed smoke issuing from the stack and started to run. Evens captured them.

"Well, don't be too harsh," said the chief. "Boys will be boys."

Coroner's Jury Exonerates Policeman Who Killed Foe

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of justifiable homicide in the case of William Holland of 2124 South State street, who was shot and killed by Detective Sergeant Sidney Williams of the Cottage Grove avenue police on Friday night in a restaurant at 2842 South Dearborn street.

LAWYER TO SEEK STAY IN HANGING OF GENE GEARY

A motion to stay the execution of "Gene" Geary, sentenced to be hanged next Friday for the murder of Harry Reckas in a south side saloon several months ago, will be made tomorrow before Judge Joseph Sabath. Attorney Thomas Nash has served notice on State's Attorney Crowe that he will ask a stay on the ground he intends to make an appeal to the Supreme court.

Geary was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged by a jury in Judge Sabath's court three months ago. Geary's attorney said the court did not allow enough time for the defendant to prepare his case for the higher court.

"The date of the hanging was set too early," he declared. "I intend to appeal, but first I must have a stenographic record of the proceedings, with the signatures of the judge and the state's attorney affixed. They have yet to sign the documents. Until they do, I cannot take the case higher. Therefore, a stay must issue."

State's Attorney Crowe declared he would oppose the motion and had requested the law firm of John Prystalski and James C. O'Brien to represent the state. As former assistant state's attorneys they obtained Geary's conviction.

U. S. GRAND JURY INDICTS 105, ASKS DRY ACT REPEAL

Volstead Law Menace to Nation, It Says.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 11.—Repeal or modification of the "present drastic prohibition laws," was asked in a resolution unanimously adopted by the federal grand jury here which indicted 105 persons charged with violation of liquor laws.

The jury, in its report, attacks the Volstead act as having defeated the real purpose of prohibition by having caused conditions which are a menace to the "physical wellbeing of both the present and next generations."

The liquor situation in Wisconsin was characterized as deplorable. Wisconsin congressmen are expected to receive copies of the recommendations on Monday. Bills legalizing mild wines are expected to be introduced in congress immediately as a result.

Moonshiners Are Busy.

In its report the jury declared it found moonshining "prevalent everywhere, both in the cities and in the country, some of the fluid being absolutely poisonous and all detrimental to health."

The jury, which investigated the liquor situation in this federal district for six weeks and questioned hundreds of witnesses, quizzed the liquor situation from bootleggers to an alleged "million dollar whisky ring," said to have operated in Milwaukee and Chicago and cities along the shores of Lake Michigan. The action of the jury was taken here as an acknowledgment that prohibition had failed and that a strong move would develop to modify or repeal the existing law.

Wisconsin Law Liberal.

Wisconsin is one of the few states having a law allowing manufacture and sale of beverages with an alcoholic content greater than allowed under the Volstead act, which has been rendered inoperative by national prohibition.

Copies of the resolution of the grand jury have been sent to members of the Wisconsin congressional delegation.

Hoover Issues Appeal to Feed Europe's Children

Herbert Hoover, chairman of the European relief council, yesterday issued an appeal to churches of all denominations to observe Sunday, Dec. 19, as national collection day and take part in the campaign which will then be launched to raise $33,000,000 as America's Christmas gift to the children of Europe. The campaign will extend over the holidays, collections being made in all public places and through various civic organizations.

SHURTLEFF SAYS GIVE CHICAGO A FAIR COURT DEAL

"I believe that Cook county should have a larger representation in the Supreme court," said Edward B. Shurtleff of Marengo, speaker of the Illinois legislature for ten years, in a short speech before members and delegates of eleven county bar associations and one city bar association in the Sixth judicial district of Illinois gathered in Aurora yesterday.

"I believe that in at least one house the 101 counties of the state outside of Cook county should have two-thirds of the representation," he continued in discussing the constitutional convention's actions. "No one county can make the laws for the other 101. But inasmuch as most of the lawsuits in the state come from Cook county, it seems to me that that county should have fair representation on the Supreme bench."

The constitutional convention has adopted a basic law provision which limits Cook county to minority representation in both branches of the legislature and to two of the seven judges of the Supreme court.

$23,000,000 GOB WISHES TO QUIT 'SEA' FOR MIDAIR

Plans Airplane Factory if He's Released.

Life on the bounding main of the Great Lakes Naval Training station is not in consonance with the ambitions of George C. T. Remington. He will gladly renounce his salary of $40 a month if they'll only let him break out of the navy.

Heir to $23,000,000.

Gob Remington, who by the way is heir to a $23,000,000 estate, has been unable to convince Secretary Josephus Daniels that our fleet could make the world safe for democracy without his presence. He desires to embark in the airplane industry and figures in any event his income as a private citizen will enable him to make ends meet if his navy pay stops.

Tentative plans have been drawn for a factory at Dixon, Ill., where Remington and Capt. L. C. Cox, formerly of the British royal flying corps, who is accredited with 2,000 flying hours in France, will be partners.

A Furlough Will Do.

Remington enlisted to learn aviation, believing he would experience no difficulty in obtaining a discharge when he had completed his education. He is the son of Mrs. W. Schuyler Volkmar of New Haven, Conn., who now lives in Lake Forest to be near him. Last September he married Miss Beatrice Clarke.

If he can't get a discharge he will petition for a furlough.

Draft Ordinance to Stop Gambling in Pool Halls

SORORITY ALUMNI ORGANIZE.

10 CANDIDATES FOR SPEAKER OF ILLINOIS HOUSE

Deadlock Feared as Time for Caucus Nears.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Ten candidates now make up the field of active starters for the speakership of the Illinois house of representatives. The ten does not include David E. Shanahan, who has been speaker for the last three sessions, nor does it include any Chicago candidate who may be put forward by the city hall Republicans.

The announcement yesterday from Charles L. McMackin of Salem that he is to be considered in the going brought the total of actual contenders to ten as follows:

Homer J. Tice, of Menard county.
William P. Holaday, of Vermilion county.
Charles W. La Porte, of Peoria county.
Randolph Boyd, of Henry county.
Norman G. Fagg, of Madison county.
William R. McCabe, of Will county.
Charles A. Gregory, of Piatt county.
William M. Scanlan, of La Salle county.
James A. Watson, of Hardin county.
Charles L. McMackin, of Marion county.

None Near a Majority.

Extensive claims have been made in behalf of most of the foregoing as to pledged strength, but it is easily apparent that no one of the ten has anything that resembles a controlling majority of the forthcoming Republican caucus.

The caucus, which will be called by State Chairman Frank L. Smith, will be held in Springfield probably on the night of Jan. 4, the general assembly convening on Wednesday, Jan. 5. The caucus will consist of ninety-five members, of which twenty-four are from Chicago affiliated with the city hall organization.

City Hall to Keep Hands Off.

Acting on the advice of Fred Lundin the city hall policy is to keep hands off of the speakership for the present at least. No City Hall representative, as far as known, is tied to any candidate and no member of the Cook county delegation responsible to the Thompson-Lundin combination will be an active candidate, except as a dark horse possibility when the caucus assembles.

Governor Elect Len Small has taken no hand and no candidate has been able to get an expression of opinion from the two Republican house members from the Kankakee district. It is said they are remaining neutral so that no partiality can be charged to Mr. Small.

Prospects of a speakership deadlock have caused some worry as to whether the inauguration of Mr. Small and the new state officers can be had on the regularly scheduled date, Jan. 10. It is necessary that a speaker be elected before the vote can be canvassed and the governor inaugurated. In 1913, Gov. Dunne didn't take office until February because of the speakership tie-up.

GENEVA "ESCAPES" WALK TO CHICAGO; EXPECT "DARK HOLE"

Mabel Turner, 18, and Mabel Tallman, 18, are going back to the State Training School for Girls at Geneva, Ill., today, after three days' liberty they gained by effecting a thrilling escape from the matrons and "trust" guards. They expect to go to the "cell," which, they say, is a dark hole, where the food is bread and water, but they declare they have had a good time while they have been free. They were arrested here after exhaustion from their long walk from Geneva, during which they slept in barns and obtained food wherever they could, had compelled them to stop. On their arrival in Chicago, they said, they met a gang of rowdies, who mistreated them after promising to get them jobs.

The girls admit they do not take kindly to restraint and at various times have been subjected to all the punishments of the institution, even the "cell." Recently, with Mary Canfield, another inmate, they decided to escape. According to their story, they grabbed a matron's keys from a table, locked her and the guards in a room, and fled. The hue and cry was soon raised, but they outran their pursuers.

JAPAN REACHING TO GRIP SIBERIA, VANDERLIP SAYS

He Claims Three Billion Pact with Lenin.

New York, Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Washington B. Vanderlip, California promoter, whose presence in Russia got so much publicity, returned today. Asked if he went there with a letter from President Elect Harding, he replied: "That's my business." He added, however, that he carried no letter to Lenin or the soviet government.

Would Act for Soviets.

Mr. Vanderlip negotiated two contracts with the soviet government, one a $3,000,000,000 grant covering the resources of Kamschatka for sixty years. By the other the syndicate will act as American fiscal agent for the soviet government. He denied he had been "dropped" by British bankers. He said he never had asked their aid.

"During my final days in London I received a definite offer for the purchase of a one-half in the syndicate concession," he said. "Not only that, but in London offers were made to me by responsible persons to underwrite the entire enterprise."

"Two-thirds of the officials of the soviet government are men who have been exiled to Siberia under the czar's régime," Mr. Vanderlip declared.

Few of Officials Are Jews.

"My business brought me into contact with the political council, the technical council, and the export and import council. Except Trotzky, Litvinoff, and Kamineff, I met not a single Jew among them.

"The entire Pacific coast region of Siberia is being held or claimed by Japan," he added. "Japan produced only 2,000,000 barrels of the 17,000,000 barrels annual petroleum production of Asia; that is why Japan is making such desperate efforts to get and keep Siberia."

THREE MILLION ITALIANS EAGER TO REACH U. S.

Besiege Consulates for Passport Vises.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MILAN, Dec. 11.—Three million Italians are awaiting visés and transportation to America. United States consulates throughout the country are overwhelmed with work and the long lines of those desiring to purchase steamer tickets stretch for blocks outside the principal agencies on days when steerage and third class tickets are put on sale.

In relation to the population the greatest number of these are from Sicily. The consulate at Palermo is handling several hundred applications daily. Many more would apply but for a ruling that steamer reservations must be made before visés will be granted. The great bulk of the Italian emigration is from the south.

Mostly Farm Laborers.

Practically 90 per cent of those desiring to sail for America are agricultural laborers. The consulates which handle most of the applications from the north of Italy—Milan and Turin—are averaging about fifty applications a day. Genoa handles another fifty daily and Florence slightly less.

Only a small proportion of these prospective Americans are industrial workers despite the fact that they come from the great Italian industrial centers. There seems little prospect that the steamship lines will be able to transport more than one-third of the traffic which is offered them for the coming year.

Consulates Call Halt.

Since Jan. 1, 1920, they have transported approximately 500,000 Italians most of whom went to the United States, other emigration being to South America, Africa, and Europe. All steamship accommodations have been reserved from now until the late spring. Accordingly the consulates will refuse visés until such time as further reservations are possible.

The Italian government sees in this great overflow of man power a possible source of obtaining raw materials and contracts which will aid the government in placing the nation's industry on a better footing. As long ago as last September plans were announced whereby the government was trying out an exchange scheme. Several consignments of Italian laborers were sent to France in return for guarantees for delivery of so many tons of coal yearly. When this disclosure was made recently by Dante Ferraris, Italian minister of industry, it attracted great attention.

However, the government is still investigating the possibilities of extending this scheme and working out its ramifications. The radical elements oppose this measure, declaring that its application would make of emigrants little less than slaves in the countries to which they were sent.

AMERICAN COAL FIRMS FACE BIG LOSS IN FRANCE

Canceled Contracts Will Total $100,000,000.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Dec. 11.—French coal buyers have cancelled contracts made with a group of American firms totaling more than $100,000,000.

Most of these contracts were in process of fulfillment when the French buyers refused to meet their payments or to accept the shipments. One company is said to have lost $30,000,000.

The Groupment Charboniere Industrial Parisiene has refused to accept completion of their contract at $28 per ton with $10,000,000 worth more to be shipped.

Chamber Would Settle.

The Chamber of Commerce of Roubaix has refused to accept coal involving $2,225,000, but has offered to make some settlement for breaking the contract. They contracted to pay $30 a ton.

The Bordeaux Gas company's contract, which was almost completed, was cancelled with the refusal to accept coal worth $175,000, and Roger Sauvage has turned down shipments totalling $17,000,000.

These cancellations were the result of a sharp break in the market price of coal at French ports following settlement of the English coal strike. Coal is now deliverable at France at less than $18 a ton.

Plead Lack of Funds.

The companies which faced losses through acceptance of American deliveries at higher rates simply declared they were unable to pay.

The present condition of French finance will make it exceedingly difficult to force acceptances or to arrange settlements.

Ralph Bullowa, confidential adviser of the American firm holding contracts with the Groupement, which represents Citroen, Loucheur, and other big French industrial leaders, declared he hoped that he could reach some agreement.

"This contract was undertaken on verbal assurance of the French Bureau National des Charbons that contracts would be carried out and all payments met," he said.

Relies on Government.

"I have been examining the liability of the group and feel that the French government morally, if not legally, is responsible for the actions of the group. I have confidence in the integrity of the French government and feel sure the matter will be brought to the attention of the proper officials and that they will hold the same view.

"We hope it will not be necessary to bring the mater to the attention of the government through channels to which American citizens appeal as the last resort."

Mr. Bullowa declared that cancellation of coal contracts probably would spread to cancellation of oil contracts. In that event further heavy losses would be experienced, he said.

MOTHER OPENS NEW SEARCH FOR SON, 22, MISSING TWO YEARS

A mother's appeal for her missing boy goes out to Chicago today through THE TRIBUNE. Two years ago Walter William Franks, 22 years old, a salesman employed by a St. Louis optical firm, disappeared. Despite the untiring search of his widow mother, Mrs. Mary E. Franks of 4638 Vincennes avenue, no clew has been found. When last heard from he was at Green Bay, Wis., en route to Dubuque. Franks was born, raised, and educated in Chicago. He attended Wendell Phillips High school, and former classmates are among those who are helping the mother in her search.

GENERAL SALES TAX IS URGED IN HOUSE BILL

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Repeal of the excess profits tax and a number of other taxes and substitution of a general sales tax of 1 per cent is provided in a bill introduced in the house today by Representative Mott of New York, a Republican member of the committee on ways and means. Besides repealing the excess profits tax it does away with most of the excise taxes, including the tax on sport goods, automobiles and accessories, candy and chewing gum, motorboats, the luxury taxes on wearing apparel and art objects, taxes on drugs and medicines, the taxes on theater admissions, and on nonalcoholic beverages.

Would Increase Receipts.

According to estimates of the treasury department, the 1 per cent tax on all "turnovers" as provided in the bill would yield $1,500,000,000 annually. The excess profits tax and other taxes repealed under the bill are estimated to yield during the next fiscal year slightly more than $1,300,000,000. The tax on all turnovers thus is estimated to yield $200,000,000 more than would be lost by the elimination of the other taxes.

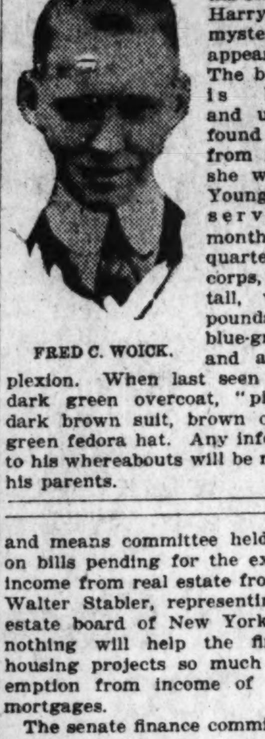
"Compare this to the great increase in prices due to present taxes," said Mr. Mott. "It has been variously estimated that from 25 to 40 cents of every dollar spent at present is so spent because of business taxes, although the government actually gets only a small proportion of it."

Hears Real Estate Men.

A subcommittee of the house ways and means committee held a hearing on bills pending for the exemption of income from real estate from taxation. Walter Stabler, representing the real estate board of New York, said that nothing will help the financing of housing projects so much as tax exemption from income of real estate mortgages.

The senate finance committee agreed to give a hearing to representatives of the Amerian Legion on the soldiers' bonus bill next Wednesday. This will be the first time that the committee will have given consideration to this measure, which was passed by the house last spring.

MOTHER HEARTBROKEN AS SIX FOOTER SON VANISHES IN MYSTERY



FRED C. WOICK.

Fred C. Woick of 6531 Kimbark avenue, through THE TRIBUNE today is attempting to locate his only son, Fred Harry Woick, who mysteriously disappeared Nov. 26. The boy's mother is heartbroken and unless he is found or heard from it is feared she will collapse. Young Woick served eighteen months with the quartermaster corps, is six feet tall, weighs 155 pounds and has blue-gray eyes and a fair complexion. When last seen he wore a dark green overcoat, "pinch back" dark brown suit, brown oxfords and green fedora hat. Any information as to his whereabouts will be rewarded by his parents.

STATESMEN SEE THE NEWS MINUS A BLUE PENCIL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—The thirty-fifth annual dinner of the Gridiron club was made the occasion tonight of a post mortem on the presidential election, the purpose being to give the politicians and some of the statesmen present an opportunity to see themselves as others saw them during the campaign.

One of the episodes was a front porch meeting at Marion, O., set to music, with such characters as Senator Harding, Harry M. Daugherty, former Senator Weeks, Al Jolson, W. J. Bryan and "Slush Fund Rumor" participating.

Mr. Daugherty stalked the front porch in the role of Koko, the lord high executioner, while there was a rumpus when the "Slush Fund Rumor" invaded the Harding lawn. During the skit Will H. Hays sang plaintively to the Republican candidate a political parody on "Then You'll Remember Me," only Mr. Hays' request was "so please remember me."

At Last It's Settled.

In another episode a crystal gazer, reading the political future, saw President Harding sending the league of nations to the alien property custodian.

The gazer also announced that the crystal revealed President Harding receiving from Samuel Gompers the key to the back door of the White House and returning it with a note saying:

"May I not, my dear Mr. Gompers, ask you to keep this key as a souvenir? I have changed the lock."

The seer revealed that Harding was at work on a message to congress. He said he could not give the text, but assured an inquirer that "the style will not cause any intellectual inconvenience."

Col. J. Ham Loses a Job.

The crystal gazer also found former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis applying for the job of publicity director under Harding, but his services were declined.

Mark Anthony Hitchcock delivered his famous oration over the body of the league covenant, following closely an historic model. He explained that he came to bury the covenant, not to praise him.

Another extension of the post mortem to the fields of prophecy was a meeting of the "best minds" at Marion in conference with President Elect Harding. They included Col. George Harvey, former President Taft, Senators Borah, Johnson, Knox, Lodge, La Follette, and Reed; Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Gov. Lowden, Samuel Gompers, Herbert Hoover, and Elihu Root. They appeared dressed as school boys, and Col. Harvey insisted on being the "master mind" because he was the author of the "conspiracy" that elected Harding.

Chief among the interested witnesses to the post mortem were Vice President Marshall, to whom the club presented a large silver gridiron as a token of its regard. A similar gridiron was sent to the White House as a gift to President Wilson, who was unable to attend the dinner.

FATHER HUNTING LOST SON FINDS HIM—IN LAGOON

Albert P. Mehren of Berwyn was driving his car through Lyons yesterday morning when, in crossing the Ogden avenue bridge over the Desplaines river, he noticed a man walking along the road carrying a boy in his arms. The boy's clothes were dripping wet.

Mehren had crossed the bridge when it suddenly came to him that the boy might have fallen into the river. He turned around, drove back and offered to take the boy home.

Finds Lost Son—Dead.

The man glanced up. There was a dull look in his dry eyes.

"My boy is dead," he said. "I found him. He didn't come home from school yesterday. I notified the police. They couldn't find him. This morning I went out to look for him myself."

His voice quavered.

"I—I found him in the old quarry hole and—and I'm taking him home."

Mehren advised the father to place the body in the machine and go first to the police station, but a policeman directed them to Frederick's morgue in Lyons. There the father, Charles I. Cerier, deposited his burden.

Rock Upsets, Boy Drowns.

Investigation by the police later disclosed that the boy, Charles Cerier, 7½ years old, had left the Washington school in Lyons with a playmate on Friday afternoon. They had gone first to the postoffice and then had stopped by the old quarry hole, once used as the lagoon for the shoot-the-chutes device at the old Cream City Amusement park. They began throwing stones to see them splash. Charles ventured out on a rock sticking out of the water. It turned and Charles slipped and fell in.

His playmate watched him sink and fled in terror, fearing to tell the secret.

Colleges Soon to Teach Only Classics, Prediction

Classical subjects only will compose the curriculum of the college of the future, according to Payson S. Wild of Northwestern university and president of the Chicago Classical club.

Mr. Wild gave his views at a luncheon of his club in the Hotel La Salle yesterday.

"There is no greater mind trainer in the world than the study of Latin and Greek," said Mr. Wild. "The number of students taking up classical subjects in our high schools and colleges is ever on the increase. The college of the future will teach nothing but the classics."

Denver, Colo., Dec. 11.—A motion to elect William J. Bryan an honorary member of the Young Men's Democratic club of Denver was lost last night. It failed of a second.

DISHWASHING HALTS HER ART; SEEKS DIVORCE

They had several little quarrels. Sometimes the topic of discussion would be art, and they rarely agreed. He said she would never be a painter and she strongly contended that she would. Other times she complained of having so much work to do that she became so utterly weary that she could not even lift her paint brush. Many, many times they argued about money.

Anyway, the heart and soul of Mrs. Maud Culver Burritt were in her painting. She did the household work and, according to her own statements, did it well. But it took so much of her time that she could do but little painting.

Then one day when she asked her husband for money—well, her divorce bill says he confronted her with a pistol.

"Roughly Abused Her."

Finally it came to a crisis and yesterday Mrs. Burritt filed suit against her husband, Dean C. Burritt, an employé in a can factory, asking a divorce. The charge is cruelty.

Mrs. Burritt, who lives in Maywood, asserts that her husband "bit, pinched, struck, choked, kicked, pulled, smashed and otherwise roughly abused her." Her desire to paint and his desire for more worldly things, such as clean floors, is alleged to have been the cause of the disagreement.

Mrs. Burritt achieved some notice several yers ago when she painted Mrs. Jay Gould's children in water color. Before that her struggle with the oils and brushes had been hard. It has never grown easy, but prior to her painting the Gould children the artist had an uphill climb.

Studied at Art Institute.

At odd times she scraped together enough money to study at the Art institute. She painted at home during the day. Her paintings once hung in the Dryden galleries.

But those who viewed them paused to admire and not to purchase.

FRANCE BLOCKS AGREEMENT IN CABLES PARLEY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Under Secretary of State Norman H. Davis conferred with President Wilson at the White House today concerning ocean cable controversies. He stated afterward that the controversy between the United States and Japan over the island of Yap is not holding up the agreement between the communications conference delegations, and that the conference can complete its work without a settlement of the status of the Island of Yap.

Mr. Davis is hopeful that the communications conference will come to an agreement in the near future.

There is reason to believe that the United States has informed France that, if the French government persists in its demand for the former German cable between the United States and Germany, whose European end France diverted to Brest, the United States will not permit France to land it in this country. It is indicated that France is the principal obstruction to reaching an agreement.

COSTS HER $20 TO HIT HEALTH OFFICER ON NOSE

"She tore down the diphtheria sign as soon as I left and when I returned to put it up again she hit me on the nose and broke my glasses, and her husband chased me downstairs."

It was Morris Kaplan, a health officer, testifying before Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday in the case of Mrs. Benjamin Rosenstraus, 1541 West Fourteenth street, accused of breaking quarantine regulations. Mrs. Rosenstraus' son Phillip was ordered quarantined for diphtheria.

"There isn't a word of truth in it," declared Mrs. Rosenstraus.

"This thing is going too far. It is the third time in a month that a health officer has been attacked," put in Irwin Kowohl, representative of the health department.

"Twenty dollars and costs," announced Judge Trude. "The defendant would have got off $10 cheaper if you had not lied to me."

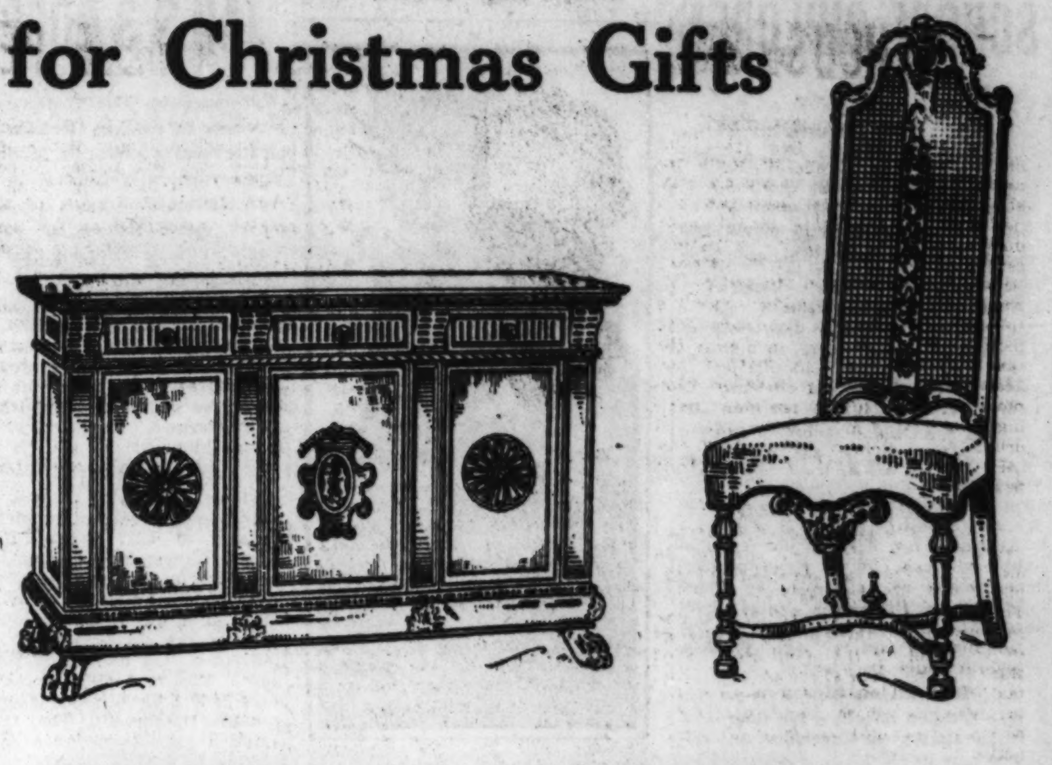
Scholle's Good Furniture for Christmas Gifts



Walnut Polychrome Hall Chest in Italian Renaissance.
High-back Italian Renaissance Hall Chair in Walnut, covered in Italian Red Velvet.

NOTHING could be better; a permanent joy to the one who receives such a gift; a perpetual reminder of the spirit of the giver.

There are many articles of furniture, of decorative and useful value in the home, to be found in this store. Some of them are very inexpensive, some are quite costly. Everything we sell is a "value" for the price; so good a value that we don't want you to keep it if you find that it isn't exactly what you want.

Naturally anything you buy as a gift may be returned or exchanged by the one to whom you give it, at any time. The policy of our store to permit the return or exchange of merchandise is governed by our determination to give complete satisfaction always, and is not affected by the way in which the goods came into the possession of the one wishing to exchange them.

Let us help you find "the very thing" you want to send for Christmas; it's here somewhere; something "within your price."

Rugs for gifts

Very fine rugs cost a good deal, of course; but they do last a long time. All our rugs, however, are not very costly; you may be surprised when you see what can be done in this department for the money.

IMPERILS CITY'S RIGHT TO GUARD SCHOOL CHILDREN

Judge Joseph B. David of the Superior court indicated yesterday that he would decide that the city has no right to close streets to traffic in order that school children may be protected. The judge decided that the city council has no legal right to pass ordinances which provide for the compulsory placing of guards around elevator shafts.

A case involving the first question is now before the jurist. It is that of Mrs. Mary A. Durphy in behalf of George W. Durphy, 11 years old. The lad was struck and seriously injured by an automobile truck belonging to the B. A. Railton company. The accident occurred in front of the Graeme Stewart school.

Attorneys for Mrs. Durphy contend that the truck had no right on Lenmore avenue as the street was closed during the school recess. Judge David informed the attorneys that he did not think the city had the right to close streets for such purposes.

Decision on Elevators.

The decision affecting the guards of elevator shafts was directed at an ordinance now in effect. It was passed by the council on the theory that its police power made it legal for them to order guards placed at elevator shafts.

The judge announced his ruling in the case of Harry Marcovitz against Joseph Hergenrether & Son, 57 East Fifty-third street. The former brought suit against the latter in behalf of the estate of Isadore Marks, who was killed when he fell down an elevator shaft at the south side address.

Detectives Face Contempt.

Judge David also granted Detective Sergeants Edward Weber and Herman Otten five days to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court. Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell had filed petitions asking they be held in contempt.

The detectives incurred the wrath of the court when they turned over the custody of A. E. Pandolfo, an alleged fugitive from Warren county, Ky., to a representative of the courts there, notwithstanding a writ of habeas corpus had been issued by Judge David.

SCORE 3!

Former Overseas Major, Now Policeman, Who Whipped, Disarmed, and Jailed Three Robbers Single Handed.

POLICEMAN JAMES J. DINEEN

BRAVES 20 SHOTS, FIGHTS, DISARMS, JAILS 3 ROBBERS

Mopping up tactics that he used overseas in raiding German trenches on the Somme and at St. Mihiel bagged three robbers yesterday for Policeman James J. Dineen of the Hyde Park station motorcycle squad, formerly a major commanding the Second battalion, 130th infantry.

Dineen, boxer, wrestler, and champion all around athlete of the police department in 1912, has long preached mental and physical preparedness. He demonstrated it with the robbers, whom he captured singlehanded and then disarmed. They fired twenty bullets at him.

Sees Robbers at Work.

Dineen, motoring home with a friend, saw three men robbing Joseph Szekora of 3127 West Fifty-fourth street. Dineen leaped from the automobile. The robbers fired and ran.

Overtaking one of them after a chase of a block, Dineen felled him, knocked the revolver from his hand and committed him to Szekora's custody. The robber's two companions were half a block away when Dineen renewed the pursuit. They turned and emptied their revolvers at him. Resorting to a trick of trench warfare, he dropped to the ground.

As they finished firing he sprang up and chased them to Forty-ninth and Wallace streets. They were attempting to reload their revolvers. He hurled one to the ground, snapped his revolver from him by a jiu jitsu maneuver, and threw the other.

Takes Trio to Station.

The three prisoners were then conveyed to the Hyde Park station. They said they were Martin Seymore, alias James Carey; George Mills, alias George Murphy, and Frank Thompson, alias "Butch" Miller.

MERL INKS, WIFE, AND TWO OTHERS INJURED IN AUTO

MRS. MERL INKS.

Irene McAuliff Inks, the romantic young woman who was formerly postmistress of Franklin Park, and her husband, Merl Inks, now under federal indictment for absconding postoffice funds, were injured yesterday when the motor car in which they were riding was struck by an east bound Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railway freight train.

Riding in the motor car with them were Mrs. Callary McAuliff and her husband, W. J. McAuliff, Mrs. Inks' brother. They, too, were injured.

The victims were brought to Chicago and taken to St. Luke's hospital.

Physicians at the hospital said there is a possibility that both the women may die.

The husbands' injuries were slight.

"It's not a case of joy riding or speeding," McAuliff told the hospital clerk. "The car stalled on the crossing. That's all."

According to statements made by Chester McAuliff, another brother of Mrs. Inks, the party was in the Bungalow inn for a few minutes last night, but did not remain there long.

Mrs. Inks is Inks' third wife. His second wife divorced him.

DRUGGISTS TOLD THEY MUST STOP NARCOTIC SALES

Druggists and physicians were warned against selling opium and other habit forming drugs on forged government permits in a notice sent out yesterday by Frank D. Richardson, supervising prohibition agent in the central district, and Harry Mager, collector of internal revenue.

Thousands of dollars' worth of cocaine, morphine, and opium has been obtained on worthless permits in the last few months, government officials said.

"Any druggist or doctor guilty of failing to observe the regulations governing the sale of drugs will be prosecuted," Mr. Mager said, "for criminal negligence. The Harrison drug act provides that drugs must be kept under lock and key at all times and the collector's office notified in case of theft."

It makes no difference when you want to eat or what you want to eat. The North American Restaurant is open from 7 a.m. until midnight, every day and Sunday too, and you can't get better food anywhere no matter what price you pay.

Come into the North American for breakfast, for lunch, dinner or after the theatre. Displayed before your eyes, you will see the food you wish cooked to a turn and piping hot. The sight of it will make you hungry. Every bit of it is cooked by chefs who have studied for years to learn just how to give food the exact taste which makes it so pleasing.

You will dine in a great big beautiful restaurant. You will have your own table covered with snowy linen. The North American is the same first class restaurant it has always been. There is only one difference. You serve yourself and the cost of service is deducted from the price of the food, so your food costs less than it ever did before.

Where else can you get a great big juicy tenderloin steak with mushrooms for 75 cents cooked before your eyes, or a whole breast of milk fed chicken with bacon for 65 cents?

If you will dine regularly at the North American you will save not less than 50 per cent of what you have been paying for food at other first class restaurants and hotels. And you will agree that you can't get better food, nor more liberal portions, nor a more delightful place to dine, no matter what you pay.

We can't convince you unless you give us a chance. You must dine here to find out. Then you will know. Why not try it?

BIBLE FURNISHES APT SLOGAN FOR GOOD FELLOWS

Epistle Says "Do Good and Distribute."

BY THE REV. G. M'WHORTER.

To do good, and to distribute, forget not; for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.

Some of the "higher critics" of the New Testament say that a woman wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews, but we are not going to enter into a critical discussion this morning. All we want to say about the above verse from the Epistle is that the person who wrote it must have been a Good Fellow or had the Good Fellows in mind while writing the sixteenth verse of the thirteenth chapter.

Last Sunday morning we began our exhortation to the Good Fellows with a prayer; this Sunday morning we are seeking to dignify our appeal by a quotation from Holy Scripture.

The Spirit of the Day.

"The Good Fellows" is not a religious organization, yet it does religious work in the spirit of a great holy day, the Feast of the Nativity of our Lord, or the birthday of Christ, commonly called Christmas day. And the spirit of that day is the spirit of giving.

"Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said it is more blessed to give than to receive."

It is not so much the size or the amount of the gift that counts; it is the spirit that prompts the giving, the desire to share the good things of life with others who have them not.

What We Share.

Though the second line is often quoted, it is the first line of this couplet from "The Vision of Sir Launfal," by James Russell Lowell, that gives a richer meaning to the phrase:

Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare.

Many of the Good Fellows who are asking for one family to provide for this Christmas are doing so with the idea of sharing their own Christmas with others, not that they have so much to spend on themselves that they will not miss the cost of another Christmas dinner.

During the war we were asked to "give until it hurts." We are not asking for that sort of giving this Christmas—rather we would ask that you "give until it pleases." Give yourself a good time this Christmas, Good Fellows, by seeing the happiness you can bring into the drab lives of Chicago's poor little ones.

Doing Something for Others.

After all there is lots more joy in doing something for others who might otherwise be forgotten than in having a lot done for you, isn't there, old Good Fellow? Especially when the others are helpless children who still believe in Santa Claus, or crippled, maimed or wounded veterans of the great war who are laid up in a hospital far from home.

Halfway House has been reached and passed, Good Fellows, in our holiday climb to Christmas peak, but the last part of our climb is going to be the hardest unless you send a relief expedition with fresh supplies to help us reach the peak on Christmas eve. It is encouraging to know that there are almost as many Good Fellows enrolled today as there were one year ago today, but the appeals for aid are 50 per cent greater in number than last year.

Come on, Good Fellows, let's get together!

GOOD FELLOWS!

Here's a Form to Fill Out. It Will Aid You in Stating Your Plans for Helping Poor Kids.

If you will be a Good Fellow on Christmas day to some family of poor children in Chicago please fill out the attached blank and send it to "The Tribune," Good Fellow Department.

I will be Santa Claus to .... children.

ROBBERS STEAL $50,000 IN WEEK END CRIME WAVE

Despite the concentrated drive of the police on criminals, Chicago's underworld displayed its usual week-end activity and citizens were robbed of nearly $50,000.

Amid a fusillade of shots in which citizens and police joined, four bandits were routed in an attempt early yesterday morning to steal the safe from the Piggly Wiggly store at 1013 East Forty-third street.

Robbers obtained $4,200 from the saloon of Andrew Zajac at the corner of One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street and Baltimore avenue in Hegewisch. The place regularly cashes the checks of men who work at the plants of the Western Steel Car company.

Liwood French, a Negro, 28 years old, 546 Milwaukee avenue, was stabbed to death in an argument over a 50 cent piece in a rooming house at 3113 Cottage Grove avenue. James Smith, also a Negro, is being sought by the police as the murderer.

Locking Mark Reisapfel, six employés, and a customer in a rear room of Reisapfel's fur shop on the second floor at 3557 West Roosevelt road yesterday morning shortly before noon, four armed bandits made off with $20,000 worth of furs.

HORSE SHOW TO BE REVIVED AS A SOCIETY EVENT

Plans will be launched tomorrow night by the Chicago Equestrian association to revive the Coliseum horse show which was held here in former days as a society event. Those most concerned say that more than $50,000 has been subscribed for the venture, and that wealthy local horsemen are standing ready to underwrite the show for any amount needed to make it a permanent institution which will keep the spirit of good horsemanship growing in the middle west.

Directors of the association will hold their meeting at the Chicago Athletic association tomorrow night and officially discuss all of the preliminary plans. According to informal discussions of those most interested, the show will probably be held some time in the spring, since the Shore Shore Country club's outdoor horse show takes place in midsummer and similar events are scheduled in the fall.

Among the horsemen most directly interested are John Hertz and C. Governor Ellis, officers of the Equestrian association; Thomas E. Wilson, J. K. Dering, Otto Lehman, Francis S. Peabody, and other members of the directorate.

Brokers Aid Christmas Flour Fund for Poor

Good progress is being made in gathering a liberal fund on the Board of Trade with which to buy flour for the poor on Christmas. Members have donated freely and subscriptions this week are expected to increase. A. V. Booth is chairman of the board's committee, and Secretary John R. Mauff is treasurer. Arrangements have been made for distributing the fund with the Good Fellows, the United Charities, Salvation Army, and the girls of the press.

ENGINE KILLS SWITCHMAN.

Walter A. Vallecourt, 23 years old, a switchman employed by the Indiana Harbor Belt Railway company, was struck and instantly killed Friday night by a switch engine in the company's freight yards in Hamomnd, Ind.

THE EMPTY, RAGGEDY STOCKINGS

What of the empty, raggedy stockings
That will hang by the chimney on Christmas eve,
With their mute appeals from the poor little owners
To the dear old Santa in whom they believe?

For their share of his presents they ask such a little,
"Just a dolly to hold in my arms while I sleep,
A little tin auto that runs when you wind it,
A sounding red drum or a woolly white sheep."

The only light in their dim, dark existence
Is that wonderful day when old Santa will come
With his treasure filled pack that he brings on his back
From his fairyland, snowyland, toyland home.

What beautiful dreams will come to them sleeping
Under the coverlet shabby and worn;
But what of the empty, raggedy stockings
That will hang by the chimney on Christmas morn?

TIERNEY SLAYER ESCAPES; ON TRIP WITH AGED GUARD

Harry (Babe) Emerson, who pleaded guilty two years ago to the murder of Dennis Tierney, collector for the Illinois Central railroad, and who was sentenced to thirty years in the penitentiary, is again at liberty. It became known yesterday that he escaped from the southern Illinois prison at Menard, Ill., on Nov. 17, while he was being returned to the penitentiary from Chicago.

Despite the fact that almost a month has elapsed since the escape, it did not become known in the state's attorney's office until yesterday.

As a result of Emerson's escape it is probable that Thomas O'Connor, brother of "Darling David" O'Connor, will once more escape prosecution. When Judge Hugo Pam, before whom O'Connor was to have been tried Monday on an indictment charging robbery with a revolver, learned of Emerson's escape he became thoroughly aroused and suggested that an investigation be made. Emerson was to have been the state's star witness against O'Connor.

Man Who Confesses Theft of Coat Held to Grand Jury

After admitting he had stolen a coat valued at $185 from the home of Mrs. Louise Fry at 1160 West Van Buren street, John Ryan was held to the grand jury in bonds of $1,500 when he was arraigned yesterday before Judge John R. Caverly.

Kills Himself When His Wife Sues for Divorce

Thomas Bartu, 45 years old, formerly a waiter, was found dead yesterday in a rooming house at 708 North Wells street. He had shot himself Friday. A note found in one of his coat pockets explained that the victim was despondent because his wife had started divorce proceedings.

Domestic Relations Court Christmas Fund Sought

Miss Irene Inderrieden, of the Court of Domestic Relations issued an appeal yesterday for contributions to the annual Christmas fund raised by the court attachés. According to Miss Inderrieden, the fund to date is not as large as last year, although the court has many more children to care for this year than in previous years.

RULES FOR NIGHT PARKING IN LOOP ISSUED BY POLICE

Steps Taken to End Jam During Theater Hours.

In an attempt to relieve the nightly congestion of traffic in Randolph street between State and La Salle streets caused by the automobiles of theater goers, Capt. P. J. Lavin, head of the traffic department of the police, last night inaugurated a new system of parking machines.

The motorists and their chauffeurs made objection at first, but later expressed hearty approval of the plan. Mounted policemen hereafter will be on guard to enforce the rules and to prevent thievery.

Here Are New Rules.

The rules inaugurated by Capt. Lavin are, briefly, as follows:

No parking in Randolph street between State and La Salle streets.

Automobiles may be parked diagonally to the curbing in La Salle street between Randolph and Washington streets.

Cars may be backed up to the curb along State street, that is, parked at right angles to the curbing.

Cars may be parked as usual along Clark and Dearborn streets parallel to the curbing.

At the close of performances, motorists may drive from the parking places to the theaters and take on their parties. They cannot, however, wait before the theater if their load is not ready. They must continue around the block."

No turning around in Randolph street.

The hours for these traffic rule observances are roughly between 8 and 11:30 o'clock or until such time as the theater crowd is dispersed.

Mounted policemen will be on guard nightly to enforce the law and watch over the parked cars.

Opposes Cermak Plan.

Ald. A. J. Cermak's proposed amendment to the no parking ordinance, which would permit parking in the loop district between 11 a. m. and 1 p. m., "would cut the heart out of the plan to relieve the traffic tangle," R. F. Kelker, Jr., city traffic supervisor declared yesterday.

"From 11 to 1 o'clock are the hours when the no parking ordinance is most needed," Mr. Kelker said. "It is then that under present conditions the noon hour crowds of pedestrians are delayed by traffic."

To substantiate his assertions Mr. Kelker made public figures gathered in his survey of loop parking conditions to show that the maximum parking comes between 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. The figures show the average number of cars parked each hour between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., as follows:

9 to 10 a. m.	1,750	1 to 2 p. m.	2,250
10 to 11 a. m.	2,100	2 to 3 p. m.	2,200
11 to 12 m.	2,530	3 to 4 p. m.	1,750
12 to 1 p. m.	2,535

An amendment to permit physicians to park their automobiles wherever necessary in emergencies is being drawn up in the corporation counsel's office and will probably be introduced at the next council meeting.

BANDIT, DODGING 75 COPS, ROBS NINE, GETS $400

Carrying a revolver wrapped in a newspaper and wearing the same bright red sweater the Stanton avenue police have come to know—a Negro bandit who has robbed nine persons since last Thursday, appeared again yesterday morning, held up five men, gathered in nearly $400 and successfully eluded seventy-five cops who combed the district for him.

The first victim yesterday was W. J. Muir of 860 East Thirty-ninth street, a driver for Borden's Farm Products company. He encountered the Negro in front of 538 East Thirty-fourth street and lost $24.50.

The police immediately recognized the bandit from Muir's description, and two wagon patrol loads of police were sent out to get him.

While they dashed about, Adolph Krause of 7144 Dobson street called up to report a $60 loss to the bandit who met him on Thirty-fourth street, between Federal and Dearborn streets.

It was about 10:30 a. m. when August Battaglia of 524 North Carpenter street informed the desk sergeant that the colored man had collected $80 from him in Thirty-second street between State street and Wabash avenue.

Henry Schultz, 4452 North Robey street, met the bandit in front of 3358 Forest avenue and contributed $60.

About 11 o'clock Henry Gabriel, 3035 North Troy street, a driver for the Blue Valley Creamery company, reported he had been held up by the red sweatered bandit at Thirty-sixth street and Wabash avenue. He lost $100.

POLICE CAPTURE BURGLAR, WHO ADMITS 100 JOBS

Harry Wiseman of Toronto, confessed perpetrator of more than 100 burglaries, who was captured early yesterday morning by Detective Sergeants O'Hare and Barry of the Fillmore street station.

They were out looking for the "early morning burglar," as he was called by them, when they saw the police flivver from their station dart past half a block away. Immediately they secreted themselves in a doorway near Flournoy street and St. Louis avenue and waited. Soon Wiseman hurried down the street. They grabbed him, searched him, and found, among other things, two watches.

Following his usual custom, Wiseman had pried the lock of the second floor flat of John Tody, 3528 Lexington street. As he was prowling the place the beam of his flashlight gleamed upon the face of Mrs. Tody. She screamed. He fled—with the finale heretofore noted.

The membership is already more than fifty, and the "drive" hopes to get twenty-five new members. Miss Heloise Howitt of 543 Briar avenue, a senior, is in charge. The officers are: Charles B. Anderson, Walter Zivi, and John Allen. Mr. Anderson, a junior, is a member of Sigma Epsilon, the honor society of the school, and lives at 5347 Prairie avenue.

POLICE SEARCH SUSPECT; FIND $43,000 CHECKS

Edward Valentine, colored, arrested yesterday at 733 East Forty-fifth street, had only $3 in currency, but in checks, drafts, and postal orders he yielded $43,000. The largest was a cashier's check for $13,300 on the Studebaker bank of Blufftown, Ind., drawn through the federal reserve bank.

Detective Sergeants William Kennedy and Patrick Loftus arrested Valentine at request of the chief of police of Kokomo, Ind. He said last night Valentine was wanted there for robbing a store.

Valentine could not explain the checks. The Studebaker bank informed the police it had not been robbed, and that no cashier's checks were missing. The police will investigate his record in connection with recent mail pouch robberies. With him was arrested a colored woman who said she was Miss Hazel Smith.

POLICE RAIDS ON POOL ROOMS NET 68 AS GAMBLERS

Sixty-eight alleged gamblers were arrested yesterday in raids made by the police in a number of poolrooms and cigar stores on the near north and south sides. The poolroom of Walter Kelly, 132 West Twenty-ninth street, yielded eighteen prisoners, who were booked on gambling charges. Kelly had just reutrned from the South Clark street court, where he had paid a $100 fine on a similar charge, when he was raided.

Twenty-six men were arrested in a cigar store at 73 Root street after a raid by Lieut. William Shoemaker of the detective bureau. The lieutenant had reconnoitered and found a rear room with 200 men watching the work of a handbook operator. He found three passageways leading from buildings in the vicinity. Stationing men at each entrance, he began the arrests. A wild scramble ensued and all the twenty-six escaped or were allowed to go. Thomas Shannon and Michael Finegan were booked as keepers.

Lieut. Shoemaker also conducted a raid on another cigar store at 1 West Oak street, where thirteen men were taken. Joseph Kennedy was booked as keeper.

THREAT AGAINST LIFE OF CHIEF FOUND IN RAID

Gang Member Escapes; Taken Again at Home.

Threats against the life of Chief of Police Charles C. Fitzmorris were found in a letter taken from a suspected thief yesterday in a raid on a garage near Taylor street and Ashland avenue.

The letter was found on Joe Pantoni, 1014 Aberdeen street, who with four others, including the writer of the note, William Malone, 1104 Taylor street, was arrested by Sergeant George O'Connor and four detectives of the automobile section. Through the arrests the police believe they have uncovered a gang whose criminal activities will rival the notorious Cardinella band.

The police descended on the garage shortly after noon yesterday and found Pantoni, Malone, Dominick Sticemmelli, 1510 Edgemont avenue; Sam Maroca, 1066 West Taylor street, and Rocco Dominick, 1104 Taylor street.

"He Will Get His."

The letter read in part:

"Chief Garrity has quit and the new cop is Fitzmorris. He thinks he is doing a hell of a thing putting off all the cops that could be fixed and putting on 500 flatties that are hard eggs. But he will get his."

Malone refused to answer questions. The letter instructed Pantoni to write Malone in care of "Rose Cimone, 924 South May street." The police are searching for the girl.

One Man Escapes.

When the men were taken to the detective bureau they were thrown into the lockup, but not into the cells, which were already crowded with prisoners taken in the day's raids. Unnoticed by the lockup keeper, Pantoni slipped into the furnace room, seized a shovel, and pried apart the bars on a window on the alley between La Salle and Clark streets, and escaped.

Sergt. O'Connor was notified, and immediately went to Pantoni's home with Sergts. Arthur Shoemaker and Joseph Hayes. They found Pantoni eating dinner with his parents.

PLAN TO RAISE SUBURBAN FARES ON STEAM ROADS

One hundred thousand suburbanites who are daily commuters on the steam roads entering Chicago will be affected by the finding of an examiner for the Interstate Commerce commission who is scheduled to begin his investigation here next Saturday.

A hearing on the petition of the Central Passenger association, which was for an advance in fares from 3 to 3.6 cents a mile will be held. The request for an advance was made following a meeting of railway chiefs in the offices of the association.

Commuters along the Chicago & Northwestern which carries 38,000 suburbanites daily, the Illinois Central which carries 40,000, and the Burlington and Rock Island which carry 12,000 each, are expected to put up a strong resistance because the increase in the mileage rate will also affect all commutation tickets.

Car Tracks in Plymouth Court Will Be Torn Up

Mrs. Fred W. Packard, president of the State Humane association, was jubilant yesterday because she finally had persuaded the city hall to rip out the long unused car tracks in Plymouth court and repair the pavement of that street from Polk street to Fourteenth street.

"For years," she said, "the tracks have been responsible for accidents to horses and wagons, and all the pressure we have been able to bring to bear was useless until yesterday when the order was issued to start the work Monday."

G. B. —the initials of Chicago's greatest store for women!

The Caption of this Advertisement is an exact reprint of the sensational "extra" published by The Chicago Tribune on Aug. 2nd—more than six years ago. This edition of The Tribune heralded the new era of higher prices, as it was the world war that caused their upward climb. Interesting to look at, is it not?

—turns the calendar back six years in presenting a great pre-war sale of approximately 10,000 newest Women's COATS—DRESSES—SUITS—FURS!

Here is an important announcement to women under the most fearful caption that this paper has ever flashed before the public. George Bernards has actually gone back SIX WHOLE YEARS in establishing prices that mark the most stupendous value-giving event that Chicago has known since the beginning of the world war. Each price quoted below represents a value that the shrewdest of women will immediately concede to be the greatest that they have ever had the good fortune of securing. This event has been carefully planned to arouse the enthusiasm of all Chicago women—the publication of this full page advertisement would not have been exploited if George Bernards did not have confidence in the extraordinary appeal of these values. Judge for yourself—visit this store at the earliest possible moment—as values such as these cannot possibly last many days.

DEMPSEY SAYS HE'LL WIN; WHEN, ONLY QUESTION

Thinks More of Visit Home than of Fight.

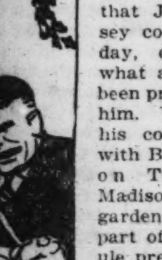
CALL FOR GEORGES

LONDON, Dec. 11.—[United News.]—"Bring on Carpentier." Fifteen minutes after he had knocked out Joe Beckett, the erstwhile heavyweight champion of England, old Frank Moran, the Pittsburgh globe trotter, murmured this coy defi to his predecessor in the rôle of flattening the Britisher.

"I can beat Carpentier, too," Moran admitted under pressure.

BY FRANK SMITH.

New York, Dec. 11.—[Special.]—"I'm going home for Christmas."



That was about the only thing that Jack Dempsey could say today, other than what already had been printed about him. With him, his coming fight with Bill Brennan on Tuesday at Madison Square garden is only part of his schedule prepared long in advance.

That he will lose the bout is farthest from his thoughts. He figures that it is only a matter of rounds and, while he would not say how far he thought this bout with his challenger would go, he indicated it would be short.

Expects Tough Fight.

But he does not take the Chicago heavyweight cheaply. In fact, he says he expects a hard struggle, the hardest he has had before or since his climb to the top rung of pugilism. And from all outward appearances he has been training with the utmost care. He looks a little drawn. If he weighs 180 pounds we'll miss our guess. He says he'll weigh 185 when he enters the ring.

With confidence half of a man's battle, Dempsey has passed through the initial stage of the conflict. He is confidence personified. He goes about his work as a challenger should. He slams his sparring partners about the ring as if they were so many pygmies. Goodness knows what he would do to them if he let loose with all his steam.

Thoughts of Home.

As he lay on a table today for a rubdown after his last hard workout all he appeared to be thinking of was that Christmas feed at home.

"I'm going home for Christmas," he said. "Haven't been home for that festive occasion for eight years, and, believe me, I'll have my appetite with me. [And he has some appetite.] The folks are expecting me, and I'm not going to disappoint them."

After battering Big Bill Tate about the ring on board the U. S. S. Granite State this afternoon Jack discarded the padded mitts until he enters the ring Tuesday. He plans to do a little shadow boxing tomorrow and take to the road Monday and then rest until he enters Madison Square garden.

Has Famous Fitz Shift.

In his workouts today the big fellow showed at his best. He appears to have mastered the famous Fitzsimmons shift, making his opponents miss by the fraction of an inch. In addition to having the shift down pat, he is able to bring his right or left to bear when the enemy is coming in, with disaster for the enemy. If he catches Mr. Brennan with one of those blows, it will be just a question of the ten count.

When asked today, if, as has often been said, he favored his left hand in punching, he declared that it was untrue.

"One hand is as good as the other," he declared. "It all depends on the opening."

And after looking him over today we believe him.

Big Crowd Out.

The final workout of the champion brought out a huge throng and many were turned away. When the gangplank was closed to visitors there was a near riot by those persons unable to gain admittance to the ship, which is moored in the Hudson at the foot of Ninety-sixth street.

Manager Jack Kearns just beamed over his protégé.

"He'll lick Brennan in jig time," he declared. "There isn't a chance of the challenger staying the limit, and I look for the battle to be over in the early rounds."

And that is what most of the boxing experts in this burg believe, except those who have attached themselves to the Brennan camp, which will be discussed later.

Belgian Proves Masse Wizardry with Maupome

When in a game of 400 points a player can make forty-nine masse shots without a miss it stamps him as a topnotcher. Edouard Horemans, the Belgian champion, performed this feat in his first appearance in Chicago at the Strauss auditorium last night when he defeated Pierre Maupome of Milwaukee, 400 to 94, at 18.2 balkline, averaging 30 10-13. Horemans went out with a run of 136. He took only 1 hour and 20 minutes to complete his string.

A change in Monday's program has been made, shifting Horemans to the afternoon session at 2 o'clock when he will meet Percy Collins.

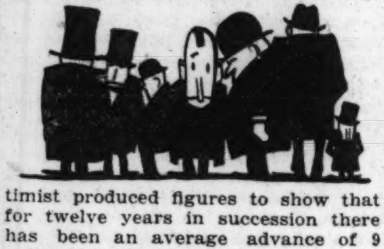
In the Wake of the News

MARKET LETTER.

COPPERS, probably due to Chief Fitzmorris' shakeup, were steadier, but absence of buying power was still noted. On present salaries, however, coppers can hardly be expected to buy other than sparingly. Piggly Wiggly lost even its squeal, and about all that's left is its sad little tale.

Mail order houses still suffer from lack of orders. Butler Bros., supposedly pegged at 40, dregged to 29½, but rallied slightly. Renewed liquidation broke out in "Monkey" Ward, induced by forecast of unfavorable earnings, or lack of earnings, statement. Corn Products suffered on the theory its corn might become painful.

The market is full of crepe hangers, who pass among the mourners. Dec. 15 in past bear markets often has been low for the movement. One chart optimist produced figures to show that for twelve years in succession there has been an average advance of 9 points between Dec. 15 and Feb. 1. He found hopeful listeners.



Organization of the proposed $1,000,000,000 corporation to finance foreign trade, under the provisions of the Edge law, no doubt will help business and stabilize exchange. Sale of its securities would be possible if purchasers were assured an Edge.

We think this a time of great opportunity for investors, but not yet a period of safety for speculators.

WRITING OF NEW BALL CODE RESTS WITH THREE MEN

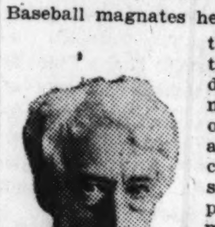
Magnates Make Start in New York Sessions.

MAKE OR BREAK ME!

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball's ruling head, hasn't as yet selected his secretary, because, he says:

"I can't afford to make a mistake in the appointment. The secretary will be an important official and will be the means of either making or breaking me in this job."

New York, Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Baseball magnates here to reorganize the game held two meetings today, one in the morning and the other late in the afternoon. In the course of the two sessions a deal of progress was made toward the fundamental object of the gathering, the evolving and adoption of a new code to take the place of the discarded national agreement. Instead of having a topheavy committee thrash out the matter, it was decided to put the drafting of the agreement in the hands of three men. These men—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, George Wharton Pepper and John Conway Toole, all lawyers—are fortified by the knowledge of the substantial agreement of all the conferees on the outlines of the plan, and they will present tomorrow morning to the reconvened council a tangible document which is likely to become baseball's constitution.



JUDGE LANDIS.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Joint Board Gets Outlines.

Two succinct outlines for the proposed agreement today were presented to the joint board made up of Messrs. Herrmann, Ebbets, and Dreyfuss of the National league, Messrs. Navin, Dunn, and Shibe of the American league, and Messrs. Sexton, Hickey, Martin, Maines, Walsh, and Morris representing the minors. These outlines provided the framework for most of the discussion, which was amicable from start to finish.

President Heydler of the National league and Mr. Toole had each sketched a code which were similar in important respects. Chief distinction lay in the fact that Mr. Heydler had incorporated in his suggestions provisions covering many of the administrative details, which Mr. Toole wished to have left for agreement outside of the chief code.

One Agreement, or Three?

Another point upon which there were two or more minds was whether there should be simply an agreement formulated between the major leagues, with provision made for the immediate acquiescence and admission of the minors, or the arrangement should be a tripart one from the outset, with each of the big leagues and the association of the lesser bodies as the contracting parties.

An advisory council, to be composed of the chief executives of the major leagues and the minors' association, also was suggested, and the idea may be incorporated in the draft to be submitted tomorrow.

Debate upon the draft system developed no bitterness, even if not entire unanimity.

Doubt Over Joint Meeting.

There was considerable discussion at today's gathering of an important side issue, in the way of how to choose the time and place for the joint meeting at which ratification of the new agreement will occur. It had been hoped that matters could be sufficiently expedited so the leagues would be ready for this session here in the course of the coming week.

This plan went to pieces when Judge Landis came to the conclusion last Thursday that there would be too much pressure and hurry necessitated thereby, and his chat with Ban Johnson, and the latter's announcement that the American league would convene on Friday in Chicago followed. Under this scheme, the joint meeting was to occur in the Windy city on the following day.

May Hold Over Till Jan. 12.

When Judge Landis reached this city today he found such strong sentiment among the club owners favoring the original arrangement that he expressed the hope that it would be found possible to hasten proceedings enough to abide by its schedule.

It was decided late in the day, however, that this was not feasible, and so the decision was reached to abide by the announced date and place for the gathering of the American league clans. The joint meeting may possibly take place next Saturday in Chicago, but is more likely to go over until the new year is under way. Jan. 12 is the date that will probably be selected.

Minor Colleges to Meet to Form New Conference

President J. L. McConaughy of Knox college has announced a meeting of minor college heads in the middle west to be held in Chicago on Dec. 30 for the purpose of organizing a conference similar to the "Big Ten." Institutions invited to attend are Beloit, Carleton, Coe, DePauw, and Wabash. Others may be included by action of representatives at the meeting.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

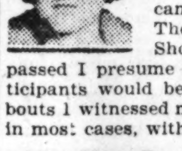
Today's Question.

Do you approve of a bill for clean boxing for Illinois?

Where Asked.

Coliseum, Wabash avenue.

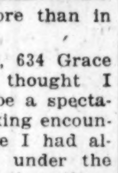
The Answers.



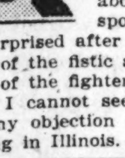
Mrs. T. Philip Swift, 220 East Walton place—I most certainly do. Boxing is one of the cleanest sports there is, if conducted properly. I saw a few bouts in the camp at Sparta, Wis. They were thrilling. Should this bill be passed I presume the size of the participants would be regulated. In the bouts I witnessed my sympathies were, in most cases, with the smaller men.

Miss Mary Rend.—Of course I do. I have enjoyed boxing immensely. I only wish it were possible for women to go to boxing exhibitions in Chicago. There is nothing "terrible" about this sport when conducted properly and the men wearing the gloves are scientific.

Miss Florence Folds, 33 Bellevue place.—I am in favor of all clean sports, and I believe boxing is in that classification if conducted in a clean, honest, and upright manner. I have seen the boys at Great Lakes Naval Training station in action and must say I enjoyed the entertainment immensely. I hope such a bill will be passed.



Miss Helen Hoyne.—Boxing is a wonderful sport. I believe it instills courage in our men. The few exhibitions I have witnessed were conducted in a sportsmanlike manner. I am strongly in favor of such a bill. There is nothing shocking in this sport any more than in football.



Miss Georgia Halverson, 634 Grace street—I thought I could not be a spectator of a boxing encounter, because I had always been under the impression that there was something brutal about this form of sport, but I was greatly surprised after seeing my first display of the fistic art and the friendliness of the fighters after the encounter. I cannot see why there should be any objection to a bill for clean boxing in Illinois.

POLICE PUT BAN ON MAT BOUTS

There will be no more public wrestling bouts in Chicago until the city council has created a commission to regulate the sport. That was made apparent yesterday when Chief of Police Fitzmorris announced that no more permits would be issued for bouts.

That the chief has taken a determined stand was evidenced when he refused to give a permit to the Illinois Automobile club. This organization asked for a permit to hold bouts at its monthly stag, but along with other clubs must eliminate wrestling until the council has acted, according to Chief Fitzmorris.

Another meeting of council members and others interested will be held tomorrow to revise the ordinance which Ald. Tony Cermak intends to put before the council on Tuesday.

CANNEFAX MEETS LAYTON IN TITLE PLAY TOMORROW

BY JOE DAVIS.

Emerging from a sizzling finish a victor by 7 points over Clarence Jackson of Kansas City, Champion Bob Cannefax of San Francisco will meet John Layton of St. Louis tomorrow night in the deciding contest for the world's three cushion championship. Each has a victory over Jackson, so there is no chance of another tie. First prize is $1,500 in cash and $2,400 a year salary, the second man getting $1,000 and $1,200 in salary.

BOB CANNEFAX.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Yesterday's game, which Cannefax won, 75 to 68, in 100 innings, relegated Jackson to third place. He defeated the champion in the first playoff by 6 points, but was unable to repeat, despite a game finish which kept the champion on the anxious seat until he swung around the table on a natural for the point which clinched his victory.

Fast Finish Livens Game.

It was the longest duel of the final series, and, while there were periods when the play was listless, the fine finish made by Jackson compensated for the early slowness. The Kaw player was in front for twenty-five innings, and then a count of 5 put Cannefax in front, and for twenty-five innings his margins ranged from 1 to 10. The high water mark was reached when Cannefax clicked off 7 points in his forty-fourth period, and, while Jackson came back with a 3, the champion made similar figures on his next essay.

That was the way the game went until Jackson rang up a septet in his sixty-third inning and was only four points behind.

Consecutive runs of 1, 1, 6, 2, and 1 gave the champion a lead of 66 to 51 and it looked as if he was about to sprint away for a decisive victory, but the game Mr. Jackson brought down the house by running nine, and then while Cannefax was idle scored six singles in a row and following with a double went into the lead, 68 to 67.

Jackson is Penalized.

In his second shot Jackson jumped the first object ball off the table and swung around for a count. He played a poor safety shot and Cannefax opening with a bank ran 4. Jackson was penalized a point for playing two safeties in succession and in a tough finish made only one more point while Cannefax counted four singles. Scores:

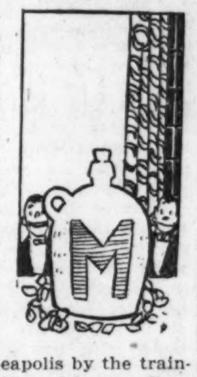
LITTLE GRAY JUG OF MICHIGAN IN HONOR SEAT AT BIG 10 FEED

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 11.—A five gallon gray stone jug held a position of honor on the University of Michigan table at the banquet of the Western Conference Alumni association here tonight. The jug has a history dating back to 1903. The Michigan eleven of that year journeyed to Minneapolis to play Minnesota. A five gallon stone jug filled with Ann Arbor water was taken to Minneapolis by the trainer. The game ended in a 6-6 score. During the excitement the jug disappeared, and later appeared in Minnesota's trophy room. It remained there until 1909 when Michigan again went to Minneapolis and won 12—5.



Last fall Minnesota went to Ann Arbor, defeated Michigan and took home the jug. This season the jug was returned to Michigan on a 3—0 victory.

The jug has been repainted one-half with a yellow "M." and the other maroon with a gold "M." Between the two letters, painted in white, are the scores of the games.

PANTS ROWLAND NEW MANAGER FOR COLUMBUS

Columbus, O., Dec. 11.—Clarence (Pants) Rowland, former manager of the White Sox and Milwaukee American association team, has been chosen manager of the Columbus club of the American association, it was announced today. He was scout for the Detroit Tigers this year. Rowland managed the Sox when they won the world's series from the New York Giants three years ago. He will take charge immediately, and it is likely that a number of changes in the team's personnel will occur.

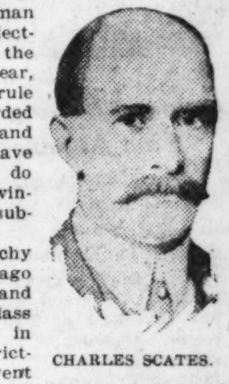
Landis to Officiate at Indians' Flag Raising

Cleveland, O., Dec. 11.—Judge K. M. Landis, head of the new baseball commission, will officiate next summer at the raising of the first world's series pennant ever won by a Cleveland team.

DAUCHY NAMED CHIEF OF YACHTING BODY; RACINE CLUB IN FOLD

Delegates to the Lake Michigan Yachting association met in their annual session at Hotel Sherman yesterday, electing officers for the ensuing year, amended a rule or two, awarded regatta dates, and in order to have something to do later in the winter adjourned subject to call.



CHARLES SCATES.

Samuel Dauchy of the Chicago Yacht club and owner of the class R racer Sari, in order to be strictly nautical, went President Elect Harding one better and was swept into the office of president on the crest of a tidal wave instead of by the landlubber's proverbial landslide. The complete ticket chosen was as follows:

President—Samuel Dauchy, Chicago Y. C.
First vice president—James Barr, South Shore [Milwaukee] Y. C.
Second vice president—Charles Morgan, Columbia Y. C.
Secretary—Charles Scates, Chicago Y. C.
Treasurer—Fred D. Porter, Chicago Y. C.
Directors—Bayard Holmes, Jr., Jackson Park Y. C.; Charles Koehn, South Shore [Milwaukee] Y. C.
Delegates to Yacht Racing union—Donald Prather, Jackson Park Y. C.; Frank B. Wever, Chicago Y. C.; Samuel Dauchy, Chicago Y. C.

Another organization joined the ranks of the parent body when the Racine Yacht club was admitted to membership. The Theatrical Colony Yacht club, whose members are composed of actors who make their summer homes at Muskegon lake, also applied for membership and probably will be voted in at the next meeting. The 1921 plum was awarded to Milwaukee when the South Shore Yacht club was chosen to conduct the Independence day regatta.

Before the meeting adjourned it was voted to incorporate the organization. Among the gossip picked up on the side lines was the information that the Chicago Yacht club will hold a full week's regatta in July or August.

Henry J. Kramer, director general of the Chicago carnival planned for next summer, appeared before the delegates and offered coöperation for a regatta to be run in connection with the affair.

Gipp Remains Unchanged; Little Hope for Recovery

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 11.—Reports from St. Joseph's hospital this afternoon, where George Gipp, Notre Dame's star half back, is confined with pneumonia and tonsilitis, were to the effect that his condition remained unchanged. This means he is still very weak and there is little hope for his recovery.

MIDWEST AND EAST BREAK EVEN ON FIRST ELEVEN

Gipp, McMillin, Horween, Stinchcomb, Backs.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

In the selection of an all-American team the gridiron game in the middle west has produced so many sterling players in recent years, and especially this season, that the honor falls to five men in the section, one in the south and five in the east.

W. H. ECKERSALL.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The east cannot be said to have a corner on sterling football men. It has been only in recent years that eastern critics have recognized the quality of the game played in the middle west, the same as this section will be compelled to respect the football played on the coast within a few years.

East Has Finished Players.

In the last five years the writer has seen a lot of eastern football. In that section they may charge a little faster, tackle more aggressively, and play a safer game, still the fact remains that there is small difference in the finish of play. Eastern institutions have more finished players to work with, while comparatively few middle west institutions are fortunate enough to enroll men who know advanced football.

With few exceptions there has been a dearth of good ends in the east this season, while the middle west has been well fortified in this position. There are a number of great backs in both sections and also a wealth of tackles and quarter backs. Guards, however, are not up to the standard of former men in the positions.

Some Choices by Acclamation.

In some positions choices should be unanimous in choosing all-American material, while in others there is certain to be a difference of opinion. Like other mythical elevens, the all-American teams must be fortified in all departments of play, offensively and defensively, and players must be chosen for consistent play throughout the season.

Capt. Arnold Horween of Harvard is chosen for full back and leader of the eleven. The Crimson warrior was one of the factors for Harvard's completing its schedule without a defeat. He played aggressive football in both the Yale and Princeton games, while his work in the other contests was outstanding.

Although Horween is accorded the honor, Crangle of Illinois is a close second. The Orange and Blue full back was a tower of strength to his team all season and one of the best men seen in the west in years at backing up a line. Other full backs who did splendid work during the year were French of the Army, Shelburne of Dartmouth, Hewitt of Pittsburgh, and Garrity of Princeton.

Gipp and Stinchcomb.

Gipp of Notre Dame is placed at right half back. This player was among the stars of the season. He was a natural football player, who could kick, run, or pass. His great playing in the Army game brought forth commendation from eastern football men, who consider him one of the greatest backs of recent years.

The other half back position is given to Stinchcomb of Ohio State, whose great playing brought the western conference championship to the Buckeye institution. Like Gipp, there is little about the game which this sterling warrior cannot do. He was the most agile man of the season on middle west gridirons and is so dangerous that he cannot be left off an honorary selection.

As a field general he ranked with any. His knowledge of the game and with his faculty of choosing plays at proper times were among his great assets. He was a clever handler of the ball and a sure catcher of punts. It is the firm belief of the writer that Stinchcomb is one of the most resourceful players ever developed in the middle west.

McMillin for Quarter Back.

There were some great half backs on other teams. Tom Davies of Pittsburgh was one of the sensations of eastern gridirons. The Panther back is a player of Stinchcomb's type, who may spring loose at any time from any formations. Way and Haines of Penn State, Whitehill of Pennsylvania, Elliott of Wisconsin, Barron of Georgia Tech, Owens and Churchill of Harvard, Beck of West Virginia, and Murray of Princeton were among the other great half backs.

McMillin of Centre college is awarded the quarter back position. The playing of this great warrior in the Harvard game was enough to convince any one he is a performer of the first water. It will be recalled that Harvard had a much stronger line than the Centre forward wall. Still McMillan was able to get away for gains and hurl forward passes in his usual manner. He is fast, knows the game thoroughly, and has played well all season.

Boynton Also a Marvel Pilot.

Boynton of Williams is probably the nearest approach to the Centre star. Boynton was a reliable player last season, but during the last fall was the chief point scorer of his team. Aubrey Devine of Iowa, Lourie of Princeton, Bob Fletcher of Illinois, and Workman of Ohio State are among other sterling men in the position. Workman should be a big factor in Ohio football next season. He was the west's leading forward passer, and with the experience of one year should be at his best next fall.

Carney of Illinois is placed at left end. This player was easily the star of the conference in the position. He was on the receiving end of forward passes and generally managed to get clear of the defense. On defense he was just as strong, and permitted few gains off his side. He covered punts well and mingled in all plays.

Legendre as Carney's Mate.

Legendre of Princeton is placed at the other end. This player was one of the reasons why the Tigers won from Yale and tied Harvard. Fast afoot, fairly heavy, and resourceful, he generally was considered the best flank player in the east.

Weston of Wisconsin, Belding of Iowa, Myers of Ohio State, and Urban of Boston college were among other great players in the flank positions.

Keck of Princeton is placed at left tackle. This player should be a unanimous choice, because he was looked upon as one of the outstanding forwards in the east. Strong, aggressive, and fearless, he was quick to solve an attack, and seldom was kept out of a play. Like other great tackles, he would cut back of his own line to tackle runners who had plunged through on the other side.

Voss a 210 Pound Tornado.

The other position is given to Voss of the University of Detroit. This player weighs 210 pounds and is 6 feet 3 inches tall. Like Keck, he is aggressive and fast for a man of his weight. He blocked punts in most all Detroit's games and on several occasions recovered them for touchdowns.

Sonnenberg of Dartmouth, Coughlin of Notre Dame, McGuire of Chicago, Slater of Iowa, Huffman of Ohio State, Goetz of Michigan, and Stein of Washington and Jefferson were other reliable men in the position.

Tolbert of Harvard and Acosta of Yale are given the guard positions. The former is considered among the best in the east in the position, while Acosta played a steady game all season for Ol[illegible]li. Both are fast chargers and neither permitted much ground to be made through the middle of his line.

Wallace of Ames at Center.

Griffiths of Penn State, Breidster of the Army, G. Penfield of Northwestern, Tierney of Minnesota, Taylor of Ohio State, and McKinley of Oklahoma are among other guards who played consistently during the season.

While there were many good centers, the honor goes to Wallace of Ames, one of the greatest pivots developed in the middle west since Adolph Schulz of Michigan. The player representing the Iowa State college was one of the most expert rovers of the year. He was quick to size up plays and moved to the points of attack for desired results.

H. Stein of Pittsburgh was Wallace's nearest approach. This player was an important cog in Coach "Pop" Warner's machine, offensively and defensively. Alexander of Syracuse, Cunningham of Dartmouth, Depler of Illinois, Bunge of Wisconsin, and Nemecek of Ohio State were other pivot players deserving of mention.

Stars to Attend to Kicking.

Gipp of Notre Dame would do the punting and field goal kicking on this mythical eleven. McMillin would do part of the forward pasing, while Gipp would be used to run or pass on loose formations. Horween would be used for line smashing, with Stinchcomb to skirt the ends or drive off the tackles. Carney and Legendre are past masters in receiving forward passes, as is Stinchcomb. The defensive strength of the team would be too well known for comment.

Stars of Title Winning I. A. C. Quintet Form Team

Local basketball fans will have the opportunity of seeing members of the famous I. A. C. championship five in action this winter. Under the management of Bill Finn, who piloted the tricolored aggregation to three national championships, the team will play its games at the Ashland Auditorium, Ashland avenue and Van Buren street. Paddy Driscoll, who has been stirring up local football circles this fall, will play with the squad, which also includes Billy Feeney, Bill Johnson, Al Pressler, "Moose" Cochrane, Al Marquardt, and Bill Weiss.

BASKET COACHES, NOT THE PLAYERS, MAROON WORRY

Main Assets of Champion 1919 Five Are Back.

University of Chicago basketball players are now at work for the Big Ten season which opens after the holiday vacation. Over sixty candidates responded for the first call, but the squad will be cut to about twenty after Christmas.

A. A. STAGG.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The Midway fans are looking forward to the coming season with mingled hopes and fears. The material is probably the best Chicago has had to start a season in many years, providing the eligibility committee finds all of the stars above scholastically after the fall quarter examinations next week.

No Coach to Replace Page.

But the coaching problem is one that dims the otherwise brilliant outlook. Pat Page, who coached Maroon teams from the time of his graduation in 1910, until after the championship windup last winter, is now at Butler college, and no basketball expert has been hired to succeed him. Instead, an experiment is being made, with four coaches taking charge of the big squad, all of whom are comparative novices at teaching the popular winter sport.

Director A. A. Stagg is head coach of the squad, and while he has never played or coached basketball, he wants to try his hand at the indoor sport. For assistants he has appointed D. L. Hoffer, the maker of champion gymnasts and tumblers; Fred Walker, first football assistant, and Paul Hinkle, all-conference guard for three years and captain of the last year's conference champions.

Capt. Crisler "Made" by Pat.

Fritz Crisler, all-conference back guard is captain of the team. This star football and baseball player knew nothing about basketball when he entered college, but Pat Page taught him to play a spectacular defensive game. Bob Birkhoff, the flashy dribbler, free thrower and basket maker, who also was an all-conference choice last year, is back in form and is ready for his first game. Halladay, center, is the third regular of last season's champions now at work.

Vollmer, the wonder short shot man of the conferences, Curtiss and Williams, all letter men of last year, are expected to report in a few days. Neff, Tatge, Palmer, Hitchcock, and Chuck McGuire—not the Chuck McGuire of football fame—substitutes of Page's last team, also are at work. Strohmeier, Stahr, Yardley, McMasters, Barney, Radcliff and other good sophomores are trying for the varsity quintet.

CRANE TECH WINS 2 AT LA GRANGE

Crane Tech basketball teams scored a double victory over La Grange High at La Grange last night, the heavyweights winning, 28 to 15, and the lights, 14 to 5. Ludvik was high point man in the heavyweight game with four baskets and five free throws. Ocenasek featured for Crane in the lightweight contest, tossing five baskets and a free throw. Schurz High Soccer Team Beats Englewood, 1 to 0

A clean field goal in the twenty minute overtime period, after the game had battled through two regular periods to a scoreless tie, gave Schurz High school soccer team a 1 to 0 victory over Englewood and the undisputed title to the Chicago High School league championship. Winish scored the winning tally, kicking the ball through from a center position. Neveloff played a strong game on the wing position for Schurz, centering the ball to Winish, who made the winning boot.

INTERESTED IN MAKING KIDS HAPPY? HERE'S WAY TO FLOOD LOT

Communities having vacant lots and desiring to convert the same into community skating ponds for the children are requested by Mayor Thompson's ice skating committee to observe the following rules in securing the same:

HOW TO GET A SKATING POND—Get a permit from the mayor's office, have it filled in and signed by the owner of the property and return the permit to room 507 city hall.

HOW TO PREPARE LOT FOR FLOODING—Remove all rubbish. Level the ground by filling in holes and cutting down lumps. Unless the lot is depressed, an embankment 12 to 18 inches high must be dug up.

HOW TO FLOOD LOTS—Be sure there is 2 degrees of frost in the ground, with temperature of 15 degrees above zero. Put on enough water to cover the surface, allowing not more than 2 inches of water to the deepest place. Add about 1 inch of water every two or three days until layer of 6 to 8 inches of ice is attained.

WOODS and WATERS

DUCK HUNTING GOSSIP.

As the season advances, duck hunting becomes more and more a two fisted man's game. Hunting ducks in the early autumn in your shirt sleeves is one thing, but hunting them in the winter is a horse, so to speak, of another color. Cutting your boat's way through the ice to open water, dragging it for seemingly endless yards and yards over frozen mud to get to a good place, rebuilding your blind that some wretch has partially destroyed, setting out and taking in the icy blocks from icy water with icy fingers—these things are all a part of the day's work.

LARRY ST. JOHN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Such hardships are good for a duck hunter's well being, for the old principle of asceticism—punishing the body for the good of the soul—is a good one if not carried too far. But it is not good marshcraft for an active man to sit hour after hour in cold weather in a poorly made blind, without some protection other than clothing.

Whenever possible, permanent blinds should be tight boxes well lined with dry hay, although the club in Oregon with box blinds electrically lighted and electrically heated may be going a bit too far in the way of luxury. Even a temporary blind in bad weather should be more than a makeshift concealment. If you think that perching up in a willow tree in near zero weather is a picnic, arsk me, arsk me!

In the winter the duck hunter's equipment should include a hatchet or belt ax for ice chopping, cutting, and driving blind stakes and gathering firewood. A spool of wire and some pieces of dead grass color khaki, with eyelets sewed on the ends and edges, give one the makings for a good, windproof blind, with the addition of material such as rushes, cattails, and willow limbs found on the spot.

Some people never can get enough socks or arctics on their feet to keep them warm while sitting in a blind, and for these we recommend the carriage heater. You never can imagine how "comfy" one is until you have tried it. A carriage heater is a little, box-like affair of metal, similar in appearance to a medium sized, covered roasting pan, weighing five or six pounds. There is a drawer in one end of it in which the fuel is placed. The latter comes in the form of a small brick which you heat by putting it in the fireplace or stove while you are "bilin" the coffee pot for breakfast.

This heated brick, when placed in the heater, gives out comforting warmth for a good many hours. Old timers may chuckle at the idea—just as they chuckled at the breach loading shotguns—but let 'em chuckle. The earmarks of a good woodsman or marshman is not the ability to rough it, but the intelligence to smooth it.

By this time the tender little teals have nearly all cleared out for fairer climes, but one of the rewards of the late season duck hunter is the coming of the sea ducks, especially the canvas backs and red heads. Mighty fine birds, these, and worthy of some hardships to meet up with.

At one time the canvas back was swiftly nearing extermination on this continent, because eating canvas back duck was a fad among the last generation of millionaires. If we had had our present crop of war millionaires in those days, there wouldn't be a canvas back left to tell the tale.

Fortunately, the law prohibiting the sale of game birds was passed, and the birds have been increasing noticeably ever since. Now, wherever there is a good planting of wild celery these birds are likely to be found in the late autumn and early winter.

The biggest asset in shooting canvas backs, or any open water ducks, for that matter, is a big stool of decoys. They need not necessarily be good imitations of the real bird—if they are oversize, so much the better—but a raft of them will bring in many more birds than the marsh duck hunter's little dozen or so. In some regions they simply tack a wooden head on a shingle painted white, and a big raft of these crude decoys will work as well as any.

Where battery shooting is not permitted—and it ought not to be permitted anywhere—a favorable blind site for canvas back shooting is a long point jutting out into fairly deep water, especially if there is wild celery growing in the vicinity. There is nothing in the law to prevent a smart hunter planting such wild celery near such point if he so desires—a hint to the wise saves nine!

Just another word or so: the call of the male canvas back is a guttural croak, but how many hunters know that the call of the female canvas back is very similar to that of the hen mallard? We discovered this a good many years ago when we had some cripples in our possession. A very judicious use of the duck call will often bring in "cans," but don't overdo it; if they respond at all to calling, just one or two seductive little squawks will turn the trick.

BRICKLAYERS TO BATTLE HARVEY KICKERS TODAY

Sam Hepburn's Bricklayers and Harvey will battle at Bricklayers' park this afternoon to determine which of the two soccer teams will represent the local district in the fifth round of the national cup competition.

On the strength of their record the "mortar slingers" rule favorites. They have played ten games, winning nine, while in the other engagement the Harvey team held them even.

Two Peel cup battles are carded. The game between the Y. M. H. A. and the Simcos of Kenosha has been transferred to Sixteenth street and Cicero avenue. At Riverview park the North Shores of the Second division of the Chicago league will be entertained by the Victorias, leaders of the International league. These teams battled to a tie two weeks ago.

All games start at 2:30 p. m.

BOAKES TAKES RACQUETS DUEL IN FINAL GAME

University Club Pro Defeats Ellis of N. Y.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Coming from behind in the last and deciding game, Harry Boakes Jr., racquets professional of the University club, yesterday defeated Vincent Ellis of the New York Tennis and Racquets club three out of five games at the local club's courts. The scores were: 15—11, 9—15, 16—18, 15—6, and 16—14.

In the deciding game Ellis started like a sure winner. By well placed returns and vicious drives into the corners he led the local expert, 13 to 9, and the large gallery had about given up hope when Boakes rallied and pulled the match out of the fire.

Hard Fight in Third Game.

Boakes also made a great rally in the third game, which the visitor won, 18 to 16. At one stage of this contest Ellis led by a score of 9 to 2, but Boakes finally tied the count at 13-all by some brilliant playing. This game was featured by several interesting rallies, with honors about even.

The local player had things all his own way in the first game, and the decisive manner in which he defeated Ellis forced the impression he would win the match handily. Ellis, however, came back strongly and took the next two games.

Will Play Mullins Here.

It was announced after the match that Boakes will meet James Mullins of the Tuxedo club of New York at the local organization about the middle of January. Summary of yesterday's play:

For PLAYERS of WHIST
by A. R. METCALFE

Poor hands and partner's bad bidding almost always are given as the reasons for losing at bridge. The true reason, however, is almost always play—not bad play necessarily, but ineffective play. Most players lack the punch to get over the one or two tricks that secure game, from hands that are normally not strong enough to produce that desired result easily.

Some excellent examples are shown in the deals which follow:

West secured 10 tricks.

When the dummy went down the declarer could see that he must lose two tricks in the heart suit and the ace of clubs. He might lose two club tricks, which would spoil the game, but he could not allow the opponents to make a diamond, which meant that dummy must trump two of the diamonds in the west hand.

Had the declarer taken the first two tricks with the ace and king of diamonds and then trumped the diamond in dummy, the opponents would have won the fourth trick and led a trump.

It was clear therefore that the declarer must first establish a reëntry for himself, in order that he might trump the fourth round of diamonds before the enemy learned his plan. The lead of the small club from dummy offered at least as good a chance as any of escaping with a loss of but one trick in that suit.

Should south hold the queen of clubs without the ace the queen could not be played, as south would naturally expect the ace to be held by west. It would have been a footless play to lead the jack of clubs from the west hand for a finesse, as the ten was neither in declarer's hand nor dummy.

It would have been still more foolish to attempt to establish the club suit in dummy in the hope of securing discards from the declarer's hand, as dummy would be out of reëntry cards long before that could happen.

At trick eight it was important that a heart be led from dummy rather than a club, as the latter play might have given north an extra trick with the ten of spades.

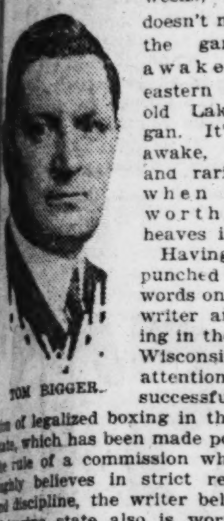
ICHIGAN TESTS LEAN BOUTS AND ACKS THE SPORT

oxing Flourishes Under Bigger's Commission.

BY RAY PEARSON.



TOM BIGGER.

The state of Michigan hasn't made ch noise in a fistic way in recent weeks, but that doesn't mean that the game isn't awake on the eastern shore of old Lake Michigan. It's wide awake, brother, and rarin' to go when anything worth while heaves into view.

Having recently punched out a few words on the typewriter anent boxing in the state of Wisconsin, calling attention to the successful operation of legalized boxing in the Badger state, which has been made possible by the rule of a commission which thoroughly believes in strict regulations and discipline, the writer believes the Wolverine state also is worthy of a few lines.

Sport Is Well Handled.

For be it known that Michigan, while still an infant in the legalized boxing class, has already proved to the satisfaction of everybody concerned that it can handle the game as it should be handled.

Michigan, like the Badger state, has a commission which believes in ruling in a strict manner. The bars are not let down for any one who is inclined to evade or violate the regulations as provided by law, or as laid down by the men who hold the business of boxing in the palms of their hands.

It is necessary to call attention to Tom Bigger, when discussing boxing in Michigan, because Tom, as everybody calls him, is the "works," as they put it in slang parlance. Bigger is a methodical workman in many respects but he is a stickler for law if there ever was one. If the law says that a thing should be done in one particular way, Bigger will see that it is done in that way. That applies to boxing in Michigan as Bigger rules it.

Not a One-Sport Man.

Tom Bigger is not a one-sport man and he is not a "big town man." He makes his home in a community far smaller than Chicago or Detroit, and in his years he has accumulated sufficient of the worldly goods to be rated as successful. His home is in Marshall, but that's shunting off the line of sport.

If you want to hit Tom in his soft spot, just make a crack about trotting horses. That's his hobby, and for years he's been mingling on the oval tracks, for he owns a string of harness nags which he pilots on the circuit. He'd rather drive a winner in a race than eat, and that's no exaggeration.

But along with that, Bigger is strong for other sports, and particularly boxing. That's one reason why he is chairman of the Michigan boxing commission.

Benton Harbor Boxing Center.

Under the guidance of Bigger the boxing game has grown into a mighty successful institution. There are plenty of instances of this. Consider what Benton Harbor—we don't know the exact population, but it is less than [illegible],000—did in a fistic way last summer. Two world's championship fights, in both of which there were knockouts, were held in this little Michigan summer resort. And these two championships, one between heavyweights Jack Dempsey and Billy Miske, and the other between Lightweights Benny Leonard and Charley White, drew approximately $180,000.

Isn't that something to ponder over? Doesn't it show that when big attractions, such as those just mentioned, can be held in a town of Benton Harbor's size, without the slightest difficulties and with smoothness that merits praise, that boxing is a success? It surely is a success in Michigan.

Fitzsimmons a Real Promoter.

That bout between Dempsey and Miske drew something like $135,000, and the Leonard and White fuss netted about $45,000.

These championships were promoted by Floyd Fitzsimmons, who owns a ball park in Benton Harbor. He built an outdoor arena in his ball park that cost $15,000. It will seat something like 12,000 persons.

We almost forgot to mention, too, that Benton Harbor became a great fight center in one summer, despite the fact that transportation facilities to and from the Harbor are far from what they might be.

But we're for Michigan, because Michigan has boxing.

HURRAH FOR BOXING! YALE TO MAKE BIG PLAY IN SPORT THIS WINTER

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—For the first time in college history Yale will this season recognize boxing as a regular winter sport. Matches are being arranged with rival universities for the first time, and the university officials, facing the problem of furnishing seating or even standing accommodations at proposed matches, fear that the foot ball bowl will be the only means of satisfying the crowd. The undergraduates look forward to special trains bringing the crowds to the boxing matches.

EDDIE EAGAN.

Yale will start the season with the recognized heavyweight champion as captain of its team. Eddie Eagan, the cowboy, artilleryman boxer, who has twice won international championships, will represent the university in either the middleweight or the heavyweight class, perhaps both.

Eagan is easily the most picturesque character in amateur boxing. Brought up on Colorado ranches, and getting his boxing training among the cowboys, as well as the professionals of the Rockies, he entered Yale just in time to enlist with the Eli undergraduates for military service in France. After the armistice he took part in the boxing tournament of the American expeditionary forces, winning the middleweight championship. He returned to Yale and represented the university at this and the heavyweight rating in the three bouts held with other colleges last year. His second international match was fought at the Olympic games last August, when he again won the middleweight championship at Antwerp.

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of Tribune fight representatives are:

At Pittsburgh—Harry Greb knocked out Jack Duffy [6].

At Philadelphia—Benny Valger beat Jack Russo [8]; Gus Franchetti and Sammy Robideau, draw [8].

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Harry Greb scored a technical knockout over Jack Duffy of New York tonight in the sixth round of what was to have been a ten round bout at the Motor Square garden boxing arena. Duffy, while not out, was in such condition that the referee stopped the fight. He was clearly outclassed from the first tap of the gong.

In the fifth round the New York boxer went down for the count of five and the bell saved him from a knockout.

LYNCH STAMINA, HERMAN'S 'KICK,' TO CLASH DEC. 22

Manager of Challenger Expects Victory.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Eddie Meade, manager of Joe Lynch, the popular west side bantam, is jubilant as a result of the performances of his clever little charge anad thinks New York is about to annex another championship. Meade is confident that Lynch will defeat the bantam titleholder, Pete Herman, when they clash at Madison Square garden on Dec. 22.

"I think that Joe is set at last to grab off the championship," said the stout manager as he warmed into the discussion. "It has taken us quite some time to reach the position we now occupy, but Joe has been a careful worker and deserves all rewards which are coming his way."

Expect to Beat Herman.

"We expect to beat Herman," continued Meade, "and it would not surprise me if Joe knocked him out. I think the weight situation favors Joe's chances. Herman will have to be there at 2 o'clock weighing 118 pounds and I do not think that he can do this as easily as the challenger.

"Joe has been steering along in a quiet sort of way for some period in the hope of getting on the direct track to the championship. Now the time has arrived, and with Joe at the top of his swing, you just watch our stock from now on. When Joe knocked out Jack Sharkey recently, he showed that he could take it as well as send it over. Sharkey made a wonderful stand and I have nothing but admiration for his game work.

Stickler for Training.

"I never have to worry over Joe's training—he has no dissipations, and is just a home loving boy who pays attention to business and is always in the best of shape when called upon to battle."

"Just mark my words," added Eddie, as he shuffled off. "Joe Lynch is going to be the next bantamweight champion boxer of the world. Keep that prediction in mind."

RIPON NINE PLAYS TURNERS TODAY.

The Ripon A. C. indoor team will clash with the Central Turners at Turner hall, 2046 West North avenue, today. Hogan and Jourdan will be the Ripon battery, with Schuenman and Loewe working for the Turners.

SINAI'S BUDDING SWIMMING CHAMP

RICHARD HOWELL.

Sinai social center has visions of a world's swimming champion in Richard Howell, 17 years, 6 feet 5 inches in height, and weighing 210 pounds. Howell, despite his youth and brief period of service in the ranks of local natators, already has eclipsed Amateur Athletic federation records for the 100, 200, 440, and 880 yard swims and the plunge for distance. That he will shatter some of the present recognized world marks inside another year appears a certainty.

Howell was discovered two years ago by Coach Eckert of Sinai. At that time the boy had nothing in his favor except an aptitude for water. Eckert, however, saw great possibilities in the lad, and steady tutoring in the natatorial arts has brought phenomenal results.

BROCCO-COBURN WIN 6 DAY RACE

New York, Dec. 11.—Maurice Brocco and William Coburn, Italian-American team, won the twenty-ninth International six day bicycle race at Madison Square garden which ended at 11 o'clock tonight. Debaets and Persyn finished second, and Vanhend and Vendenburgh, third.

SUBURBAN TEAMS OF TEN SCHOOLS IN LEAGUE PLAY

Enter Players on Schedules of Two Divisions.

Basketball coaches of the Suburban league have drawn up their schedules for light and heavy weight teams for the coming season. Ten schools have nominated teams in both classes and will play a home and home schedule starting Jan. 7 and closing Feb. 12. The midget class of the league has been dropped.

Activity at New Trier.

New Trier, last year's champion in both light and midget divisions, has had a squad in practice for the last three weeks. The Kenilworth school should be well represented by experienced players for the boys who played on the midget and light weight teams last year are now out for the lightweight team. The heavyweight team will not be as strong as the pony class.

At Oak Park Coach Bunce has had a team on the floor for the last four days. Bunce is aided materially in selecting material for his outfit this year by having the opportunity to get a direct line on the basket tossing abilities of several of the boys who competed in an intramural league which just closed.

Other Strong Teams.

La Grange and Riverside are sure to enter strong teams, while Morton and Evanston are always close contenders for first honors. Following is the schedule:

Cook County Honor Eleven of Prep Stars Is Selected

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

From the splendid material found among the high schools of the Suburban and Chicago leagues one is able to select an all-star football team that would have the weight and class of many a college outfit and still leave unmentioned a sufficient number of classy prep lads to assemble several more all-star teams.

HERBERT STEGER
[Oak Park Captain.]

During the season just closed football in the high schools of Chicago and vicinity was developed to a higher degree than usual. In the Suburban league there were three especially strong teams in Oak Park, New Trier, and Deerfield; while among the Chicago schools Englewood stood many points above all rivals. Probably for that reason one finds, after the selection is made, that the first team harbors six boys from the suburban schools and five from the city.

Three from Englewood.

That Englewood was prominent is shown in that it has three members on the all-star outfit, more than any other school. Oak Park and Deerfield get two places each, while New Trier, Bloom, Hyde Park, and Senn are represented with one. As a special honor for most spectacular performer of the season Steger of Oak Park is named as captain, but he had a close competitor for the honor in Folz of Englewood.

A pair of ends, unsurpassed in years among the preps, is named in Stair of Englewood and Carpenter of Oak Park. The former looked like the best youngster of them all in that position, playing it as one would expect of a fellow who had passed his prep days. Carpenter, besides being sure in defensive play, was a fine punter. For the second team, Simmons of Hyde Park and Schlacks of Proviso were named because of their consistent work throughout the season.

Two Stalwart Tackles.

In Westenberger of Englewood and Bolan of Deerfield one finds a pair of tackles who should gain fame in college, for both have the weight and ability. Abbott of Oak Park and Ryan of Englewood are not far behind them. Wood of Hyde Park and Kerr of New Trier could not be equaled for guards, both being heavy and aggressive, but Baker of Oak Park and Allen of Senn also did splendid line work and are picked for the second eleven.

COOK COUNTY PREP ALL-STAR ELEVEN

FIRST TEAM.		SECOND TEAM.
Carpenter, Oak Park	L. E.	Simmons, Hyde Pk.
Westenberger, Eng'd	L. T.	Abbott, Oak Park
Wood, Hyde Park	L. G.	Baker, Oak Park
Brooks, Bloom	C.	Kennedy, La Grange
Kerr, New Trier	R. G.	Allen, Senn
Bolan, Deerfield	R. T.	Ryan, Englewood
Stair, Englewood	R. E.	Schlacks, Proviso
Folz, Englewood	Q. B.	Helle, Oak Park
McIlwain, Deerfield	L. H.	Smith, Evanston
Steger, Oak Pk. [C.]	R. H.	Brown, Senn
Mueller, Senn	F. B.	Weinecke, N.T. [C.]

Honor for center positions goes to the Suburban league in Brooks of Bloom for the first team and Kennedy of La Grange for the second. No city team possessed a pivot man equal to either.

Without hesitation Folz of Englewood is picked as quarter back, although Helle of Oak Park, named on the second team, is one of the best seen in years. Folz was brilliant in all of his games, especially in running back punts, and he possessed the weight and strength to be more valuable in carrying the ball. Both were splendid field generals, Helle showing much class in handling Oak Park's double shift plays.

Steger and McIlwain Halves.

For half backs, Steger of Oak Park is named for one, though he played full back for his team. In running with the ball he was the star of them all and probably is more sought after by colleges than any prep lad in the middle west. For his mate, McIlwain of Deerfield is given the place. This boy excelled in running, as well as plunging off tackles and has the weight to carry him on. Brown of Senn was a spectacular open field runner, lacking in nothing but weight, and Smith of Evanston looked like the next best.

For the full back position Mueller of Senn was given the honor over two of three splendid rivals, in spite of the fact that in the final game the big Senn boy was practically useless because of an injured shoulder. Dutch has weight, speed, and strength sufficient to star any place.

Weinecke a Crack Full Back.

Weinecke of New Trier was given second honors, though he, too, was a bit off form in the final game. His plunges in other games put New Trier in the championship class. Full backs like Vickers of Englewood and McCarthy of Hyde Park deserve mention.

EVANS ADMITS HE GUESSED WRONG ABOUT BABE RUTH

Billy Usually Right, but Surprised by Slugger.

BY BILLY EVANS.

BILLY EVANS

Do you think Babe Ruth will break his home run record next season? That question has been fired at me time and again since the close of the 1920 campaign.

If there ever was a superman in baseball he is Babe Ruth. If any one can accomplish the seemingly impossible, that person is Bambino.

To break his own swat record Ruth would have to make fifty-five home runs. I think such a feat is well nigh impossible. To the "Colossus of Swat," as some one has aptly termed Ruth, no task is too great from a batting standpoint. I don't believe he will be able to do it. However, Ruth will answer that question next season.

One Time Evans Guessed Wrong.

During the 1919 race Ruth made twenty-nine home runs, which broke the major league record for circuit swats. That was a remarkable feat. The baseball public so regarded it. At the close of the 1919 season many fans asked me what I thought of his chances to break that record. To most of them I expressed my doubts as to the possibility, yet Ruth made almost twice as many circuit drives in 1920, despite the fact that he got away to a bad start.

Because of Ruth's remarkable batting some critics were prone to take away some of his honors, by insisting the American league ball was more lively than the one used in the National league.

Finds Balls Identically Made.

When that rumor first came out it aroused my curiosity. I thought it might be true, even though earlier in the season I had watched the manufacture of both major league balls, and knew they were identical.

To satisfy my curiosity, I, with the umpire who was working with me, procured a National and an American league ball and performed an autopsy. We found the composition to be identical, just as I had observed it in the factory. That killed one theory offered for Ruth's marvelous swat ability.

What then was the answer to Ruth's home run record in 1920? First, I would say the elimination of trick pitching. Only major league batters who have faced the trick deliveries of the star pitchers know what that means.

Pitching Slightly Inferior.

When Ruth stepped into the batter's box last season he had nothing to fear from the so-called trick deliveries. Except when a spitball pitcher was in the box, he knew the pitcher's offering would be a curve or a fast one, with an occasional slow ball. Summing up the situation, I would say slightly inferior pitching, due to the elimination of trick deliveries, was the one big factor in Ruth's remarkable flat of fifty-four home runs.

Prep Athlete Who Seeks Major Fame

"DUD" KING.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Stanley M. King, known to all Kentucky and southern Ohio high school baseball, football, and basketball players as "Dud," star pitcher for the Lexington High school until he graduated last June, has been signed by Charles Comiskey for the rejuvenated White Sox. He will report next spring. King won the state championship for his school last year, and is one of the best all around athletes ever seen on Kentucky fields. He is a right hander. He is a son of Howard C. King, division passenger agent of the Southern Railway station.

PRINCETON SPORT SHOWS DEFICIT; $3,101.53 IS LOST

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 11.—Princeton's athletic year ending July 31 showed a deficit of $3,101.53, according to the financial statement issued by the athletic association. This was due to unusual expenses incurred last year, such as the replacement of the baseball stands destroyed by fire and the reconstruction of the cage.

Baseball, basketball, and football were the only sports to show a profit, which totaled nearly $84,000. Football showed a net revenue of more than $71,000.

Rowing was Princeton's most expensive sport, costing the association $8,341. General and administrative expenses came to a little over $52,000 for the year.

Cambridge, Neb., Dec. 11.—Cambridge High school, 1920 Nebraska champions, may have a chance to meet the Pacific coast titleholders at some western point on Christmas day, according to announcement of Superintendent of Schools J. L. McCommons here today. A telegram from Everett, Wash., High school officials says they will meet Long Beach Dec. 17 and the winner will probably consider a game with Cambridge Christmas day.

WHITE SOX LEAD LEAGUE FOR FULL 18 SEASON SPAN

Giants Hold Similar Position in the National.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

CHARLES A. COMISKEY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

In spite of what has happened in the last fifteen months, Chicago has great reason to be proud of its record in baseball, when inspecting the composite records of the eighteen years since the present major league circuits were fixed.

The White Sox, with all the treachery in their ranks, have assumed the leadership in the American league over that eighteen year marathon course beginning back in the spring of 1903. For more than a decade, Boston's Red Sox maintained a supremacy in the aggregate number of games won, but the Gleason tribe displaced them by a small margin during the campaign of 1920.

Giants First, Cubs Second.

Chicago's Cubs rank second to the New York Giants in total games won, but the National leaguers have won more games than the Sox, in the aggregate. McGraw's men have been out in front of the old league for more than a dozen years, and it is a tribute to the generalship of the Giant leader, because he has been in charge of the team throughout, the entire eighteen years covered by THE TRIBUNE's annual composite standing.

McGraw's record for service is equaled on no other club in either major league except the Philadelphia Athletics, where Connie Mack has been manager for the full period.

The Cubs and White Sox together have won 3,075 games in eighteen seasons, which is more than 100 over the best dual record of any other city which is represented in both major leagues. The Giants, although top notchers individually, cannot offset the fact the Yankees have won only 1,316 games, giving the Gotham teams a total of 2,954.

Quaker City Is Third.

Philadelphia's Athletics and Phillies have won almost an equal number of games, with a total of 2,654 for the two of them, ranking the Quaker City third.

This eighteen year period is not selected arbitrarily out of the history of baseball, in order to make the Chicago teams look good. It is picked because it covers the full span of time in which the present major league circuits have remained fixed. Prior to 1903 the American league made frequent switches in its circuit, and up to 1900 for a spell, the National consisted of twelve clubs.

The figures show that the American league races have been more even on the whole, as the leading White Sox have a grand winning average of only .550 while the St. Louis Browns, the most persistent losers, have an average of .426. In contrast, the New York Giant have won so often in the old league that their total average is over .600, while the Boston Braves have a mark of only .412 for the period.

DIXIE VARSITIES FORM NEW BODY TO GOVERN SPORT

Gainesville, Fla., Dec. 11.—Twelve southern universities took steps here today to form a southern university conference to govern intercollegiate athletics, making what was said to be the preliminary step in their breaking away from the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association.

Action was taken after the S. I. A. A. at its annual meeting last night had voted down the proposed rule that an athlete must be in a college a year before playing on its teams, and had declined to abolish the practice of permitting college athletes to play summer baseball for money.

The twelve institutions are Auburn, Georgia Tech, Georgia university, Alabama university, Virginia university, Maryland university, North Carolina university, Tennessee university, Kentucky State, Clemson, Mississippi A. and M., and South Carolina university. All voted for the one year rule and against summer baseball.

WITH THE GOLFERS

BY JOE DAVIS.

THE annual meeting of the Chicago District Golf association was the most successful in its history. Since its formation several years ago by Francis Peabody the association has increased its scope and is now of great value to the member clubs.

The scope of its work is amply demonstrated in the reports of the various committees. Social interest was manifested in the report of Dr. T. E. Roberts of the Oak Park Country club, chairman of the caddie committee, which showed that approximately 12,000 boys were employed at the member clubs. The committee has done wonderful work in helping these youngsters.

Paul C. Loeber, the new Edgewater president, gave a detailed account of the expenditure of the $1,500 raised for the benefit of the wounded soldiers at Fort Sheridan. Part of the money was spent for Christmas delicacies and part for furnishing a rest room for the boys.

Charles West, retiring president, laid special stress on the success of the tournaments given by the association last year and predicted that the C. D. G. A. open tournament will in time rank with that of the Metropolitan championship.

President Norman C. Naylor has called a meeting for early in January to take up the work for next season.

CORNELL TEAM OFF FOR ENGLAND

U. S. PROSPERITY AT HAND, 'DOLLAR A YEAR' MEN SAY

Labor and Capital Are Optimistic.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Leaders of capital and labor in Washington for the reunion of the war industries board predicted today an early rehabilitation of the industrial life of the nation and that an era of substantial prosperity is at hand.

Conservative optimism was the dominant view of these men who served the government during the war in various important capacities as "dollar a year" men. Clouds of readjustment, in their opinion, are breaking, and before many months business affairs will be on a more substantial basis.

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, a former member of the war industries board, was among the prophets of a better day in the near future.

"In this country," said Mr. Willard, "we have everything we need. We have not been crippled by the war. We have not passed through any disasters. We have not lost a million men. We produce more than any nation in the world. We are the richest country on earth and have the smallest debt. What reason can there be for pessimism?"

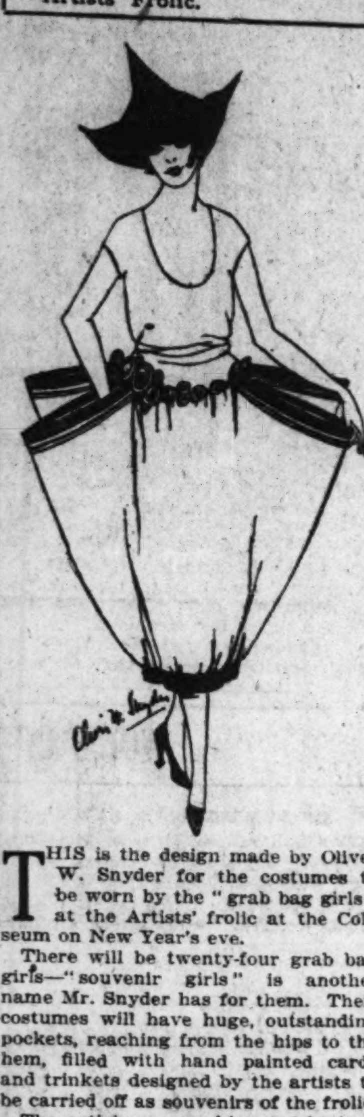
While confident the nation is no danger of industrial stagnation, Alexander Legge, general manager of the International Harvester company, said he felt concern for the farmer who, of all the country's industrial factors, he said, has been hit hardest by the process of readjustments.

Pageant Beauty Honors to Arabian Nights Group

The Arabian Nights group, which was led by Miss Jane Cowl as Scheherazade, won honors as the most beautiful group at the Pageant of the East Friday night, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank announced yesterday. The award was made through a voting contest, the group receiving more than 1,000 ballots. More than $40,000 was realized for the Chicago Lying-in hospital, Mrs. Fairbank declared. The audit will be completed in a few days, when the total profit is expected to be considerably more.

"GRABS!"

Costume Designed by Oliver W. Snyder for Souvenir Girls at Artists' Frolic.



THIS is the design made by Oliver W. Snyder for the costumes to be worn by the "grab bag girls" at the Artists' frolic at the Coliseum on New Year's eve.

There will be twenty-four grab bag girls—"souvenir girls" is another name Mr. Snyder has for them. Their costumes will have huge, outstanding pockets, reaching from the hips to the hem, filled with hand painted cards and trinkets designed by the artists to be carried off as souvenirs of the frolic.

The artists are working to obtain a fund with which to begin a campaign for an artists' colony in Chicago. With the report of the sale of the Tree Studio building many artists were brought face to face with the prospect of being driven from their homes. Artists and the friends of art believe Chicago should have an art center.

NONPARTISANS BEGIN DRIVE TO WIN NEBRASKA

Townley Heads Picked Organizers.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—A. C. Townley and his picked staff of non partisan league organizers have moved on the state of Nebraska for a "steam roller" campaign, which later is to be duplicated in Kansas, Iowa, Wisconsin, and finally in Minnesota and the Dakotas. They figure that the recent slump in the grain market has fanned the flames of discontent and made organizers' work easy in Nebraska.

The annual state convention, which was to have taken place this month, has been postponed until February. By that time it is expected receipts from Nebraska will have swelled the treasury.

To Avoid Past Mistakes.

Methods avoiding the mistakes of the past have been adopted by the league organization, and Townley hopes to come back in Minnesota and the Dakotas. Temporarily, however, these states are left to themselves and to the efforts of county organizers. Townley has established his new headquarters at Grand Island, Neb.

The new Townley plan is to concentrate on one state at a time and do the work with highly trained and successful organizers.

To Work in Far West.

The "steam roller," with Townley himself as engineer, will move from one state to the other. Meanwhile a similar plan will be used on the far western states, with Dewey C. Dorman as chief engineer.

All the best organizers and speakers of the league are being withdrawn from Minnesota and the Dakotas for the winter drive in Nebraska. For this campaign the league recently bought fifty new automobiles of a popular type and Townley has leased an entire floor of the Koehler hotel at Grand Island for campaign headquarters.

FARMER RELIEF MEASURE DRAGS IN THE SENATE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Prolonged debate again blocked action in the senate today on the farmers' relief resolution. Friends of the measure began to grow suspicious that a filibuster was being organized, but opponents denied any such intention. If a filibuster does not develop, indications are the resolution will be adopted Monday.

Senator Smoot of Utah, in today's debate, assailed that section of the resolution directing the federal reserve board to extend liberal credits to farmers at reasonable rediscount rates.

Senator McCumber of North Dakota doubted whether the resolution would afford the farmers much relief. The proper way to give them immediate aid was to shut out imports of grain and wool, he declared.

Approval of the bill of Representative Young of North Dakota authorizing the use of $100,000,000 by the federal land banks in rediscounting notes secured by live stock was given today by Edmund Platt, vice governor of the federal reserve board.

Representative Huspeth of Texas introduced a bill for an embargo on imports of wool, manufactures of wool, wool wastes, and wool in the pelt; fresh beef, veal, mutton, lamb, pork, bacon, and ham for one year.

THE SABBATARIANS.

The attitude of the liberals of the country towards the Sabbatarians is curious. It indicates a recognition of power as if it were understood that unless the blue law advocates could be persuaded to desist, congress and the state legislatures would give what they ask.

One of the leaders in the Sabbatarian movement, a New York clergyman, says that the object is to develop a type of citizenship which spends Sunday in religious meditation at home—except, of course, such time as is spent in public devotion.

This was the approved Sunday habit of twenty and thirty years ago even in cities, and laws were not needed to sustain it. The churchgoing of respectable people took Sunday morning and evening and the leisure of the day at home was subdued by physical restraint and seriousness.

It was not a day of levity, much less of hilarity, and not a day of amusements. If people did not meditate they at least did not engage in occupations they could avoid and they would have been scandalized by merrymaking.

One concession made to the flesh by the liberals was a large Sunday dinner, the eating of which retarded activity for the rest of the afternoon. Even small children were not allowed to romp on Sunday as they did on other days, and if in their playing they made a noise in the yard they were rebuked and suppressed.

It was the moral judgment of the community that the Sabbath was a day of peaceful, religious rest, when the mind turned from worldly activities and recognized a day set apart for spiritual purposes. That is the day which the Sabbatarians wish to bring back.

Many small communities have not proceeded far from it now. They either have maintained the old traditions or they have few activities available. The larger towns and cities have. They have movies, theaters, ball games, automobiles, dances, etc., and use Sunday for amusements for which they do not have time during the week.

It is impossible to compel a citizen to devote himself to religious meditation, although it is not impossible to compel church attendance. For the good of the state we compel children to go to school. The Sabbatarians may say that for the good of the state adults should be compelled to go to church, but the laws sought probably will leave that to the discretion of the citizen. The more zealous advocates may insist upon it, but the moderates probably will be contented if laws are obtained which maintain the Sabbath atmosphere generally in the country.

This can be done by the enforced suspension of week day and worldly enterprises on Sunday, by the elimination of public amusements such as baseball, theaters, and dances, the closing of stores, ice cream and soda fountains, cigar counters, etc., by the suspension of Sunday papers, and by the reduction of all attractions which might divert the attention or take the time of the citizen.

By these suspensions and eliminations Sunday would become a day set apart and its tone would become different from the weekday tone of the community.

These in general, we believe, are the results sought by the Sabbatarians. It is a policy to which the evangelical churches are committed by discipline and it needs only the encouragement given by a chance of success to be pressed strongly. We doubt that the restrictive and regulatory movement in the United States has reached its apex. It already has had unbelievable success and now holds great power. Power is an intoxicant with no area of saturation. It asks for more power, no matter what the purposes involved may be.

The Sabbatarian movement has precedents in American traditions. It has roots in American instincts. What congress will do with it we do not know, but liberals in the United States do not regard it as a negligible issue and are not unconcerned when they think of the effect it may have.

WARNING US AGAINST JAPAN.

Nearly every correspondent in THE TRIBUNE foreign service in Europe and Asia is getting warnings for the United States from foreign diplomats and officials who are not named in the dispatches but whose names are given THE TRIBUNE.

These warnings direct the attention of the American people to the activities of Japan and the probable if not inevitable purpose of them. They have come from Rome, from Paris, from China, etc. The fact that they are issued reveals a condition.

Americans do not understand imperialistic movements and they do not pay much attention to symptoms and premonitions. It may require a great many warnings to make them conscious of the fact that everywhere else in the world except in the United States the relations of the United States and Japan are considered threatening.

The danger might be diminished if Americans understood it. We believe that an accommodation might be reached with the Japanese. We cannot yield them the right to settle as they may please in the United States, but we do not believe they are much interested in that. If they were insistent upon it and intended to demand it we might then expect war as inevitable. We could not have the Japanese in this country in the numbers in which they might settle on the Pacific coast. To allow them in would be to give up that country, virtually. If exclusion meant war we should have to accept war.

We believe that Japan is interested in Asia and not in America and there it ought to be possible to reach agreements which will satisfy any reasonable Japanese demands and not surrender any reasonable American interests.

If neither nation were aggressive on the opposite side of the Pacific the general advantages of peaceful relations ought to prevail against the causes which tend towards war. In such a war the United States would have nothing to gain, or very little, and nothing that could not be obtained by peaceful methods.

It might be disastrous for the Japanese. Thus far they have not had a war disaster, but they are not outside the possible theater of one. We reiterate that the only American protection is American strength and wisdom. When the American fleet again is a unit and when army reorganization has produced an army we'll be farther away from the Japanese danger than we are now.

WHY BE THE DUMPING GROUND OF EUROPE?

Ole Hanson, former mayor of Seattle, brings from a two months' tour of Europe a new warning against the dangers of immigration now confronting the United States. The practical character of Mr. Hanson's patriotism has been amply demonstrated. His views therefore will carry weight with those whose chief interest lies in the welfare of this country.

"Everybody in every country where conditions are bad is trying to get to the United States," he says. "I believe we should shut off immigration and enact laws whereby immigrants will be selected and designated to proper locations in this country."

This strikes at the heart of the immigration evil. Europeans are coming and preparing to come to this country by thousands and hundreds of thousands because they find conditions intolerable at home. They are not coming here with any idea of benefiting the United States. They plan to take from our resources, not to give. They bring nothing except their hands and their appetites. They have neither the means nor the desire to irrigate our deserts, develop our mines, harness our water power, or improve our industrial and political conditions. They plan to settle down in our cities for the most part, taking jobs in factories or conducting small merchandising business.

To that extent, in present conditions, they are worse than a dead loss. They are a growing liability. With hundreds of thousands of persons now out of work in the United States this flood of foreign labor and small shopkeepers is adding constantly to the sum of the idle who must be supported by those at work. They consume without producing. That is fatal to prosperity. If they manage to obtain jobs for themselves they will do so at the sacrifice of Americans whose jobs they take. If they do not better their condition by such means the influences which drive them from Europe will continue to operate among them here. Idleness, poverty, and suffering will not make them good Americans, but bad aliens. The effect upon our affairs can only be bad in any case.

This menacing flood should be checked, and checked immediately. If any part of it is allowed to trickle into the country it should be carefully guided, as Mr. Hanson suggests, into the regions where it is needed. Foreign colonies in our cities must not be augmented. They are handicaps to American national progress at best, and in periods of business depresssion they are a serious menace.

THE AUTOMOBILE AND CRIME.

The automobile has made a new chapter in the annals of crime. By its aid the criminal can cultivate a much wider field of activity, and, what is more important, can avoid or escape pursuit as never before.

In the days of the stage coach the mounted highwayman could get away over lonely heaths, but when the railroad came and travel moved on fixed rails escape become more difficult. The telegraph aided the law, but the railroad even more, because the criminal, if he wished to leave the neighborhood of his crime at once, had to submit to the publicity of a railroad train as a passenger who must pass the scrutiny of the station and train officials or steal a ride with good chance of discovery.

But the automobile avoids that and gives the criminal far more than the mobility of his forerunner, the highwayman. He has at least all the roads at his command and can cover an enormous radius at a speed which almost defies pursuit. With a fair start he can get away from cities and even telegraph stations.

The automobile therefore compels a change in our police methods and facilities. Surveillance of roads must be stricter. In France, where the automobile was at once adopted by bandits, a plan was finally devised by which roads running out of cities were blocked off during certain hours and every one within the block was investigated. By following this plan persistently and thoroughly criminals using the automobile were caught from time to time and the roads were no longer easy exits for retreat. It may be necessary to resort to some such plan in our cities.

Another suggestion is for requiring every one driving an automobile to carry an identification card, with necessary facts and photograph. These could be demanded at any time by the police and would serve as an important check. The card by description of car and driver would establish the right of the card holder to be driving the car.

Rules and regulations are irksome to Americans. We would rather take a chance with a criminal than be subjected to casual annoyance by a police officer. So whatever is applied as check upon crime or in aid of the law must be made as little troublesome to the public as possible. If it is too exacting it will not be enforced. But the automobile in crime has become too dangerous an element of contemporary society to be met by the methods of past times. It offers a problem hard to solve.

Editorial of the Day

SHUT THE GATES!

[Cincinnati Times-Star.]

Representative Johnson, chairman of the house committee on immigration, has for some time been probing around on Ellis Island, New York, and in other spots whither come the motley streams of aliens from across the seas. Mr. Johnson has interviewed agents and consuls and dozens of other men who know something about our grave immigration problem. As a result of these investigations Chairman Johnson has become an earnest advocate of such early and effective action by congress as will dam up the human flood, at least until its units can be directed and assimilated in a proper manner.

Chairman Johnson points out that the emergency passport law, which has been a partial check on undesirables, will cease to be operative March 4. He is convinced that congress will not have time before that date properly to consider and pass upon a permanent law. It will be necessary then, the chairman says, to pass a temporary measure which summarily will stop all immigration until congress shall have worked out the whole problem on a lasting basis.

The sentiment of the country is overwhelmingly in favor of some such action. Unless the bars are put up the United States will soon be swamped by a deluge of aliens. Already hundreds of thousands of aliens have reached our shores, and unless something is done the United States will become an international dumping place. A duty rests upon the lawmakers of America to prevent such a catastrophe.

Sir: Probably not less than 50,000 automobiles cross the Boul Mich bridge every twenty-four hours. If the use of this structure, as compared to the old Rush street bridge, effects a saving of ten minutes for each machine, this means that 500,000 minutes, or 8,333 hours, which under former conditions would have been wasted, may be spent in perusing Clara Smith Hamon's diary.

IF we print a paragraph about crime in Chicago, the other newspapers which do us the honor of publishing the Line change the name Chicago to that of their own town. This adds local color, besides evidencing that Chicago is not peculiar in the matter of crime.

BETTER PUT THE HOUNDS ON THIS, WATSON.

Mrs. J. C. Beaver reported the loss of a $50 mink coat at a local theater, yesterday. Detectives are working on a clew.

TWO things which have power to exalt what we are pleased to call our soul are music and the trackless forest. The first, fortunately, we can always have, but the second is increasingly difficult to come at; sometimes we suspect that we shall never again dip paddle in the Lethean streams of the northland. Lethean they truly are. With the first draught of those waters one forgets everything that lies astern, and all one's thoughts drift northward.

This and That.

Sir: While snooping through Virginia we stopped off at Norfolk and took the ferry over to Newport News. It was a misty, moisty morning, and our kicks were smudgy. Observing a couple of little colored boys with shoe-shining kits standing near I summoned them to the task in hand. They came grinningly. "Well, Archie," said I quippishly to the smaller and younger of the two, "how's every little thing on the briny?" "Ev'thing's all right, suh," replied the lad, "but mah name it ain't Ahchie—it's Joe—Joe Jenkin, suh." "Well, Joe," further jocosed I, wishing to show f. w. just how facetious I could be on occasion, "do you indulge much in maritime pleasures?" "No, suh, I doesn't," replied Joe; "I ain't old enough yet, boss."

What I really had in mind to tell you was that the Little Gem Restaurant at Romney, W. Va., advertises out in front, painted on brick, "Try our ice cream—it's cold as charity." I did and it was not. Likewise, sir, it might interest you to know that at Morgantown, Wildman & Swindler actually are in business there, selling stocks and bonds. And, by the way, had you been told that in front of Lew Keim's Old Inn at Elkins is a sign reading "Try Our Meals, Al A Carte?" Is it not possible that Al is kin to the w. k. French cuisinist, A. La Carte? Also in Elkins under-the-breath profanity is permitted. Leastwise in the Bon Ton poolroom there hangs a placard warning "No Swearing Aloud." Yes, yes, go on.

ARE YOU SQUARE WITH YOURSELF?

EVERYBODY is more or less lopsided; some more, others less.

It lies within the power of most of us to lessen materially and sometimes to wholly overcome this lopsidedness. Practically every one has a good eye and a bad one. A great many people are blind in one eye without suspecting the fact. Practically all the cross eyed and cock eyed people are blind in one eye. Therefore, no case of squint should be neglected.

Practically every one has a good ear and a poor one. Something can be done to improve the hearing in a moderately poor ear.

Rarely are the face and head symmetrical. Hat makers who build special hats for members of high society learned that a long time ago. But no one should conclude from that that the rich and otherwise mighty are the only people with lopsided heads.

Lombroso taught that a head or face cut on the bias was a sign of criminality. But it is generally agreed now that Lombroso was wrong and that heads and faces devoid of complete symmetry are found among the rich and poor, preachers and thieves, the high and the low. We cannot change the shape of our heads by changing our habits.

One hand and one arm generally is larger than the parts of the corresponding member on the other side. The glove makers and sellers know that well. This is because of unequal use. This difference can be corrected by changing habits.

There are all sorts of wild notions about the harm of changing from righthandedness to lefthandedness. Of these about 95 per cent is fiction and 5 per cent fact. But no one ever has found any objection to making a considerable increase in the use of the relatively unused arm and hand. The muscles of the left arm and hand are good, even though they are overlooked. Baseball is the one sport which stresses the difference between righthandedness and lefthandedness, and the proportion of left handed pitchers is larger than the proportion of lefthanded people in the general population.

The right shoulder generally is a little lower than the left. This is because the right arm is used more. The coat makers know that the shoulders are uneven and the spine generally crooks improperly. The American Posture league says a part of this is due to constant pull by the coat, and they have something to say about the cut of coats. They also say that much of it is due to school desks and school books. Eugene Sue describes vividly how constant one sided work makes the workman one sided.

The shoemakers know that the feet rarely are of the same size. For seven years Dr. W. L. Estes has examined several hundred boys, 16 to 20 years of age, as they entered Lehigh university. His examination covered length and size of the legs. Whenever the two legs are not of the same length a slight twist in the backbone is very apt to develop. He found that from 10 to 20 per cent of these boys had slight twists in their backbones. In 1917 the proportion went over 40 per cent, but that was because the draft had taken away the straighter standing boys and left the culls behind.

In a large portion of this group the legs were not equal in length. Frequently the trouble was due to flatfoot. In many cases it was due to the habit of standing with the weight thrown on one leg. Sometimes standing with one foot elevated a la bar rail was responsible.

BETTER BE EXAMINED.

Mrs. H. S. writes: "(1) In the last month I have been bothered with a small lump on my left side where my limb joins my body. It came all of a sudden and was swollen considerably and is sore to the touch. The lump seems to be getting somewhat smaller but still is sore. Can this be anything serious? (2) What causes a burning sensation while urinating, and what can be done for it?"

REPLY.

1. Bubo is probable. Hernia is possible. Have your physician decide.

2. It seems probable you have an infection which is responsible for both the bladder trouble and the swelling. It should not be neglected.

HONEY NOT GOOD FOR YOU.

C. D. B. writes: "1. Will you please tell me if pure honey is harmful to a person with sugar diabetes?

"2. I have been ill two months and have brought the sugar down from 5 per cent to 2 per cent. If I went to a hospital and took the Allen starvation treatment, when I was discharged could I completely cure myself by living on a diet? How long would I live if careful and no other complications set in? I am 26 at present.

"3. Would California be a better place to live than here (Cleveand)?"

REPLY.

1. Yes. About thirty years ago Minkowkiski, who did much research work in diabetes, said he thought diabetics could eat honey. His standing caused many people to accept his statements. About twenty-five years ago Von Noorden proved that Minkowkiski was wrong. Mandel, Lusk, Nef, and others confirm this opinion. Do not eat honey.

2. Many people learn to keep their sugar under control as the result of going to a hospital for a course of instruction and then following directions.

3. Climate is a factor of secondary importance.

IT'S SERIOUS CONDITION.

W. E. J. writes: "How can I cure an acid stomach? I have been having pains for the last six months, and I am losing weight fast. On a doctor's examination I was told I had a highly acid stomach."

REPLY.

Pains in the stomach lasting six months, rapid loss of weight and acid stomach are symptoms which suggest some serious condition, probably cancer. Have a thorough examination made at once.

HAVE YOUNGEST CHILD EXAMINED.

Mrs. I. D. writes: "I have a boy 3 years old, another 2, and a baby 9 months. They are all suffering from whooping cough. They have had it since Sept. 1. I have given them a certain cough remedy, probably patent, and discontinued it, hearing that any remedy for this disease is fruitless. Is there any danger in not giving the children anything at all? My youngest child has contracted bronchitis also. What is good for him and what for the older ones? Is bronchitis contagious?"

REPLY.

Whooping cough which has lasted twelve weeks is no longer contagious. It requires no treatment. Whooping cough is a self-limited disease and gets well without treatment. It would be safer to have your youngest child examined for evidences of lung trouble.

IT GIVES PATIENTS RELIEF.

Mrs. O. S. writes: "I have read that a woman suffered with asthma and took from five to ten minims adrenalin hypodermically, which relieved her immediately. I certainly would appreciate it if you would kindly let me know what this medicine is and where I can get it."

REPLY.

Adrenalin is made from the adrenal gland of some food animal. This gland is located near the kidney. It is a ductless gland the secretion of which is absorbed directly into the bloodstream. Adrenalin has long been used as a remedy for asthma. It gives relief, but does not affect the cause of the trouble. As an agent for giving relief it has no superior.

EYESORE CURED.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—[Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me on the following: My neighbor has recently been dumping his coal ashes alongside his own home, however, in my gangway, and inasmuch as my house is located at the rear of the lot, it not only gives a sore eye to the premises but also the ashes piled up along the building will cause the water to drain under the walk, which will destroy the foundation in time. Must a taxpayer put up with this? F. J. L.

The owner of the property adjoining was banking up his house with ashes, not thinking any objection would be made. He has promised to discontinue.

CLAIM TO ALIMONY.

Chicago, Dec. 6.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is a woman entitled to alimony when her husband leaves her, even though there are no children?
ANXIOUS.

Yes. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RETAINER PAY DUE.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 8.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I should like to know how to secure my retainer pay from the navy. I enlisted in the naval aviation as seaman in July, 1917, and was commissioned in February, 1918. I was released from active service in January, 1919, but have never received any retainer pay, although I am still in the reserve force. At the present time I receive notices, etc., from the Great Lakes training station. How will I go about collecting this money?
F. J. C.

It is possible that your check has been returned to the Washington office with hundreds of others which could not be delivered on account of incorrect address. Suggest you write to the retainer pay section, navy allotment office, bureau of navigation, Washington, D. C., giving all identifying information and your present correct address.

EVERYBODY'S CHANGING HIS NAME.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—For a long time I have been contemplating sending to Washington, D. C., to ask about changing my name. I thought it was necessary to do so. A friend just told me that he has seen in your department the advice where it is not necessary to even have legal proceedings to have one's name changed. Please tell me what to do. My name is seventeen letters long and I want a short one. M. D.

No legal proceedings are required to make a change of name valid. It is sufficient if you use the new name and give notice of change to those persons to whom the information may be material. In transactions in which your old name appears we suggest that you continue to use it to avoid confusion. For example, if real estate records show title in you under the old name, when you come to sell you should use the same name.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

ON SUNDAY BLUE LAWS.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your editorial columns of today's paper you comment at length on "Laws for Sunday." To my mind such a law, if carried to the extreme, would not only strike at the constitutional, personal rights of the individual, i. e., "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States," but more so at the religious rights, i. e., "Congress shall make no law respecting an abridgement of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." There are in this land religionists who respect Saturday as a Sabbath day, a day above every other day of the week, and were some of the well meaning ones of the Jewish and Adventist faiths to take a similar action much danger would result.

A rereading of the eighth chapter of First Corinthians may also help some of these evidently well meaning people to change their views. A. E. FRANZ.

WHEN PERSONAL LIBERTY CEASES.

Chicago, Dec. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What a joke this U. S. A. is getting to be.

My grandfather was an old timer in Boston, Mass. I have always been a patriotic American. Served in the great war. Am rooming in the Wilson avenue district.

Now consider the case of myself and thousands like me:

The cranks have closed up all the normal places for a man to go. The pool rooms are liable to be raided. Nothing left but the movies.

I stopped to get a paper at the "L," and light a cigaret. A policeman passed, eying every one about. I then went down to a movie house. Stood out in front for a minute and finished the cigaret. This officer came over to me and in a very loud voice demanded to know what I was doing, etc.

Now I am a steady worker and a respectable dresser, and mind my own business. When I get tired of staying in my room and want to stand on the street corner to get some fresh air, some copper comes along and horns in.

Is this a free country? No. It is not, and if this country goes to it with Japan, why I, for one, am going to let the coppers, the prohibitionists and all the other lizards that are making a big jail of this country, why, I am going to let them do it.

The common people of this country are getting tired of having every nasty nice crank tampering with their personal liberty, and as sure as shooting, if things don't change there will be a big blow-off in the future. Let the reformers reform themselves. ARTHUR FOLEY.

SPEAKING OF "BEAMS" AND "MOTES."

Chicago, Dec. 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial "The Church and Crime," appearing Dec. 1, says: "If the churchmen of the city will take upon themselves the energizing of public opinion so that faithful officials will be protected from attack." The impression created is that the pastors of Chicago were not doing their duty along the lines of civic righteousness. You must remember the preachers of Chicago ordinarily reach the masses twice a week organizing their "flocks," as you state, in opposition to crime and for law enforcement. Great credit is due them for what has been accomplished along uplifting lines when we take into consideration the demoralizing attitude of the press, especially THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE reaches the masses every day in the year and is a big factor in the molding of public sentiment. "Take the beam out of your own eye before taking the mote out of the eyes of others." For instance, eliminate your B. L. T. column with its demoralizing suggestive squibs and replace it with quotations on law enforcement by men like Lincoln or use it to educate along the lines of good citizenship instead of looking with disgust upon the violations of the Volstead and the state search and seizure prohibition laws, which have caused more crimes and demoralization of the Chicago police than any other law violations. JOHN W. LANGLEY.

CABINET TALK.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The New York Herald says: "We have watched for fifty-five years, since Lincoln, to see a president come to Washington who would select a cabinet without reference to a second term. We do not know if Harding is this kind, but we hope so."

Let us, however, take Senator Harding at his word, that he is "for America first." I am going to believe it; what is more, no one can shatter that belief save Harding himself. He is certainly a believer in the party system, and, further, one who would stand by a friend. Yet withal I count him sincere and in reality "for America first."

Without even in the remotest sense desiring to offer one word as for or against any of the other notable men whose names have been suggested, some of whom I regard most highly, how would it be if President Harding announced as follows at his inauguration:

Secretary of state—Elihu Root.
Secretary of the treasury—George E. Roberts.
Secretary of war—Lindley M. Garrison.
Secretary of commerce—Harry A. Wheeler.

And, on the basis of that quartet measuring the other cabinet selections likewise, may one opine that on March 5, 1921, the country, and all otherwise, would conclude that he did in fact stand for America first, and that a second Lincoln had come upon the scene?
P. J. O'KEEFFE.

BUT HOW SHALL WE GET THE IMMIGRANTS ON TO THE FARMS?

Chicago, Dec. 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—THE TRIBUNE, under the headline "Importing Misery," discusses immigration in its editorial of Nov. 15, stating that if the government has any consideration for America it will act promptly to check it. It appeals to Mr. Gompers and the American Federation of Labor to protect the American workers and the country at large.

Is immigration a danger to this country? Let us see! The labor unions depend upon the strength of their numbers, whose majority are foreigners. The American worker prevails more in the field of mechanics, clerical work, government service, or a hundred and one other pursuits not within the reach of the immigrants. Common labor is done by immigrants. Skilled labor, shut up in its union and arrayed against immigration, is only undermining its own strength. The idea that a high standard of wages can be maintained by barring immigration is erroneous. The vast lands in the various states of this union that are not sufficiently populated and remain uncultivated cry for more people to come in and get busy. The mines of wealth and abundant resources stored away beg for more human brains and muscles to work and produce for the good of America.

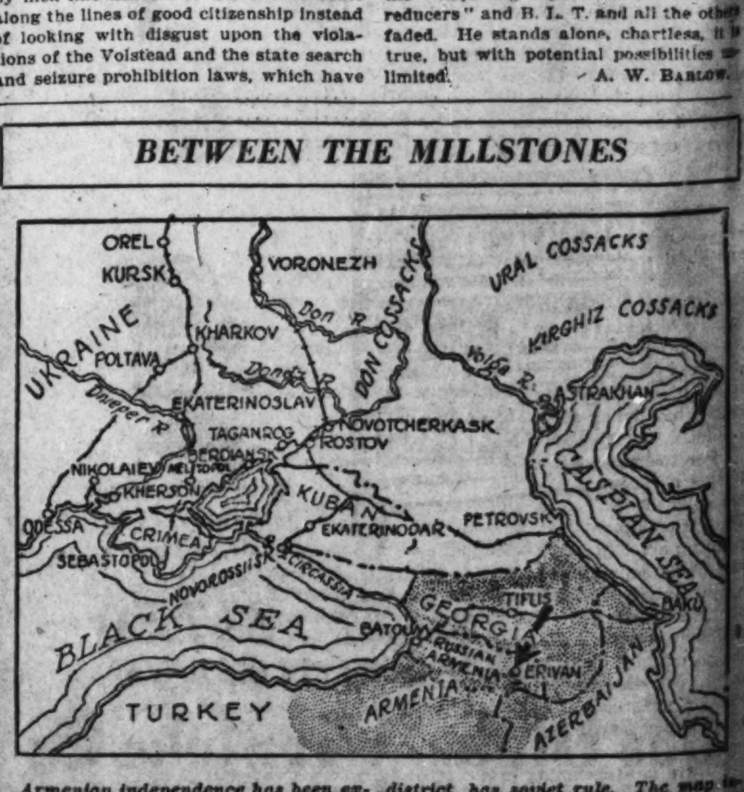
The history of the United States, its growth and success as a world power are due to immigration.

The government of the United States should legislate not against but for immigration. Admit all who seek here a permanent home and wish to work.
ALBERT L. OCUS.

"THE HUNTING REPORTER."

Chicago, Dec. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In the writer's opinion the "hunting reporter" in search of politeness is going to develop into a very interesting and useful personage or institution. Fifty dollars a day is rather a stiff price, but politeness is worth any price. There is little competition in the field of politeness now, but let us hope that some may be developed by this public service scheme of THE TRIBUNE. Your "hunting reporter" is a favored individual. He has the "inquiring reporter" and the "fat reducers" and B. L. T. and all the others faded. He stands alone, chartless, it is true, but with potential possibilities unlimited. A. W. BARLOW.

BETWEEN THE MILLSTONES



Armenian independence has been extinguished, reports from the near east assert. The Turks have retaken all of old Armenia proper, with added burdens to its people. The Russian Reds are advancing from the north, and it is reported that Erivan, the last free district, has soviet rule. The map indicates the regions of Armenia and Georgia in the Caucasus. They aspired to be free, but have been engulfed beneath the forces of Lenin and Trotsky on one hand and Mustapha Kemal on the other.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's six best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Mary Wollaston" [Bobbs Merrill], by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"The Age of Innocence" [Appleton], by Edith Wharton.
"Main Street" [Harcourt, Brace and Howe], by Sinclair Lewis.
"Caliban" [Harpers], by W. L. George.
"Mitch Miller" [Macmillan], by Edgar Lee Masters.
"The Captives" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.

NONFICTION.

"Outline of History" [Macmillan], by H. G. Wells.
"Margot Asquith: An Autobiography" [Doran].
"Letters of William James" [Atlantic Monthly Press].

Last week's six best circulators in the public library were:
"Mary Wollaston," by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Steeplejack," by James Gibbons Huneker.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"The Age of Innocence," by Edith Wharton.
"Enemies of Women," by Blasco Ibanez.

"THE TIGER IN THE HOUSE" is the only really exhaustive volume on cats which has ever been written in America, and its appearance just now in a handsome edition limited to 2,000 copies should solve the Christmas gift problem for any one interested (1) in cats, (2) in art, (3) in literature, (4) in music, (5) in drama, (6) in folklore, (7) in the law, (8) in charming writing by a person who dresses up esoteric facts in the gayest carnival garb. Carl Van Vechten, who has been writing for about ten years the pleasantest and the most illuminating volumes about music and the allied arts (a person too little appreciated!), has, in "The Tiger in the House," made not only a real contribution to a subject upon which little has ever been written, but he has written literature itself.

I am one of the dwellers in the outer darkness (according to Mr. Van Vechten) who say, "No, I don't like cats; I like dogs." I have never felt any depth of affection for a cat, though I have often realized the sensuous beauty of a lovely Persian as it stretched itself on the one pillow in the whole collection which formed the best background for its own exquisite coloring. (It's uncanny, their sense of color.) I cannot imagine having a cat for a comrade, the sort of honest, self-respecting but devoted friend that my dog is to me.

A book about cats, even by Carl Van Vechten, intrigued me only mildly, if at all. But when I began to read it . . . "The Tiger in the House" is absolutely fascinating. As a matter of fact, it is a treasure house. The little scraps of literary gossip in it alone make it absolutely indispensable for any one who likes to explore the hedgy bypaths of an author's life and thoughts. I wouldn't be without it for anything!

Russet George, the colorful, vibrant wife of W. L. George, the lovely picture of glowing happiness, will make in Texas a "spot that is forever England." Such things cannot happen —and yet such things do happen. Stricken in Houston, Tex., she died after an illness of a week, and she will be buried there. Those who were fortunate enough to meet her will never forget the brilliant beauty of her, the warmth and sweetness of her personality. No writing man ever had a helpmeet more truly helpful in the meeting of life. Mr. George will return to England immediately. I still feel that there must be some mistake about it all. Such things cannot happen!

"American Towns and People" is two-thirds of Harrison Rhodes' fall line of literature. "High Life" is the other third. They are both rather jolly, both written with sophistication and charm, both typically Harrison Rhodes. "American Towns and People" tips the scale at two-thirds because it is a book which will be found on the family library shelves even when the library shrinks to two glassed monoliths guarding an imitation fireplace in an apartment hotel.

It is, in other words, a "pretty" book, which will be rescued from the annual dust heaping on account of its impressiveness. As a matter of fact, it's very good reading, discriminating and amiable criticisms of American towns and American customs, charming little essays with enough honest observation in them to make them stimulating but not heady. "High Life" is a collection of short stories of the most frivolous, sophisticated kind, with the jaunty charm of making nothing in particular seem alluringly gay or pleasantly sad.

Mr. Rhodes was in town a couple of weeks ago, a person exactly like his work—charming, sophisticated, and much less inconsequential than he—and it—pretends to be.

"Plays for Merry Andrews" is the latest of Alfred Kreymborg's jestings. There are five plays after the manner made known, if not violently popular, in "Six Plays for Poem Mimes," much better acting versions than one might suspect on first reading. They have quick antiphonal speeches, clever, but not too esoteric characters, and are genuinely amusing in the reading, which argues well that they might be extremely so in the playing. There is one snappy drama of Varrick street in Greenwich village, in which the florist wagers that he can go to sleep in the undertaker's pet coffin within five minutes of the time of hopping into the box. It's called "Uneasy Street" and it's really awfully funny. Alfred Kreymborg has a Merry Andrew's soul.

"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Dogs" is a little Christmas story by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott. It is not, so the author warns the reader, for any one who doesn't like Christmas or dogs. It is Eleanor Hallowell Abbott at her most characteristic. It is about a girl, age 18, name Flame, intentions honorable, four dogs, ages unknown—except Miss Flora, aetat 2; one cat, with vital statistics lacking; fine intentions, also honorable, but a trifle muddled by instinct, a Christmas party, two unexpected visitors, and—but if you like the Eleanor Hallowell Abbott school of fiction why say more?

Burns Mantle's "The Best Plays of 1919-'20" is the first of an annual "Best Plays," after the example of Edward J. O'Brien's "Best Short Stories" and William Stanley Braithwaite's "Anthology of Magazine Verse for 1920," which is just out also. Mr. Mantle—he is the New York dramatic correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, too, you know—not only chooses what he considers the ten best plays, but gives a complete synopsis of each, with generous quotations, and compiles statistics about all of the plays produced during the season.

The 1919-'20 tithe to art were: "Abraham Lincoln," "Clarence," "Beyond the Horizon," "Declassee," "The Famous Mrs. Fair," "The Jest," "Jane Clegg," "Mamma's Affair," "Wedding Bells," and "Adam and Eva." So many eager souls have asked for "Declassee" to read that Mr. Mantle's synopsis of it is a blessing. Of the ten there are published in book form only "Abraham Lincoln," by John Drinkwater; "Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill, and "Jane Clegg," by St. John Ervine.

Speaking of John Drinkwater reminds me of two new small books by him which have just come from Houghton Mifflin—"Pawns," a collection of one act plays in heroic verse—more like Wilfrid Wilson Gibson's early work than any other short plays I have read, and "Lincoln, the World Emancipator," a sketchy but sympathetic interpretation of the internationalism of Lincoln.

"The Elfin Artist" is Alfred Noyes' latest volume of poetry. It contains his famous "The Victorious Dead" and "A Victory Dance." The third volume of his "Collected Poems" is also on the book tables. And, to complete the trilogy of his fall books is a short story bound in boards, called "Beyond the Desert," the story of an I. W. W. leader, escaped from prison, who was lost in Death Valley.

"The Peace Tangle," by John F. Bass, is a necessary book about that subject which has already been written ragged. It is necessary for the ordinary unpolitical reader because it gives in words of one syllable—as it were—not only a clear statement of what actually happened at the conference and the aims of those fateful weeks, but, with honesty and a sincerity founded on economic principles as well as on association with all of the peoples concerned, a record of the immediate effect of the treaties and a forecast of the future effects. It is the sanest exposition of the blunders of the conference that I have read. It lacks the fire and the brilliance of Keynes' "Economic Consequences of the Peace," but it has a sort of dogged reality which somehow is extremely convincing.

For the person interested in world politics it is important not so much because it expounds a political policy as because it is a solid index of the reaction of an honest, tried, and respected journalist to the tricks of their trade. There is too much bleating about the immoral influence of the press, too much yahooing about its mob wielding, and too little real understanding of its fundamentally sound influence.

Mr. Bass—and he speaks with the tongues of all of the sensible thinkers of our time—says that if the knot which tied the bag of the doings of the peace conference and which protected the black cat so thoroughly had been loosened the cat mightn't have had all of the trouble making litter of kittens that finally popped out when the bag was opened. (I hasten to add that Mr. Bass doesn't mention black cats and their offspring. He is a serious and sedate writer. But he says just that in reality.)

There is a charming group of de luxe books this fall from the presses of Doubleday Page & Co. They are called 377, which means that 377 numbered copies of each title are in existence.

There is, first of all, "One Day More," the play by Joseph Conrad which created such a disturbance among the critics last year when it was brought out in a limited edition privately printed in England. It is autographed by Conrad.

Then there is "The Feet of the Young Men," Kipling's poem, illustrated by photographs which were taken and collected by Louis R. Freeman, whose "The Track of the Trades" is one of the distinguished Christmas books this year. It is a book—the 377 one, I mean—which will be sought by collectors, as, of course, all of the series will be.

Then there is "O. Henryana," which contains, among other interesting fragments, the "Crucible," a lyric which was originally intended for the musical comedy which O. Henry wrote with F. P. A.

Finally there is William McFee's "The Six Hour Shift," autographed.

The books are handsomely bound, though fragilely, with white vellum corners and backs.

Another rare item which many of us wish we might find in our Christmas surprises is the limited Conrad. It is to be brought out in England with the Heinemann imprint—autographed and with special introductions written by Conrad. Here it will be sponsored by Gabriel Wells.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

MORAL.

By Alfred Tennyson.

So, Lady Flora, take my lay,
  And if you find no moral there,
Go, look in any glass and say,
  What moral is in being fair.
O, to what uses shall we put
  The wildweed-flower that simply blows?
And is there any moral shut
  Within the bosom of the rose?

But any man that walks the mead,
  In bud or blade, or bloom, may find,
According as his humors lead,
  A meaning suited to his mind.
And liberal applications lie
  In Art like Nature, dearest friend;
So 'twere to cramp its use if I
  Should hook it to some useful end.

ANTI-CRIME BODY SEES BENEFITS IN STATE POLICE

Autos Aid Crooks in Rural Sections.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 11.—[Special.]—The American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology has just added its recommendation in favor of state police. This is an organization interested in the suppression of crime, with no ax to grind nor political boss to obey. Its sole purpose is public service.

It recommends "that the members of the institute actively coöperate in educating the public, and especially the legislatures, of their respective states with respect to the nature, methods and value of a state police force."

This institute also urges "a state bureau of criminal investigation and identification, similar to that of California, be established in every state, irrespective of the existence of a state police force."

Written by Prof. Ray.

The report was written by Professor P. O. Ray of Northwestern university. He undertakes to define and describe a state police force in the following paragraph:

"A state police force is a specially organized and highly trained body, acting under state rather than local authority, and constantly employed in the prevention of crime, the apprehension of criminals, and the protection of life and property generally throughout the state and especially in the rural and sparsely settled districts. In most states the state police force is organized on a military basis and distributed over the entire state in small groups for patrol duty, but quickly mobilized in larger units in an emergency. In the selection of such a force the greatest care is taken to eliminate political considerations and to secure persons with the highest physical and moral qualifications and with more than average intelligence."

Need of Rural Protection."

On the reasons for a state police force he says one is the "increasing consciousness on the part of dwellers in rural and suburban districts of a need for a greater degree of police protection for life and property."

He goes on: "The coming of the automobile and improved highways has vastly widened the range of activity of the criminal classes, especially the small postoffice thief, the bank and safe robber, the automobile thief and the pickpocket, and at the same time the apprehension of these offenders by the local peace officers has been rendered much more difficult. Furthermore, women and children on farms and in sparsely populated suburban communities are more or less continuously exposed to crimes of violence."

Use for Sheriffs.

He says that sheriffs, deputies and constables "perform useful functions in serving court processes, but in capturing criminals, preventing crime, maintaining order and protecting life and property, they are often least dependable when most needed. Chosen primarily for political or personal reasons and by popular election, they seldom have or develop any special fitness for enforcing laws and doing police duty."

As an argument in favor of a state bureau of criminal identification and information the professor says that the California bureau in the first six months of its existence identified 227 criminals and recovered stolen property valued at more than $19,000, which exceeded the cost of maintaining the bureau by $6,000. In its first biennial report, period ending June 30 last, this bureau is credited with identifying 2,550 law-breakers with previous criminal records and with recovering stolen property valued at $703,037. That is twenty times greater than the cost of maintaining the bureau.

The Pennsylvania legislature last year also made an appropriation for the establishment and maintenance of a bureau, but the report of its work is not now available.

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

Eaton Priddy post has elected the following officers: Commander, Charles Z. Henkle; vice commander, Carlon V. Cronkrite; finance officer, Benjamin H. Weisbrod; sergeant at arms, Saul B. Kramer. The 1921 dues were fixed at $5 and are now payable to Benjamin H. Weisbrod, room 549 The Rookery, 209 South La Salle street. The meeting was preceded by a dinner at the Del Prado hotel.

Chicago Loop post, No. 144, at its last meeting passed a resolution denouncing the move of reform societies for Sunday blue laws, and calling upon the press to oppose such movements.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Vaughn, Mabel C. Lawrence, Attorney Frank Commerford, Lieut. W. C. Wagner, and others are on the program for the 1st tank corps post's annual meeting and banquet on Dec. 16, in the Aviation club of Chicago, at 139 North Clark street.

North Shore post will hold a social, smoker, and entertainment in its headquarters in the Broadway armory on Dec. 16. Invitations have been sent to disabled ex-service men in the Marine and Fort Sheridan hospitals. There will be boxing contests, wrestling bouts, vaudeville, and soloists.

The executive committee of the new Legionnaires' club, the consolidation of seventy posts of the American Legion in the loop district, was appointed Friday by Arnold Joerns, president. The committee consists of P. D. Edmonds, H. M. Byllesby, E. R. Murphy, B. J. Arnold, G. F. Carroll, A. A. Sprague, A. A. Pantelas, Charles G. Dawes, Edwin G. Booz, Marshall Field III., Col. H. L. Riley, and Tom Killian. Chairmen were appointed to other committees as follows: Personnel, E. G. Booz; bylaws, Mr. Edmonds; quarters, R. P. Mulvaney; membership, G. E. FitzGibbons, and publicity, Tom Gillian. The members will immediately begin a search for downtown quarters.

The auxiliary to the 108th United States engineers will present a minstrel-musical comedy, "The Jollies of 1920," at Aryan Grotto temple, on Dec. 13, 14, and 15.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The women's auxiliary of the 1st division will give a series of entertainments for soldiers beginning today, the proceeds to go to a number of hospitals now caring for wounded veterans. The first entertainment will be at Fort Sheridan, the second, Dec. 17, at the Forty-seventh street hospital, and on Dec. 22 a grand ball will be held in the Congress hotel. Hospitals which will benefit are the base hospital at Fort Sheridan, the Forty-seventh street hospital, the Marine hospital, and Oak Forest. All 1st division soldiers not already registered are requested to send their names to Mrs. Brem, 5488 Ellis avenue, so invitations to the ball can be sent.

Inventory Losses After Dec. 31 Will Be Taxed

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—Claims for tax refunds, based on losses in inventory after Dec. 31, 1919, will be disallowed by the bureau of internal revenue, Commissioner Williams saying:

"These statements (of refunds) are unwarranted. Under the law losses in inventory sustained subsequent to Dec. 31, 1919, cannot be used as a basis for [illegible] the tax for the taxable year 1919."

EMPTY TREASURY MAY CAUSE NEW CHINESE CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PEKIN, Dec. 11.—Interest in China's capital is centered on what is believed to be an impending reorganization of the cabinet. Present events seem to indicate that the ministers now serving will resign. Several already have indicated that intention.

Chief among the reasons for the expected action is a shortage of public funds coupled with acute demands for money from all quarters. There is also a feeling that the cabinet had failed because no money was raised.

The government has no funds to pay the troops and the soldiers are committing acts of brigandage in many parts of the country.

The militarists must strengthen their position and a new cabinet will probably be accepted that will be favorable to Chang Tsolin, the Chinese war lord.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS THAT ENDURE

HOW many of the presents you give this Christmas will be gifts that endure? Why not make this a year of sensible, practical giving by presenting a fully paid up Real Estate Bond or a Partial Payment Pass Book with an initial payment on a bond, to each of the members of your family? You will then give more than the mere sum represented by your bond or payment (a reminder of the giver every six months)—for you remember the recipient with an income-producing, safe, conservative investment that pays double the usual savings interest. Here is something well worth your careful consideration.

For Father

Dad has more Christmas gift junk around the house than he can ever wear or use. Why burden him with another smoking jacket, or box of cigars, or pair of slippers? What he would really appreciate most would be something he knows is practical and useful. You'll hit his ideas to a T if he finds a Real Estate Bond in his stocking or on the tree on Christmas morning! You see, Dad is the man who pays most of the Yuletide bills, and he has a few private ideas about Christmas giving that would surprise you if you knew them!

When he finds that someone has given him an H. O. Stone & Co. First Mortgage Real Estate Bond, or paid 10% down on the purchase price of one of these bonds, he'll say: "At last this Christmas gift idea is beginning to amount to something!" Try it and see if he won't.

Confidential for Dad: How about one of these bonds for some of the deserving boys in the office or for that son of yours? Look into our plan and see if it don't answer your problem.

For Mother

She is convinced of the wisdom of thrift, and we know she'll appreciate receiving thrifty, practical gifts. So we feel that H. O. Stone & Co.'s Real Estate Bonds will appeal particularly to her as a present. They are not expensive—and may be bought on the Partial Payment Plan if desired. They pay the holder double the usual savings interest. Could you imagine a better gift to Mother than a $100 bond or a 10% first payment on a larger bond?

Confidential for Mother: H. O. Stone & Co.'s Bonds are ideal gifts for your family. They teach thrift—and economy—and they form the habit of saving. You know how important that is!

For Baby

Bless his heart, he don't know what a Real Estate Bond is, and cares less. But he knows what Christmas means! That's when he has more real joy than in any other season. And you want him to have many happy Christmases. But Baby must be looked after by those who have an eye on his future. You can best do this by starting the purchase of an H. O. Stone & Co. Real Estate Bond in his name, and then, when he's a little older he'll have some capital to start life on. That's worth considering, isn't it? Suppose you plan to do this for him this Christmas?

For Sister

Sister gets a lot of presents, too. But she's the very one who will appreciate a sensible gift, such as one of our First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. And she'll talk about it for years—especially when she pays it up out of her pin money; and every time she clips a coupon every six months she'll remember who gave her so sensible a gift. If Sister is employed, she can put her savings into another bond when the first one is paid for. Give her an H. O. Stone & Co. Partial Payment Pass Book and hear her chuckle! Sister gets so few really thoughtful presents that when you give her one of our bonds you'll find her mighty grateful.

Confidential for Sister: Why not "chip in" with Mother and surprise Dad with a bond?

For Brother

He's not very old, as yet, but he's old enough to start learning to save. And by giving him a Partial Payment Pass Book from H. O. Stone & Co. with a $10 deposit to his credit, drawing interest, and double the usual amount, at that—he'll soon learn to save those nickels and dimes he now spends for candy and ice cream. And so when you plan Brother's Christmas, don't overlook a bond from H. O. Stone & Co. as a "stepping stone" for the boy while he is forming habits that will cling to him all through life.

Confidential to Brother: Show this ad to Dad and ask him what he thinks of you and he going halves on a payment for Sister's Bond.

We'd like to tell you more about these bonds offered by H. O. Stone & Co., which make such fine enduring gifts. Remember, they are the safest of all known securities for your January 1st funds. Never fluctuate—always pay double usual savings interest—and are secured by first mortgages on improved Chicago Real Estate. Ask us for further details. Just request do you live in a house or a home?

WE ask this question advisedly. For the real interest to you in this message depends largely on whether you are a home lover or not.

This announcement is about a furnace. But its import is not so much to influence you to buy a furnace as it is to inform you about a complete heating service that is distinguished particularly by the difference in the way it heats and saves.

The man who erects a house buys a furnace.

But the family who builds or buys a home is vitally interested in a heating and ventilating system of permanent quality and dependable service.

And there is just about the same relative difference between a furnace and the genuine heating service of Holland as there is between a house and a home.

Maker-to-User Responsibility

Of course the superior service of the Holland Heating and Ventilating System has its source in the different design of the furnace itself and in its better application of the warm-air principle.

The quality of the Holland Heating and Ventilating Service begins in our foundries. There, carefully selected, high grade material is designed and cast with scrupulous workmanship under supervising experts, most of whom have been with us since the inception of our business.

But this service does not end with the building of the furnace. The Holland policy makes our company directly responsible to the home-owner not only for the quality in the furnace but for its correct installation and the complete and competent heating of your home.

For we are so jealous of the good name of Holland Service that we actually insist that the Holland System be planned and erected in your home by our own trained men.

Only in this way is it possible for us to cement the Holland contract of service with the Holland guarantee bond that goes with every installation.

When you learn what Holland Service really means you will easily understand that our purpose in putting the finest material and the most careful workmanship into our product would be defeated were it not for our policy that Holland Service men must measure up to the same standards as our material.

Holland men are carefully selected for their integrity as well as for their capacity for giving the kind of service that the Holland ideal requires.

Because it is essential in giving Holland Service that they be straight-forward, clean and courteous.

It is true that these men find that they make more money by living up to the Holland Service because Holland Service creates that mouth-to-mouth favorable comment that is the fastest developer of business in the world.

As a matter of fact, the warm friendships that Holland Heating Service makes wherever it is used is due quite as much to the character of the men who install it as it is to the factory that builds it.

Built on the Spirit of Service

Correct design, intelligent installation, competent service, these are the three essentials that have made Holland the largest installers of furnaces in the world.

We think you begin to see that the statement, "Holland Furnaces Make Warm Friends," is not carried in the spirit of a happy phrase or a play on words.

It is used because it has an actual meaning to every owner of a Holland Furnace. And the reason is that the Holland business has been built on the spirit of service rather than on the purpose of merely selling furnaces.

The Holland idea was founded on the sound principle that the warm air system properly designed and installed is the cheapest and most efficient heating service for the home.

The Holland Heating and Ventilating System is built around a complete application of the physical truth that warm air expands and rises while cold air contracts and falls, and that this action can be controlled to mathematical precision.

The success of the Holland Heating System fundamentally is due to the fact that the Holland System of factory branch installation insures the proper placing of your furnace, the correct pitch of the pipes and the ample delivery of heat to every room.

Right Installation Guaranteed

So firm are we on this basic principle of installation that we will not sell you a furnace that is not suitable to your needs. We will not permit a Holland Furnace to be installed except in the way that is going to insure complete heating efficiency and economy.

In other words, we control the product from maker to user for our best mutual benefit.

You get the welcome warmth, safety and home comfort when you want it and where you want it; we gain the most valuable asset that any business can have—a satisfied customer.

Our System enables us to insure your investment in a Holland Heating Plant with a broad, absolute guarantee of permanent service.

The proof of the virtue of the Holland System is that in 13 years Holland has grown from a small factory with little capital to the largest installer of furnaces in the world.

And there is no one feature of our business that gives us more satisfaction than the fact that we have among our friends 150,000 families, users of Holland Furnaces who indorse our slogan—"Holland Furnaces Make Warm Friends."

LABOR DEMAND SHOWS DECREASE IN MANY LINES

New York, Dec. 11.—The national industrial conference board has made public a summary of reports received in response to a telegraphic inquiry as to unemployment throughout the United States at the present time

The situation in general, as revealed by these reports, may be characterized as a widespread industrial depression falling at a time of the year when, in most sections, seasonal agricultural employment is at the lowest ebb—in spite of which no serious or general unemployment has as yet developed.

Dark in New England.

The facts in regard to a number of states as reported by official state departments to the conference board are as follows:

NEW ENGLAND—In this district the picture is darkest, because of the depression prevailing in the textile and other industries.

RHODE ISLAND—Textile mills working on half or one-third time; number of employés in machinery and tool establishments decreasing. Conditions approaching a state of unusual unemployment.

MAINE—The shipbuilding, shoe, and cotton industries seem to be decreasing. We expect the woolen industries to start picking up in the near future.

MASSACHUSETTS—There has been little change since September in the unemployment situation. Figures derived from trade union sources indicated at that time about 19.3 per cent unemployed, mostly in boot and shoe and textile trades. It would appear that conditions are improving in most of the industries of the state.

NEW YORK—Index number of employment, based on conditions in June, 1914, as 100, is 114 for October, 1920 (preliminary estimate), as against peak of 122 in October, 1918. Chief statistician of the state says: "No upward tendency in employment is yet visible. In fact, it appears not unlikely that further reductions in factory employment will be reported."

PENNSYLVANIA—Director of department of labor and industry says: "Unemployment conditions are not nearly so bad as they were in 1913 and 1914. In a few lines unemployment may be temporarily increasing, but not at an alarming rate."

NEW JERSEY—Unemployed steadily increasing. Passaic textile industries working half time; shipbuilding decreased one-third; building trades occupied to normal capacity; stove works normal; boiler works normal; silk hosiery normal; woolen mills working four days a week; metals and machinery slow; talking machines, force increased."

Varied Conditions South.

SOUTHERN STATES—Conditions in this district vary considerably.

GEORGIA—Textile mills running on half time, automobile plants practically closed down; other lines feeling depression, but not to same extent.

VIRGINIA—No factories have shut down entirely; however, many of them are retrenching the least bit.

TEXAS—Unemployment is rapidly on the increase; outlook for the winter season is rather discouraging.

OKLAHOMA—There are perhaps, less unemployed at this time than during the same period for several years previous to the war. Many transients are drifting into the state, which, if continued, will have a decided effect on employment conditions.

Auto Industries Black.

INDIANA—Unemployment throughout the state of Indiana is approximately placed between 50,000 and 75,000. At least 75 per cent of this number is chargable to automobile and kindred industries. Unemployment is on the increase. Surplus, however, is being somewhat relieved by a noticeable drift back to the farms.

ILLINOIS—It would seem that unemployment is gradually increasing particularly where workers are anxious to secure a certain kind of work at a high wage. Unemployment in the various trades touches common labor and clerical labor most closely.

MICHIGAN—Unemployment in Michigan is widespread throughout the automobile centers.

WISCONSIN—Applicants for work have numbered nearly the same as in 1919. There is this difference however, that a larger percentage of the applicants now are men seriously in need of work, while in 1919 they were men desiring to change jobs.

Fair Situation on Coast.

WESTERN STATES—States dependent on logging as a principal industry report unemployment, other states either a normal condition or a labor shortage.

CALIFORNIA—From information received, conditions in California are normal.

WASHINGTON—Unemployment is increasing, due to closing down of lumber mills and camps.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The International Harvester company has inaugurated its plan of paying extra dividends in stock on the common stock. The directors declared the regular quarterly cash dividend of 1¾ per cent and a stock dividend of 2 per cent, this being a semi-annual payment. The United Cigar Stores company has started monthly dividends of 1½ per cent, or at the rate of 18 per cent annually. The Fisk Rubber company directors voted to omit the quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common stock, payable Jan. 1, stating the dividend had been earned, but it was desirable to conserve cash under present conditions. Directors of the Keystone Tire and Rubber company deferred action until Tuesday on the quarterly dividend of 3 per cent on the common stock, now due.

Bradstreet's reports 337 failures last week, compared with 296 the preceding week and 115 the corresponding week in 1919. The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Dec. 8, by 196 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,022,142,000, compared with $1,020,639,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,022,142,000, compared with $1,019,529,000 reported by twenty-three clearing houses for the corresponding week of last year.

The Singer Manufacturing company yesterday filed notification of an increase in the capital stock from $60,000,000 to $90,000,000 and announced a stock dividend of $30,000,000. The Mexican Eagle Oil company plans to increase the capital 50 per cent by offering shareholders one new share at par for each two shares held.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Grain traders are watching the financial statements closer than at any time in years. For the first time in a good many years the bank statements issued at the end of each week came in for unusual attention, offsetting all other influences. Sentiment on wheat was mixed, with an underlying current of bullishness owing to the continued export demand, while in coarse grains, particularly corn, most traders were bearish in expectation of a larger movement.

Iowa and Illinois holders of corn were more anxious for bids yesterday. One house bought 35,000 bu to come here. One station on its lines loaded two cars for the day and ordered eight more. The shipping demand was better, but the trade paid no attention to it. There was heavy selling by houses with eastern connections around 72c for May and later local houses were free sellers, carrying prices down to the lowest of the week.

Winnipeg December wheat was 4c lower yesterday, while the May gained ⅝c. Cash premiums were said to be stronger as the result of the urgent demand to load boats, as navigation closes at midnight tonight. A Winnipeg man here yesterday said there would be a good movement of Canadian wheat, all rail, into the States, as the roads have plenty of cars.

Chicago received 387,000 bu of Canadian wheat by lake during the week and a cargo of 230,000 bu came in yesterday for the B. A. Eckhart Milling company, which will be included in next week's receipts. There were no shipments of grain from Chicago during the week.

James K. Riordon, a banker, farmer, and grain dealer, says the average farmer cannot be forced to sell his corn at a loss. He believes the attitude of the federal reserve bank in forcing liquidation by farmers to reduce their loans, regardless of price, is going too far and will result in unfavorable trade conditions in other lines. He says banks are "supposed to help under trying conditions and not to be a menace."

An interesting summary of the factors, which will influence May corn until that delivery expires, has been compiled by Joseph Wild of E. W. Wagner & Co. and is now being distributed to the trade. Statistics are given covering the percentages of the corn crop usually consumed by the various kinds of live stock, and also the number of the latter on farms for a series of years.

A leading Minneapolis mill closed down yesterday on account of the slow demand for flour and will remain closed until Tuesday.

Bids for No. 3 northern spring wheat were made at Minneapolis from seaboard exporters slightly below a working basis.

Australia cleared 224,000 bu wheat to the United Kingdom the last week and India exported 184,000 bu.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 400,000 bu wheat were made to Greece, presumably via the gulf, and other business was put at around 600,000 bu, although only partly confirmed. Premiums generally showed a tendency to advance.

Demand for cash wheat at Chicago was active, with sales of 215,000 bu, including around 100,000 bu No. 3 northern, at a price understood to have been about 5c under the December, whereas that grade is deliverable at 8c under. Shipping sales of corn were 138,000 bu, including 50,000 bu to the seaboard and 122,000 bu oats, including 25,000 bu to the seaboard. Deliveries were 10,000 bu wheat and 1,000 bu rye.

Premiums for cash wheat remained firm in all of the leading western and southwestern markets, but were 1@2c lower on some grades at Minneapolis. St. Louis was 2@4c higher, Kansas City unchanged, to 2c higher, and Omaha 1c higher.

Demand for cash corn was only fair, with the leading industry the only buyer of mixed. Sample values were unchanged to ½c higher, with premiums unchanged. New No. 3 yellow brought 4¾@5c over and No. 4 yellow 1@4c over December. Receipts, 89 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 4c lower, with Kansas City showing the most weakness.

Premiums on oats were firm, with No. 3 white 2@2½c and No. 2 white 2¾@3c over December. Sample values were unchanged to ½c higher. Receipts, 72 cars.

WHEAT HIGHER; CORN CLOSES AT LOWEST OF WEEK

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Irregular action of the grain markets yesterday kept traders guessing as to which way to turn. Wheat was active and closed 1½c to 4c higher, while corn closed at the bottom and the lowest of the week, with net losses for the day of ¼c to ½c. Oats gained ¼c to ⅜c, while rye gained 1¾c and barley closed 1c lower to unchanged.

Provisions finished 75c higher for pork, lard 7½c lower to 7½c higher, and ribs 5@15c higher.

News of the day had more cross currents than on any day of the week, being considered bullish on wheat and bearish on corn. The statements of the New York and Chicago Federal Reserve banks were regarded as depressing factors and led to selling and the declines at the last.

Lower Range for Week.

Closing trades compared with those of the previous week showed losses on all grains except rye. Wheat was off 6@7½c, corn 4@5½c, oats 1½@2½c, barley 3½@6c, while rye was ½@1c higher. Pork is 1.12½ lower, lard 47½@97½c, with January leading, and short ribs 57½c lower than a week ago.

Wheat Averages Higher.

Action of the wheat market was erratic with the range higher. Top prices were 8c on December and 5c on March above the close of the previous day, while the finish was at intermediate prices. Conflicting reports kept the trade nervous. There were lower prices in Argentina, reports that there will be opposition to the placing of embargoes on wheat importation and reports of 36,000,000 bu of the Australian wheat being sold at $1.54@1.70, f. o. b. to French ports, with England, France, Egypt and other countries absorbing Australian offerings.

Primary receipts of 1,182,000 bu for the day, compared with exports of 1,557,000 bu. Export buying was of a good class and the selling scattered.

Coarse Grains Weaken.

Corn had its most strength early with wheat, but broke on heavy general selling, and closed around the inside after a drop of 1½@1⅝c from the top. Country offerings were larger, which offset sales of 50,000 bu to the seaboard.

Oats had surprising strength due to general covering and the advance in grains. Country offerings were better, yet selling pressure was lighter.

Rye was bought by seaboard exporters and shorts. There were sales of 50,000 bu to arrive from the west and northwest. Prices were up 4½@5c at the best with a sharp break at the last. Barley was slow with prices unchanged.

Provisions were handled in a limited way, most of the business being covering shorts. Hog prices were higher and shipments for the week larger, but only about 50 per cent of last year's. Packing here since Nov. 1 aggregates 876,000 hogs, or 336,00 less than last year. Cash trade was slow. Prices follow:

EUROPEAN DEBT OF TEN BILLION UP TO CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—The question of how Europe's indebtedness of nearly $10,000,000,000 to the United States can be utilized to relieve the strain on the treasury will be considered soon by the senate finance committee, Senator McCumber, acting chairman of the committee, said today.

Senator Smoot, Republican member of the finance committee, also said the question would be taken up soon, but neither he nor Mr. McCumber thinks anything can be done at this session of congress. It is believed, however, some plan may be decided on at this session for execution when President Elect Harding takes office.

One plan of realizing on the allied debt is to arrange for conversion of certificates of indebtedness of the foreign nations held by the treasury into bonds of those governments.

"These debts are secured by demand certificates of indebtedness, subject to payment on demand," said Senator McCumber. "But the foreign nations have no money, and it is no use to demand the payment. In negotiation with the foreign nations I believe it could be arranged to change this paper into government bonds."

Senator Simmons, Democrat, North Carolina, suggested that the American people could take up the foreign bonds, but Senator Smoot, while emphasizing the foreign peoples are in "no shape" to underwrite such bonds, questioned the advisability of putting the burden on the people of the United States.

Clearing House Banks' Status.

The New York clearing house banks made a less favorable report. As usual in the last few months, an improvement at the federal reserve bank has been accompanied by a less favorable statement by the clearing house banks. The excess reserve declined $10,733,130 and now stands at the nominal figure of $11,247,910. The decrease was partly accounted for by a decrease in reserves at the reserve bank of $5,634,000. Aggregate reserve declined $5,419,000.

Loans declined only $619,000 and cash in vaults increased only $721,000. Demand deposits expanded $43,668,000, but time deposits receded $11,213,000. This completed accounting for the decline in excess reserve. United States deposits increased $6,119,000. The figures follow:

The New York Times.

New York, Dec. 11.—[Special.]—Pressure on the stock market was uninterrupted today during the entire two hour trading period. Transactions were not unusually large, but declines in a long list of industrial shares ranged between 1 and 4 points, and railway stocks moved similarly. Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, and Reading declined 2¼@3⅜ points, and practically the whole market closed at the lowest figures.

Comparisons of today's closing prices with those of a week before show that the last week has been marked, as a whole, by heavier declines than any since the culmination of the November money stringency.

Industrials Lose Heavily.

In many well known industrial stocks the week's net loss has run from 8 to 12 points, with a 16 point decline in Mexican Petroleum. Such railway stocks as Union Pacific, Reading, Chicago and Northwestern, and Northern Pacific present net losses of 4¾@8 and are now selling 10 to 20 points below the high prices reached in the short lived advance of the day after election. Even in the bond market the week's results embody a fairly general decline of 1 to 4 per cent.

A movement of such scope and so continuous is not merely a consequence of "professional selling" or of money stringency due to approaching year-end settlements; it would seem to embody the financial market's judgment as to the probable duration and intensity of the general trade reaction.

Foreign Exchange Quiet.

The foreign exchange market ended the week with a quiet day. Except for France, Italy, and Greece, rates on Europe were not greatly changed from those of a week ago. It has been a matter of considerable interest that foreign exchange, which earlier in the autumn was the most sensitive of all markets to the pinch in credit, should have returned to comparative steadiness since the middle of November.

Some attention was paid in Wall street to Senator McCumber's predictions of a treasury deficit of about $2,000,000,000 for the pending fiscal year. With the senator's purpose in urging retrenchment and economy every one agrees, but he included maturing short term debt as if it had to be paid off at maturity from current revenue, instead of being gradually redeemed, with further extension meantime. The treasury's estimate is for a surplus of $888,266,000 in the fiscal year ending next June and for a surplus of $962,110,000 the ensuing fiscal year.

·CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS·

Trading in Chicago stocks was fairly active in the week-end session yesterday. The price trend was lower, but declines in the majority of cases were confined to fractions. Armour preferred declined 1⅛ points, to 85⅝, a new low mark. Sears-Roebuck dropped 1½ points, to 98. The next directors' meeting for dividend action will be Feb. 15, and officials of the company admit maintenance of the dividend probably will depend on future trade conditions. December sales are running 30 to 35 per cent below last year. On small sales Great Lakes Dredge and Dock was off 3½ points, Beaver Board 2, and Diamond Match, Peoples Gas, and Quaker Oats preferred a point each.

The practice of selling securities for the purpose of establishing losses to be deducted from income taxes was rather strikingly illustrated. Two blocks of Middle West Utilities preferred were traded in, each block being 2,416 shares, an odd lot, and both trades being made at the same figure, 24⅞. These were the only trades in this issue, which made the transactions doubly conspicuous.

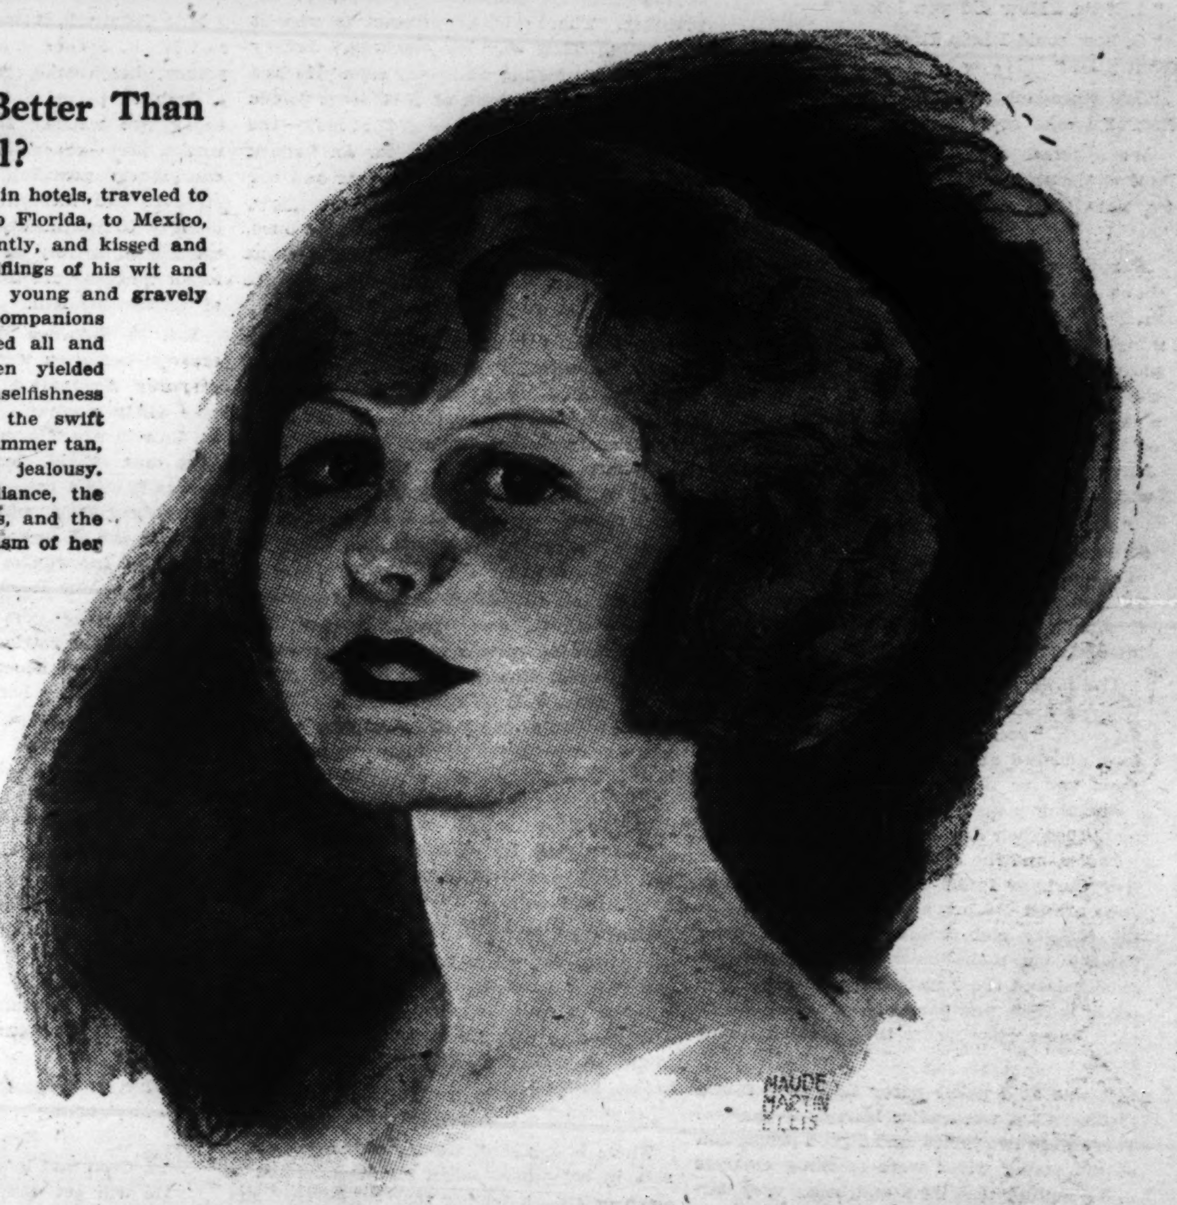
The LEES of HAPPINESS by F. Scott Fitzgerald

These Two Loved and Lost—Was It Better Than Never to Have Loved at All?



Roxanne Milbank had been chorus girl and understudy in "The Daisy Chain."

IF you should look through the files of old magazines for the first years of the present century you would find, sandwiched in between the stories of Richard Harding Davis and Frank Norris and others long since dead, the work of one Jeffrey Curtain: a novel or two, and perhaps three or four dozen short stories. You could, if you were interested, follow them along until, say, 1908, when they suddenly disappeared.

When you had read them all you would have been quite sure that here were no masterpieces—here were passably good stories, a bit out of date now, but doubtless the sort that would then have whiled away a dreary half hour's wait in a dental office. The man who did them was of good intelligence surely, talented, glib, probably young. In the samples of his work you found there would have been nothing to stir you to more than a faint interest in the whims of life—no deep interior laughs, no sense of futility or hint of tragedy.

After reading them you would yawn and put the number back in the files and perhaps if you were in some library reading room you would decide that by way of variety you would look at a newspaper of the period and see whether the Japs had taken Port Arthur. But if by any chance the newspaper you had chosen was the right one and had crackled open at the theatrical page your eyes would have been arrested and held and for at least a minute you would have forgotten Port Arthur as quickly as you forgot Chateau Thierry. For you would, by this fortunate chance, be looking at the portrait of an exquisitely beautiful woman.

Those were the days of Florodora and of sextets, of pinched in waists and blown out sleeves, of almost bustles and absolute ballet skirts, but here, without doubt, disguised as she might be by the unaccustomed stiffness and old fashion of her costume, was a butterfly of butterflies. Here was the gayety of the period—the soft wine of eyes, the songs that flurried hearts, the toasts and the bouquets, the dances and the dinners. Here was a Venus of the hansom cab, the Gibson girl in her glorious prime. Here was . . .

. . . here was, you find by looking at the name beneath, one Roxanne Milbank, who had been chorus girl and understudy in "The Daisy Chain," but who, by reason of an excellent performance when the star was indisposed, gained a leading part.

You would look again—and wonder. Why you had never heard of her. Why did her name not linger in popular songs and vaudeville jokes and cigar bands and the memory of that gay old uncle of yours along with Lillian Russell and Stella Mayhew and Anna Held? Roxanne Milbank—where had she gone? What dark trap door had opened suddenly and swallowed her up? Was her name in the list of actresses married to English noblemen that you read in last Sunday's supplement? No doubt she was dead—poor beautiful young lady—and quite forgotten.

I am hoping too much. I am having you stumble on Jeffrey Curtain's stories and Roxanne Milbank's picture. It would be incredible that you would find a little newspaper item six months later—a single item two inches by four which informed the public of the marriage very quietly of Miss Roxanne Milbank, who had been on tour with "The Daisy Chain," to Mr. Jeffrey Curtain, the popular author. "Mrs. Curtain," it added dispassionately, "will retire from the stage."

It was a marriage of love. He was sufficiently spoiled to be irresistible; she was ingenuous enough to be quite charming. Like two floating logs they met in a head-on rush, caught inseparably, and sped along the stream together. Yet had Jeffrey Curtain kept at scrivening for two score years he could not have put a twist or quirk into one of his stories weirder than the twist and quirk that came into his own life. Had Roxanne Milbank played three dozen parts and filled five thousand houses she could never have had a rôle with more of happiness and despair of tragic intensity and divine irony than were in the rôle prepared for Roxanne Curtain

For a year they lived in hotels, traveled to California, to Alaska, to Florida, to Mexico, loved and quarreled gently, and kissed and gloried in the golden triflings of his wit and her beauty—they were young and gravely passionate; they were companions inseparable; they yielded all and demanded all and then yielded again in ecstasies of unselfishness and pride. She loved the swift tones of his voice, his summer tan, his frantic, unfounded jealousy. He loved her dark radiance, the white irises of her eyes, and the warm, lustrous enthusiasm of her smile.

"Don't you like her?" he would demand rather excitedly and shyly. "Isn't she a wonder? Did you ever see——"

"Yes," they would answer grinning because they couldn't help themselves. "She's a wonder. You're lucky."

"You bet I am!" he would exclaim, his voice trembling. "You just bet I am!"

The year passed. They tired of hotels. They bought an old house and twenty acres near the town of Marlowe, half an hour from Chicago; bought a little car, and moved out riotously with a pioneering hallucination that would have confounded Balboa.

"Your room will be here!" they cried in turn.

—And then:

"And my room here!"

"And the nursery here when we have children."

"And we'll build a sleeping porch—O next year."

"O, won't it be good—good!"

They moved out in April. In July Jeffrey's closest friend, Harry Cromwell, came out to spend a week—they met him at the end of the long lawn and escorted him proudly and triumphantly to the house.

Harry was married also. His wife had had a baby some six months before and was still recuperating at her mother's in New York. Roxanne had gathered from Jeffrey that Harry's wife was not as attractive as Harry—Jeffrey had met her once and considered her—O, rather shallow. But Harry had been married nearly two years and was apparently happy, so Jeffrey guessed that she was probably all right, but—well, not congenial.

"I'm making biscuits," chattered Roxanne gravely. "Can your wife make biscuits? The cook is showing me how. I think every woman should know how to make biscuits. It sounds so utterly disarming. A woman who can make biscuits can surely do no——"

"You'll have to come out here and live," insisted Jeffrey. "Get a place out in the country like us, for you and Kitty."

"You don't know Kitty," protested Harry. "She's probably more civic than a sidewalk. She's got to have her theaters and vaudevilles."

"Bring her out," repeated Jeffrey. "We'll have a colony. There's a nice crowd of young people here already. We'll put the fresh air in her and—— O, bring her out!"

They were at the porch steps now and Roxanne made a brisk, graceful gesture toward a dilapidated structure on the right.

NEXT WEEK

A PROCRASTINATED CHRISTMAS, a Blue Ribbon short story, by Walter Prichard Eaton.

"The garage," she announced. "It will also be Jeffrey's writing studio within the month. Meanwhile dinner is at seven. Meanwhile to that I will mix a cocktail."

She vanished into the kitchen and the two men ascended the stairs—that is, they ascended half way, for at the first landing Jeffrey dropped his guest's suitcase and in a cross between a wild query and an anxious cry exclaimed:

"For God's sake, Harry, how do you like her? Isn't she a marvel?"

"We will go upstairs," answered his guest, "and we will shut the door."

Half an hour later as the two men were sitting together in the library uttering brave phrases over their cocktails Roxanne reissued from the kitchen, bearing before her a pan of biscuits. Jeffrey and Harry rose.

"They're beautiful, dear," said the husband eagerly.

"They may be said," corroborated Harry without a smile, "to be esthetically exquisite."

Roxanne beamed.

"Taste one. I couldn't bear to touch them before you'd seen them all and I can't bear to take them back until I find what they taste like."

"Like manna, darling."

Simultaneously the two men raised the biscuits to their lips, nibbled tentatively. Simultaneously they tried to casually change the subject. But Roxanne, undeceived, set down the pan and seized a biscuit feverishly. After a second her comment rang out with lugubrious finality.

"Absolutely bum!"

"Really——"

"Why, I didn't notice——"

Roxanne roared.

"O, I'm useless," she cried laughing. "Turn me out, Jeffrey—I'm a parasite; I'm no good——"

Jeffrey's arm slipped around her.

"Darling, I'll eat your biscuits."

"They're beautiful anyway," insisted Roxanne.

"They're—they're decorative," suggested Harry.

Jeffrey took him up enthusiastically.

"That's the word. They're decorative; they're masterpieces. We'll use them."

He rushed to the kitchen and returned with a hammer and a handful of nails.

"We'll use them, by golly, Roxanne!" he cried. "We'll make a frieze out of them."

"Don't!" wailed Roxanne. "Our beautiful house."

"Never mind. We're going to have the library repapered in October. Don't you remember?"

"Well——"

Bang! The first biscuit was impaled to the wall where it quivered for a moment like a live thing.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

When Roxanne returned with a second round of cocktails the biscuits were in a perpendicular row, twelve of them, like a collection of primitive spear heads.

"Roxanne," exclaimed Jeffrey, "you're an artist! Cook?—nonsense! You shall illustrate my books!"

During dinner the twilight twined gently into dusk and later it was a starry dark outside filled and permeated with the frail gorgeousness of Roxanne's filmy white dress and the richness of her low laugh.

—Such a little girl she is, thought Harry. Not as old as Kitty.

He mentally compared the two. Kitty—nervous without being sensitive, temperamental without temperament, a woman who seemed to flit and never light—and Roxanne, who was as young as a spring night and as full of adolescent laughter.

—A good match for Jeffrey, he thought again. Two very young people, the sort who'll stay very young until they suddenly find themselves very old.

Harry thought these things between his constant thoughts about Kitty. He was depressed about Kitty. It seemed to him that she was well enough to come back to Chicago and bring his little son. He was thinking vaguely of Kitty when he said good-

KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP

Golden Transparent

MOST facial skin troubles — blackheads, pimples, etc.—come from not thoroughly washing the face and from leaving the undissolved impurities of cheap, unadulterated soaps in the pores of the skin. When these pores become so clogged, trouble begins and beauty vanishes. Because, it is through these pores that the skin breathes, so to speak. And to retain a healthy, beautiful skin, these delicate pores must be kept clean of undissolved soap, as well as of dirt and dust.

JAP ROSE is absolutely soluble in any kind of water, even when cold. Moisten the cake, and every atom of the pure oils and chemically pure glycerine in this golden transparent soap—JAP ROSE—changes almost instantly, into clear, pearly bubbles of pureness, that cleanse thoroughly and hygienically every delicate pore of the skin. Then a dash of water, and as if by magic, all is gone. There's not a particle of sediment left.

AS you value your health and good looks, do not use a soap on your face which contains any adulterants or impurities, and which does not wholly and almost instantly dissolve.

"You're our first real house guest," cried Roxanne after him. "Aren't you thrilled and proud?"

When he was out of sight around the stair corner she turned to Jeffrey, who was standing beside her resting his hand on the end of the banister.

"Are you tired, my dearest?"

Jeffrey rubbed the center of his forehead with his fingers.

"A little. How did you know?"

"O, how could I help knowing about you—about you?"

"It's a headache," he said moodily. "Splitting. I'll take some aspirin."

She reached over and snapped out the light and with his arm tight about her slender waist they walked up the stairs together.

II.

Harry's week was a delight. They drove about the dreamy lanes rare with honeysuckle or idled day-long by the lake, swimming. In the evening Roxanne sitting inside played to them while the ashes whitened on the glowing ends of their cigars. Then came a telegram from Kitty saying that she wanted Harry to come for her, so Roxanne and Jeffrey were left alone in that privacy of which they never seemed to tire.

"Alone" thrilled them again. They wandered about the house feeling the presence of the other and reveling in it; they sat on the same side of the table like honeymooners; they were intensely absorbed in each other, intensely happy.

The town of Marlowe, though a comparatively old settlement, had only recently acquired a "society." Five or six years before, alarmed at the smoky swelling of Chicago, two or three young married couples, 'bungalow people," had moved out; they had persuaded their friends that they had found a paradise, and the friends followed. The Jeffrey Curtains found an already formed but open armed set prepared to welcome them; the country club, ballroom, and golf links yawned for their dancing feet and facile mashies, and there were bridge parties, and poker parties, and parties where they drank beer, and parties where they drank nothing at all.

It was at a poker party that they found themselves a week after Harry's departure. There were two tables, and a good proportion of the young wives were smoking cigarets and shouting their bets and being very daringly mannish for those days.

Roxanne had left the game early and taken to perambulation; she wandered into the pantry and found herself some grape juice—beer gave her a headache—and then passed from table to table, looking over shoulders at the hands, keeping a tender eye on Jeffrey and being pleasantly unexcited and content. Jeffrey, with an expression of intense concentration, was raising a sturdy pile of chips of all colors, and Roxanne knew by the deepened wrinkle between his eyes that he was interested. She was glad—she liked to see him interested in small things.

She crossed over quietly and sat down on the arm of his chair.

She must have sat there five minutes, listening to the sharp intermittent comments of the men and the chatter of the women which rose from the table like soft smoke—and yet scarcely hearing either. Then quite innocently she reached out her hand, intending to place it on Jeffrey's shoulder—as it touched him he started of a sudden, gave a little grunt, and, sweeping back his arm furiously, caught her a glancing blow on her elbow.

There was a general gasp. Roxanne regained her balance, gave a little cry, and rose quickly to her feet. It had been the greatest shock of her life. This, from Jeffery, the heart of kindness, of consideration—this instinctively brutal gesture.

The gasp became a silence. A dozen eyes were turned on Jeffrey, who looked up as though seeing Roxanne for the first time. An expression of bewilderment settled on his face.

"Why—Roxanne——" he said haltingly.

Into a dozen minds entered a quick suspicion, a rumor of scandal. Could it be that behind the scenes with this couple outwardly so well mated, so in love, there lurked some secret antipathy? What was this streak of fire across such a cloudless heaven!

"Jeffrey!"—Roxanne's voice was almost pleading—startled and horrified, she yet knew that it was a mistake. It never occurred to her to blame him or to resent it. Her word was a trembling supplication—"Tell me, Jeffrey," it said, "tell Roxanne, your own Roxanne."

"Why, Roxanne——" began Jeffrey again. The bewildered look changed to pain. He was clearly as startled as she. "I didn't intend that," he went on; "you startled me. You—I felt as if some one were attacking me. I—how—how idiotic!"

"Jeffrey!" Again the word was a prayer, incense offered up to a high God through some new and unfathomable darkness.

They were both on their feet, they were saying good-by, faltering, apologizing, explaining. There was no attempt to pass it off easily. That way lay sacrilege. Jeffrey had not been feeling well, they said. He had become nervous. Back of both their minds was the unexplained horror of that blow—the marvel that there had been for an instant something between them—his anger and her fear—and now to both a sorrow, momentary, no doubt, but to be bridged at once, at once, while there was yet time. Was that swift water lashing under their feet—the fierce glint of some uncharted chasm?

Out in their car under the harvest moon he talked brokenly. It was just—incomprehensible to him, he said. He had been thinking of the poker game—absorbed—and the touch on his shoulder had seemed like an attack. An attack, that was it! He clung to that word, flung it up as a shield. He had hated what touched him. With the impact of his hand it had gone, that—nervousness. That was all he knew.

Both their eyes filled with tears and they whispered love there under the broad night as the serene streets of Marlowe sped by. Later, when they went to bed, they were quite calm. Jeffrey was to take a week off all work—was simply to loll, and sleep, and go on long walks until this nervousness left him. When they had decided this safety settled down upon Roxanne. The pillows underhead became soft and friendly; the bed on which they lay seemed wide, and white, and sturdy under the radiance that streamed in at the window.

Five days later, in the first cool of late afternoon, Jeffrey picked up an oak chair and sent it crashing through his own front window. Then he lay down on the couch like a little child, weeping piteously and begging to die. A blood clot the size of a marble had broken in his brain.

III.

There is a sort of waking nightmare that sets in sometimes when one has missed a sleep or two, a feeling that comes with extreme fatigue and a new sun, that the quality of the life around has changed. It is a fully convinced, articulate conviction that somehow the existence one is then leading is a branch shoot of life and is related to life only as a moving picture or a mirror—that the people, and streets, and houses are only projections from a very dim and chaotic past. It was in such a state that Roxanne found herself during the first months of Jeffrey's illness. She slept only when she was utterly exhausted; she awoke under a cloud. The long, sober voiced consultations, the faint aura of medicine in the halls, the sudden tiptoeing in a house that had echoed to many cheerful footsteps, and, most of all, Jeffrey's white face amid the pillows of the bed they had shared together—these things subdued her and made her indelibly older. The doctors held out hope, but that was all. A long rest, they said, a long rest and quiet. So responsibility came to Roxanne. It was she now who paid the bills, pored over his bank book, corresponded with his publishers. She was in the kitchen constantly. She learned from the nurse how to prepare his meals and after the first month took complete charge of the sickroom. She had had to let the nurse go for reasons of economy. One of the two colored girls left at the same time. Roxanne had realized that except for a very scanty invested capital they had been living from short story to short story.

The most frequent visitor was Harry Cromwell. He had been shocked and depressed by the news and though his wife was now living with him in Chicago he found time to come out for an hour or two several times a month. Roxanne found his sympathy welcome—there was some quality of suffering in the man, some inherent pitifulness that made her comfortable when he was near. Roxanne's nature had suddenly and strangely deepened. She felt sometimes that with Jeffrey she was losing her children also, those children that now most of all she needed and should have had.

It was six months after Jeffrey's collapse and when the nightmare had faded, leaving not the old world but a new one, grayer and colder, that she went to see Harry's wife. Finding herself in Chicago with an extra hour before train time, she decided out of a mixture of curiosity and courtesy to call.

As she stepped inside the door she had an immediate impression that the apartment was very like some place she had seen before—and almost instantly she remembered a round-the-corner bakery of her childhood, a bakery full of rows and rows of pink frosted cakes—a stuffy pink, pink as a food, pink triumphant, vulgar, and odious.

And this apartment was like that. It was pink. It smelled pink!

Mrs. Cromwell, attired in a wrapper of pink and black, opened the door. Her hair was yellow, heightened, Roxanne imagined, by a dash of peroxide in the shampoo water every two weeks. Her eyes were a thin waxen blue—she was pretty and a bit too consciously graceful. Her cordiality was strident and intimate, hostility melted so quickly to hospitality that it seemed they were both merely in the face and voice—never touching nor touched by the deep core of egotism beneath.

But to Roxanne these things were secondary; her eyes were caught and held in uncanny fascination by the wrapper. It was vilely unclean. From its lowest hem up four inches it was sheerly dirty with the blue dust of the floor; for the next three inches it was a gray—then it shaded off into its natural color, which was—pink. It was dirty at the sleeves, too, and at the collar—and when the woman turned to lead the way into the parlor Roxanne was sure that her neck was dirty.

A one sided rattle of conversation began. Mrs. Cromwell became explicit about her likes and dislikes, her head, her stomach, her teeth, her members, her apartment—avoiding with a sort of insolent meticulousness any inclusion of Roxanne with life, as if presuming that Roxanne, having been dealt a blow, wished life to be carefully skirted.

Roxanne smiled. That kimono! That neck.

After five minutes a little boy toddled into the parlor—a very dirty little boy clad in much used pink rompers. His face was smudgy—Roxanne wanted to take him into her lap and wipe his nose; other parts in the vicinity of his head needed attention, his tiny shoes were kicked out at the toes. Unspeakable!

"What a darling little boy!" exclaimed Roxanne, smiling radiantly. "Come here to me."

Mrs. Cromwell looked coldly at her son.

"He will get dirty. Look at that face!" She held her head on one side and regarded it critically.

"Isn't he darling," repeated Roxanne.

"Look at his rompers," frowned Mrs. Cromwell.

"He needs a change, don't you, George?"

George stared at her curiously. One could see that to his mind the word rompers connotated a garment extraneously smeared as this one.

"I tried to make him look respectable this morning," complained Mrs. Cromwell with the air of one whose patience has been sorely tried, "and I found he didn't have any more rompers—so rather than have him go round without any I put him back in those—and his face——"

"How many pairs has he?" Roxanne's voice was quite pleasantly curious—"How many feather fans have you?" she might have asked.

"O——" Mrs. Cromwell considered, wrinkling her pretty brow. "Five, I think. Plenty, I know."

"You can get them for fifty cents a pair."

Mrs. Cromwell's eyes showed surprise—and the faintest superiority. The price of rompers!

"Can you really? I had no idea. He ought to have plenty, but I haven't had a minute all week to send the laundry out." Then, as though dismissing the subject as utterly irrelevant — "I must show you some things——"

They rose and Roxanne followed her past an open bathroom door whose garment littered floor showed indeed that the laundry hadn't been sent out for some time, into another room that was, so to speak, the quintessence of pinkness. This was Mrs. Cromwell's room.

Here the hostess opened a closet door and displayed before Roxanne's eyes an amazing collection of lingerie. There were dozens of filmy marvels of lace and silk, all clean, unruffled, seemingly not yet touched. On hangers beside them were two brand new evening dresses.

"I have some beautiful things," said Mrs. Cromwell, "but not much of a chance to wear them. Harry doesn't care much about going out." Spite crept into her voice. "He's perfectly content to let me play nursemaid and housekeeper all day and loving wife in the evening."

Roxanne smiled again.

"You've got some very beautiful clothes here."

"Yes, I have. Let me show you——"

"Beautiful," repeated Roxanne, interrupting, "but I'll have to run if I'm going to catch my train."

She felt that her hands were trembling. She wanted to put them on this woman and shake her—shake her. She wanted her locked up somewhere and set to scrubbing floors.

"Beautiful," she repeated, "and I just came in for a moment."

"Well, I'm sorry Harry isn't here."

They moved toward the door.

"——and, O," said Roxanne with an effort—yet still her voice was gentle and her lips were smiling—"I think it's Argile's where you can get those rompers. Good-by."

"Argile's. I'll remember."

It was not until she had reached the station and bought her ticket to Marlowe that Roxanne realized it was the first five minutes in six months that her mind had been off Jeffrey.

IV.

A week later Harry appeared at Marlowe in person, arrived unexpectedly at 5 o'clock, and coming up the walk sank into a porch chair in a state of utter exhaustion. Roxanne herself had had a busy day and was quite worn out. The doctors were coming at five-thirty, bringing a celebrated nerve specialist from New York. She was excited and thoroughly depressed, but something in Harry's eyes as he greeted her made her sit down in a chair beside him.

"What's the matter, Harry?"

"Nothing, Roxanne," he denied. "I came to see how Jeff was doing. Don't you bother about me."

"Harry," insisted Roxanne, "there's something the matter."

"Nothing," he repeated. "How's Jeff?"

An anxious look darkened on her face.

"He's a little worse, Harry. Dr. Jewett has come on from New York. They thought he could tell me something definite. He's going to try and find whether this paralysis has anything to do with the original blood clot."

Harry rose uncertainly.

"O, I'm sorry," he said jerkily. "I didn't know you expected a consultation. I wouldn't have come. I thought I'd just rock on your porch for an hour——"

"Sit down," she commanded.

Harry hesitated.

"Sit down, Harry, dear boy." Her kindness flooded out now—enveloped him. "I know there's something the matter. You're white as a sheet. I'm going to get you a cool bottle of beer."

All at once he collapsed into his chair and covered his face with his hands.

"I can't make her happy," he cried passionately, "I've tried and I've tried. This morning we had some words about breakfast—I'd been getting my breakfast downtown—and—well, just after I went to the office she left the house, went east to her mother's with George and a suit case full of lace underwear."

"Harry!"

"And I don't know——"

There was a crunch on the gravel, a car turning into the drive. Roxanne gave a little cry.

"It's Dr. Jewett," she said quickly.

"O, I'll——"

"You'll wait, won't you?" she interrupted abstractedly. He saw that his problem had already died on the troubled surface of her mind.

There was an embarrassing minute of vague elided introductions and then Harry followed the party inside and watched them disappear up the stairs. He went into the library and sat down on the big sofa.

For an hour he watched the sun creep down and hide itself in the folds of the chintz curtains. In the deep quiet a trapped wasp buzzing on the inside of the window pane assumed the proportions of a clamor. From time to time another buzzing drifted down from upstairs, resembling several more larger wasps caught on larger window panes. He heard low footfalls, the clink of bottles, the clamor of pouring water.

MEMORIES of the MIST

by Oney Fred Sweet

No Matter How Small, How Unattractive—It's Somebody's Home Town

I MET Dave Trenton during this last summer in Kansas City. We were both leaving the city built on the hills for one of Missouri's small towns. I remarked that we were in the section where once Jesse James had roved, and Dave allowed that Jesse had been somewhat of a piker when it came to taking money away from folks, as compared to many present day profiteers.

The man beside me on the train seat was apparently in his late 30's—tall, tanned, following the final whim of fashion in his clothes, and yet a man dressed comfortably. A man who had seen much service in France. I surmised. Also I guessed that he had been an officer. Trenton proved, in fact, to have been a captain of engineers.

There was something melancholy about my chance acquaintance. A change of cars was necessary, and he insisted on helping me with some of my baggage, so that I felt he had not resented greatly my previous attempts to draw him out. And yet he had not been a brilliant conversationalist.

From the manner in which he had requested the fellows who had been taking up two car seats to take their feet off one of them and give us a chance I scented a gentleman as well as an individual with whom it would be unwise to argue.

He had told me that he was contractor for a new depot at Jucklin, and when we got off the train I saw how sadly the new building was needed, and also noted the fact that the intended structure had progressed as far as the foundation. He nodded to the men on the gang, and we crossed to a small, hastily built shed which he called his office and where he showed me his blue prints.

I tried to evince interest in the blue prints, but I was really interested in the man who came to the door and waited until Trenton should look up and observe him before speaking.

"What's the matter, Joe?" Trenton asked finally.

"I hired a new feller while you was gone," the slouch hatted foreman finally managed.

"Yeah." Trenton continued to puff his pipe and explain the blue prints.

"An' Saturday night this new feller pulled out. Went through all the other boys' clothes before he left. It was pay night, you know. Fellow who was over to the fair at Sedalia says he see him there yesterday. He certainly cleaned the bunch before he left. I thought maybe——"

"Right here is where the ticket office will be," said Trenton, running his finger along the blue print. But I noticed a tightening of his lips on the pipe.

"I wanted to tell ya," Joe went on. "He took that army watch of yours, too—the one ya left there in the boarding house bureau—the one the company give ya."

"On this side will be the ladies' waiting room." Then turning to Joe: "That left wall's got to be done over. I could see it was off first thing I got off the train. Have the boys tear that out, and see that it's put in right."

Joe had gone and Trenton was putting the blue print into a roll and back into the drawer. After a time I said:

"This fellow who took the gang's money and your watch—do you suppose they'll get him?"

There was a hard flash in his eyes and his lips trembled just before they set firm. "'They'? I don't know what they'll do. But I'll get him."

"But you don't know what he looks like, He was hired while you were gone. You've never seen him."

"I'll get him, and it will be the last job like that he'll ever pull off. Joe knows that."

I didn't see Trenton until a day or two later. Then along toward evening there was considerable commotion on the street in front of the hotel, and I was told that "they've caught the fellow who robbed Dave Trenton's crew."

I was on the heels of the crowd, but by the time I reached Trenton's office the crowd had turned back upon itself except for the lucky few who had points of vantage at the one window of the shack.

The town marshal seemed to have as much difficulty gaining entrance to the office—close doored—as the rest of the crowd, but he explained that a railroad brakeman had discovered the sought for party down at the junction, had temporarily turned him over to Trenton, and that in due time the law would take its course.

Finally Dave Trenton himself opened the door. He looked out at the crowd. "This isn't any free show, gentlemen!" That was all he said, but he said it sort of sarcastic like, and the crowd faded. The marshal, realizing he had certain interests in the matter, turned back, but Joe told him he'd see him that night, and there was just the office standing there, the door closed.

Back on Main street it was figured that Trenton was giving the culprit similar treatment to what he had administered to a gentleman with whom he had had disagreement the week before. And then supper time came with its distractions. And time came for me to take my train.

My train was late, and I waited on the cinder platform opposite the spot where the new depot was to be. And as I waited there the shack door opened and Trenton waved to me to come over. As I entered I saw the man who was in mighty bad with Trenton and his crew. He sat there, smoking Trenton's own pipe.

"I want you to meet Ed Stanberry," Trenton said in introduction.

"How d'ya do?" Ed offered, indifferently.

"Ed's going to leave us in a few minutes when it gets a little darker. He's going to take my car and drive over to St. Joe and take the train from there. You remember, don't you, Ed, where I told you to leave the car?"

Ed grunted acknowledgment.

My train became later as time went on. It grew dark first, and Ed was gone. We were alone together, and Trenton did not then answer right away my unspoken question, "Why?" But after a time he said:

"Did you ever stop to consider that every town you go through—no matter how small, how unattractive—is somebody's old home town? You can live in one of 'em and see only its lack of opportunities, the weeds that this time of year almost smother it, the tin-brick fronts of the buildings on Main street with the sun beating on 'em, the characters in the doorways that you've grown tired of.

"And then you can get away from one of those same towns—a long ways away without much idea of ever going back any more—and you think of it and its streets are misted with the softness of evening, and the weeds become sweet smelling lilacs, and there's a light in the postoffice on Main street, and the folks that are in there are the kind you'd just be hungry to talk to.

"I've gone through such towns at evening—not the one I knew, a long ways from the one I knew—but there were prints of bare feet in the dust of the road that led up from the water tank. And you could hear the voices of the boys playing ball in the pasture—voices, you know, like they are at evening. And you could pick out the old fellows sitting on the benches—the pioneers—and name 'em all for the old fellows of that town you knew so well. Ed—Ed was from my old home town."

"You didn't know it?"

"Not at first. Not for quite a while. At first I was going to give him the beating of his life, and then—then he started to tell me straight about himself—and then I started to ask him about this one and that one—his mother who used to cook coffee at the picnics, and his brother that I played ball with the summer we beat everything in the county, and—well, I asked him about every one in town the both of us could remember. And there weren't so very many. It was only a town of 500. And then—then, after that, fine chance, wasn't there, of my blacking his eyes?"

"Did he know you?"

"Not until after I'd told him. He was a lot younger than I was. But he remembered me well enough after we got to comparing notes. Don't know as I ever heard any name for it unless you might call it 'The Brotherhood of Wanderers from the Same Home Town.' But it's a strong organization here in the U. S. I'll have to pay the bunch off over again, but the lodge has cost many a man more in dues than that. My watch? O, he slipped that back to me when I called him by his old nickname."

THE LEES OF HAPPINESS

And she was alone at night in the room that had seen the glory of her marriage and then the pain. To meet Jeff again she went back in spirit to that wonderful year, that intense, passionate absorption and companionship, rather than looked forward to a problematical meeting hereafter; she awoke often to lie and wish for that presence beside her—inanimate yet breathing—still Jeff.

One afternoon six months after his death she was sitting on the porch, clad in a black dress which took away the faintest suggestion of plumpness from her figure. It was Indian summer—golden brown all about her; a hush broken by the sighing of leaves; over west a four o'clock sun dripping streaks of red and yellow over a flaming sky. Most of the birds had gone—only a sparrow that had built itself a nest on the cornice of a pillar kept up an intermittent cheeping varied by occasional fluttering sallies overhead. Roxanne moved her chair to where she could watch him and her mind idled drowsily on the bosom of the afternoon.

Harry Cromwell was coming out from Chicago to dinner. Since his divorce over eight years before he had been a frequent visitor. They had had what amounted to a tradition between them: when he arrived they would go to look at Jeff; Harry would sit down on the edge of the bed and in a hearty voice ask:

"Well, Jeff, old man, how do you feel today?"

Roxanne, standing beside, would look intently at Jeff, dreaming vaguely that some shadowy recognition of this former friend might pass across that broken mind—but the head, pale and carven as a statue, would only move slowly in its sole gesture toward the light as if something behind the blind eyes were groping, groping for another light long since gone away.

These visits stretched over eight years—at Easter, Christmas, Thanksgiving, and on many a Sunday Harry had arrived, paid his call on Jeff, and then talked for a long while with Roxanne on the porch. He was devoted to her. To him she was all good, the symbol of faith and hope. He made no pretense of hiding it—he made no attempt to deepen this relation. She was his best friend as the mass of flesh on the bed there had been his best friend. She was peace, she was rest; she was the past. Of his own tragedy she alone knew.

He had been out to Marlowe for the funeral, but since then the firm he worked for had shifted him to the east and it was only a business trip that had brought him to the vicinity of Chicago. Roxanne had written him to come when he could—she needed advice, sound business advice, so after a night in the city he had gladly caught a train out.

They shook hands warmly and he helped her move two rockers together.

"How's George," she demanded, her smile radiant as ever.

"He's fine, Roxanne. Seems to like school."

She nodded in agreement.

"Of course it was the only thing to do, to send him."

"Of course, but——"

"You miss him like anything, Harry?"

"Yes—I do miss him. He's a great boy."

He talked a lot about George. His life was bound up in the boy now. Roxanne was interested. Harry must bring him out on his next vacation. She had only seen him once in her life—a little shaver in dirty rompers.

She left him with the newspaper while she prepared dinner—she had four chops tonight and some late vegetables from her own garden. She put it all on and then called him, and sitting down together they continued their talk about George.

"If I had a child——" she would say.

Afterward, Harry having given her what slender advice he could about investments, they walked through the garden, pausing here and there to recognize what had once been a cement bench, where the tennis court had lain.

"Do you remember——"

Then they were off on a flood of reminiscences: the day they had taken all the snapshots and Jeff had insisted on being photographed astride the calf; the day they had developed the idea of making the old barn a writing room for Jeff, and the sketch they had made, lying sprawled in the grass, their heads almost touching. There was to have been a covered lattice connecting the studio and the house so that Jeff could get there on wet days—the lattice had even been started as a result, but nothing remained except a broken triangular piece that still adhered to the house and resembled a battered chicken coop.

"And the mint juleps!"

"And Jeff's note book! Do you remember how we'd laugh, Harry, when we'd get it out of his pocket and read aloud a page of material. And how frantic he used to get?"

"Wild! He was such a kid about his writing."

They were both silent a moment and then Harry burst out again.

"We were to have a place out here, too. Do you remember? We were to buy the adjoining twenty acres. And what parties we four were to have!"

Again there was a pause broken this time by a low question from Roxanne.

"Do you ever hear of her, Harry?"

The shadow of a frown deepened on his brow.

"Why—yes," he admitted slowly. "She's in Seattle. She's married again to a man named Horton, a sort of lumber king. He's a great deal older than she, I believe."

"And she's—behaving?"

"Yes—that is, I've heard so. She has everything, you see. Nothing much to do except dress up for this—fellow at dinner time."

"I see."

With an effort he changed the subject.

"Are you going to keep the house?"

"I think so," she said nodding. "I've lived here so long, Harry, it'd seem terrible to move. I thought of trained nursing, but of course that'd mean leaving. I've about decided to be a boarding house lady."

"Live in one?"

"No. Keep one," she laughed. "Is there such an anatomy as a boarding house lady? Anyway I'd have a Negress and keep about eight people in the summer and two or three, if I can get them, in the winter. Of course I'll have to have the house repainted and gone over inside."

Harry considered.

"Roxanne, why—naturally you know best what you can do, but it does seem a shock, Roxanne. You came here as a bride."

"Perhaps," she said unsmilingly, "that's why I don't mind remaining here as a boarding house lady."

"I remember," he mused, his eyes twinkling, "a certain batch of biscuits."

"O, those biscuits," she laughed. "Still from all I heard about the way you devoured them they couldn't have been so bad. I was so low that day, yet somehow I laughed when the nurse told me about those biscuits."

"I noticed that the twelve nail holes are still in the library wall where Jeff drove them."

"Yes."

It was getting very dark now, a crispness settled in the air; a little gust of wind sent down a last spray of leaves. Roxanne shivered slightly.

"We'd better go in."

He looked at his watch.

"It's late. I must be leaving. I go east tomorrow."

"Must you?"

They lingered for a moment just below the stoop, watching a moon that seemed full of snow float out of the distance where the lake lay. Summer was gone and now Indian summer. The grass was cold and there was no mist and no dew. After he left she would go in and light the gas and he would go down the path, past the cemetery and on to the village. To these two life had come quickly and gone, leaving not bitterness but pity, not disillusion but only pain. There was already enough moonlight when they shook hands for each to see the gathered kindness in the other's eyes.

should deal these crashing blows to them? Upstairs there was taking place a living inquest on the soul of his friend; he was sitting here in a quiet room listening to the plaint of a wasp, just as when he was a boy he had been compelled by a strict aunt to sit hourlong on a chair and atone for some misbehavior. But who had put him here? What ferocious aunt had leaned out of the sky to make him atone for—what?

About Kitty he felt a great hopelessness. She was too expensive—that was the word—expensive. Suddenly he hated her. He wanted to throw her down and kick at her—to tell her she was a cheat and a leech—that she was dirty. And she must give him back his boy.

He got up and began pacing up and down the room. Simultaneously he heard some one begin walking down the hallway upstairs in exact time with him. He found himself wondering if they would walk in time until the person reached the end of the hall.

Kitty had gone to her mother. God help her, what a mother to go to! He tried to imagine the meeting: the abused wife collapsing upon the mother's breast. He could not. That Kitty was capable of any deep grief was impossible. He had gradually grown to think of her as something unapproachable and callous. She would get a divorce, of course, and eventually she would marry again. He began to consider this. Whom would she marry? He laughed bitterly and then stopped; a picture had suddenly flashed to him—of Kitty's arms around some man whose face he could not see, of Kitty's lips pressed close to other lips in what was surely passion.

"God!" he cried aloud, "God! God! God! '

Then the pictures came thick and fast. The Kitty of this morning faded; the soiled kimono rolled up and disappeared; the pouts, and rages, and tears all were washed away. Again she was Kitty Carr—Kitty Carr with yellow hair and great baby eyes. Ah, she had loved him, she had loved him.

After a while he perceived that something was amiss with him, something that had nothing to do with Kitty or Jeff, something of a different gender. Amazingly it burst on him at last; he was hungry. Simple enough, that! He would go into the kitchen in a moment and ask the colored cook for a sandwich. After that he must hurry. He must go back to the city.

He paused at the wall, jerked at something round, and, fingering it absently, put it to his mouth and tasted it as a baby tastes a bright toy. His teeth closed on it—Ah!

She'd left that damn kimono, that dirty pink kimono. She might have had the decency to take it with her, he thought. It would hang in the house like the corpse of love. He would try to throw it away, but he would never be able to bring himself to move it. It would be like Kitty, soft and pliable, withal impervious. You couldn't move Kitty; you couldn't reach Kitty. There was nothing there to reach. He understood that perfectly and it seemed now that he had understood it all along.

He reached to the wall for anotner biscuit and with an effort pulled it out, nail and all. He carefully removed the nail from the center, wondering idly if he had eaten the nail with the first biscuit. Preposterous! He would have remembered—it was a huge nail. He felt his stomach. He must be very hungry. He considered—he remembered now—yesterday he had had no dinner. It was the girl's day out and Kitty had lain in her room eating chocolate drops. She had said she felt "smothery" and couldn't bear having him near her. He had given George a bath and put him to bed and then laid down on the couch intending to rest a minute before getting his own dinner. There he had fallen asleep and awakened about eleven to find that there was nothing in the ice box except a spoonful of potato salad. This he had eaten, together with some chocolate drops that he found on Kitty's bureau. This morning he had breakfasted hurriedly downtown before going to the office. But at noon, beginning to worry about Kitty, he had decided to go home and take her out to lunch. After that there had been the note on his pillow. One suitcase was gone; also the pile of lingerie in the closet—and she had left instructions for sending her trunk.

He had never been so hungry, he thought

At 5 o'clock, when the visiting nurse tiptoed downstairs, he was sitting on the sofa staring at the carpet. She noticed when he looked at her that his eyes were gray and rather handsome.

"Mr. Cromwell?"

"Yes?"

"O, Mrs. Curtain won't be able to see you at dinner. She's not well. She told me to tell you that the cook will fix you something and that there's a spare bedroom."

"She's sick, you say?"

"She's lying down in her room. The consultation is just over."

"Did they—did they decide anything?"

"Yes," said the nurse softly, "Dr. Jewett says there's no hope. Mr. Curtain may live indefinitely, but he'll never see again or move again or think. He'll just breathe."

"Just breathe?"

"Yes."

For the first time the nurse noted that beside the writing desk she remembered to have seen a line of a dozen or so curious round objects which she had vaguely imagined to be some exotic form of decoration; there was now only one. Where the others had been was a series of little nail holes.

Harry followed her glance dazedly and then rose to his feet.

"I don't believe I'll stay," he said, abstractedly taking out his watch; "I believe there's a train."

She nodded. Harry picked up his hat.

"Good-by," she said pleasantly.

"Good-by," he answered, as though talking to himself and, still abstractedly, evidently moved by some invisible and involuntary force, he paused on his way to the door and she saw him pluck the last object from the wall and drop it into his pocket

Then he opened the screen door and, descending the porch steps, passed out of her sight.

V.

After a while the coat of clean white paint on the Jeffrey Curtain house made a definite compromise with the suns of many Julys and showed its good faith by turning gray. It scaled—huge peelings of very brittle old paint leaned over backward like aged men practicing grotesque gymnastics and finally dropped to a moldy death in the overgrown grass beneath. The paint on the front pillars became streaky; the white ball was knocked off the left hand doorpost; the green blinds darkened until they lost all pretense of color.

It began to be a house that was avoided—some church bought a lot diagonally opposite for a graveyard and this, combined with "the place where Mrs. Curtain stays with that living corpse," was enough to throw a ghostly aura over that quarter of the road. Not that she was left alone. Men and women came to see her, met her down town, where she went to do her marketing, brought her home in their cars—and came in for a moment to chat and to rest, so to speak, in the glamour that still played in her gently radiant smile. Men who did not know her no longer followed her with admiring glances in the street; a diaphanous veil had come down over her beauty, destroying its vividness, yet bringing neither wrinkles nor fat.

She acquired a character in the village—a group of little stories were told of her: how when the country was frozen over one winter so that no wagons nor automobiles could run, she taught herself to skate so that she could make quick time to the grocer and druggist and not leave Jeffrey alone for long. It was said that every night since his paralysis she slept in a small bed set beside his holding his hand in hers.

Jeffrey Curtain was spoken of as though he were already dead. As the years dropped by those who had known him died or moved away—there were but half a dozen of the old crowd who had drunk cocktails together, called each other's wives by their first names, and thought that Jeff was about the best hearted and wittiest and most talented fellow that Marlowe had ever known. Now, to the casual visitor he was merely the reason that Mrs. Curtain excused herself sometimes and hurried upstairs; he was a groan or a sharp cry borne to the silent parlor on the heavy air of a Sunday afternoon.

He could not move; he was stone blind, dumb and totally unconscious. All day he lay in his bed except for a shift to his wheelchair every morning while she straightened the room. His paralysis was creeping slowly toward his heart. At first—for the first year—Roxanne had received the faintest answering pressure sometimes when she held his hand—then it had gone, ceased one evening and never came back, and through two nights Roxanne lay wide eyed, staring into the dark and wondering what had gone, what fraction of his soul had taken flight, what last grain of comprehension those shattered broken nerves still carried to the brain.

After that hope died. Had it not been for her unceasing care the last spark would have gone long before. Every morning she shaved and bathed him, shifted him with her own hands from bed to chair and back to bed. She was in his room constantly, bearing medicine, straightening a pillow, talking to him almost as one talks to a nearly human dog, without hope of response or appreciation, but with the dim persuasion of habit, like a prayer when faith has gone.

Not a few people, one celebrated nerve specialist among them, gave her a plain impression that it was futile to exercise so much care, that if Jeffrey had been conscious he would have wished to die, that if his spirit were hovering in some wider air it would agree to no such sacrifice from her, it would fret only for the prison of its body to give it full release.

"But you see," she replied, shaking her head gently, "when I married Jeffrey it was—until I ceased to love him."

"But," was protested in effect, "you can't love that."

"I can love what it once was. What else is there?"

The specialist shrugged his shoulders and went away to say that Mrs. Curtain was a remarkable woman and just about as sweet as they come—but, he added, it was a pity—a terrible pity.

"She's so sweet—and so beautiful! There must be some man, or a dozen, just aching to take care of her . . ."

Casually—there were. Here and there some one began in hope—and ended in worship, a reverential worship. There was no love in the woman except, strangely enough, for life, for the people in the world, from the casual tramp to whom she gave food she could ill afford to the butcher who sold her a cheap cut of steak across the meaty board. The other phase was sealed up somewhere in that expressionless mummy who lay with his face turned ever toward the light as mechanically as a compass needle and waited dumbly for the last wave to wash over his heart.

After eleven years he died in the middle of a May night when the scent of the syringa hung upon the window sill and a breeze wafted in the shrillings of the frogs and cicadas outside. Roxanne awoke at two and realized with a start that she was alone in the house at last.

After that she sat on her weather beaten porch through the afternoons of several months and gazing down across the fields which undulated in a slow descent to the white and green town thought what she might do with her life. She was thirty-six, handsome, strong, and free. The years had eaten up her capital and a great part of Jeffrey's insurance; she had reluctantly parted with the acres to right and left of her and had even placed a small mortgage on the house.

With her husband's death had come a great physical restlessness. She missed having to care for him in the morning, her rush to town, and the brief and therefore accentuated neighborly meetings in the butcher's and grocer's; she missed the cooking for two, the preparation of delicate liquid food for him—one day consumed with energy she went out and spaded up the whole garden, a thing that had not been done for years red mustache, clad in overalls that came up almost to his armpits, an undershirt, and a greasy blouse—was sitting there on the end of an overturned packing case and taking the cover off an ample tin dinner pail.

"Got a little nourishment to squander on a felleh pilgrim, Jim?" Cousin Sam asked jauntily—for he usually spoke in an ornate manner.

"Sure," said Cousin Jim, without enthusiasm, but without resentment.

"My corporosity could assimilate a little manna right now," Cousin Sam observed, and he stood expectantly by while Cousin Jim's stubby, toil marked hand lifted thick sandwiches, hard boiled eggs, doughnuts, pickles, and a wedge of pie out of the dinner pail. As a matter of course Jim divided the wedge of pie in halves with his jack knife, sharing the meal equally with Sam. To Cousin Jim, relatives were an obligation, like going to church when one was able. Avoiding one's obligations was an expedient which never occurred to his simple mind. He realized Sam's failings, but relatives were relatives, as one's hand was one's hand.

Cousin Jim commonly stayed on duty until 8 o'clock or so, then tramped down through the grounds to the public road and took the trolley to his home in Windham, returning to Overlook at 6 o'clock in the morning. He supposed Sam would hang around and ride home with him. But soon after the contents of the dinner pail were consumed Cousin Sam drifted away by himself. He had business on hand that evening—momentous business—which would require his presence in that vicinity indefinitely.

An hour or so later—that is, about half past seven—Louis, the stocky gardener, left the garage, in the second story of which he had his lodging, and struck off into the woods, not following any road or path. After he had walked some distance he noticed among the trees not far ahead a slope shouldered, long necked figure in a suit of yellow plaid topped by a stiff straw hat set at a rakish angle, a bamboo stick in its hand. Louis recognized the figure, for it was well enough known to everybody about the place, but he thought nothing in particular about it. In a moment Cousin Sam saw him, too, and greeted him airily:

"Well, Louis, how you obsquatulatin' this evening?"

This Citizen Thorp had a great number of strange words, such as no other English speaking person seemed to use, the meaning of which was quite obscure to Louis. But the gardener realized that his own command of English was limited; also that Citizen Thorp's intentions were always very sociable. So he smiled amiably, replied "All right," and kept on his way, Citizen Thorp dropping out of his mind almost as soon as the visible image dropped out of his eye.

But it was not so with Sam Thorp. Knowing all the gossip of the servants' quarters, he had something particular in his mind about Louis which caused him to grin. He grinned rather easily, anyway, his mouth being of the loose sort, as though it were continually coming unbuttoned. Grinning and making sure that Louis was moving on among the trees out of sight, he continued his slow stroll.

The sun was setting now, its rich light beautifully flooding the undulating woods. As the light began slowly to mellow and die Sam edged toward Overlook House. When it was dusk, so that a moving figure could not be seen at a distance, he slipped into the avenue of evergreens that led through the formal garden at the west of the house and at the outer side of the garden sat down on a bench under a flowering bush, where he could see the west elevation of the big house very well and—probably—not be seen. There he waited.

Meanwhile Louis, in the rich sunset light, had taken up a position beside a big tree from which he could watch the bridle path that led from the house and at the same time slip out of sight among the trees in case anybody came along whom he didn't wish to have see him. His present status in the household was a bit uncertain. Amid the affluence of Overlook, Judge Crane innocently retained some democratic ideals of his early western days. For one thing, he didn't like "flunkies." Any male person in livery was a flunky; but this same male person, performing the same menial offices without a livery, was merely a servant and so not at all repugnant to the judge's democratic faith. Therefore there were no flunkies, properly speaking. Since the wheeled chair was often in use Louis was quite as apt to be employed around the house as on the grounds, but he was still nominally a gardener.

His status in another respect was more unsettled. Such passages and declamations as commonly lead to matrimony had occurred between himself and Lena, the muscular maid. Louis himself had considered that affair as good as settled. Then came a witch—of Polish extraction, it was said—with lissom body as graceful as a cat's, dancing blue eyes, bowed red lips, and an amazing lack of any sense of responsibility. So Louis was now certain of only one thing—that there was something in his heart that made him drunk and stung him; and that, except when that heady intoxication rolled over him like a wave, he was mostly miserable.

He was now waiting for Katey; but he had chosen such a position that, while not missing Katey, he could discreetly withdraw out of vengeful Lena's sight in case Lena should be looking for him. Katey had promised to meet him there, and he had in his pocket two tickets—at a dollar and a half apiece—for the extraordinary theatrical performance at Windham, by which he had bribed her to promise. Louis was 32—not a young man, but at a time of life when one's status ought to be getting settled. Not a handsome man, either, and undeniably bandy-legged, as many a square built person of great bodily strength is. He had an obscure idea that what attracted Katey was his strength, or perhaps the big yellow mustache that barred his square face straight across. And sometimes he was tormented by the idea that what attracted Katey was just taking him away from Lena. But he couldn't help it; he couldn't help anything any more.

His heart beat sensibly and his eyes burned along the path as he waited for her to come gliding into view. The light that flooded the woods grew mellower and presently began to die. Louis waited until it was quite dark and the extraordinary theatrical performance at Windham had been going on for some time. And Lena was amply revenged, if she had but known it, for the night that gathered in Louis' heart was deeper than that which mysteriously drowned the woods under a moonless sky. At length he plodded heavily away—mercifully hidden by the night from all unbearable human sight—out of the woods and down to the sea.

Instinct led him to the right spot down there. Somewhat to the south of Overlook House a long tongue of water ran into the land, as though a huge wedge had been driven into the rock shore at the sharpest angle, leaving a great granite splinter thirty rods long on the seaward side. That long tongue of water, confined between precipitous granite walls and fretted by many great bowlders in its bed, behaved very rudely at high tide, especially if the wind was in the south. Toward its upper end broken rock and drifted shingle formed a bar which was only a foot or so under water at low tide. Above that bar the basin was deeper and more strictly confined by sheer rock walls. Into that basin at high tide—especially when driven by a south wind—the waves piled and couldn't well get out, so they tore and roared and seethed and boiled in there most forbiddingly, tumbling and eddying in every direction, but still with a main circular drift round and round.

Long ago the spot had been named the Devil's Coffee Pot, but at Overlook House it was commonly known just as "the pot." It was a source of some little annoyance to Judge Crane. As the pot was a locally famous natural wonder, he didn't quite like to fence it off and forbid access to it, so the path along the shore through his grounds was undefiled by signs of warning against trespass. But sometimes tourists who had satisfied their curiosity regarding the pot proceeded to satisfy it regarding other parts of his estate and even regarding the aspect of his house as seen through the windows. He compromised by putting up a sign, "Please keep to the path."

The pot was a source of speculative fascination to Ted Pennell, who had spent a good deal of supposedly valuable time tossing pieces of wood into it, studying the currents and wondering, adventurously, whether a man who jumped into it in a bathing suit, at high tide, would get out alive. He had a sort of feeling that he could never be satisfied until he found out. As though the Satanic designer had wished to enjoy his pot in privacy a long heap of tumbled rock had been thrown up near it as a sort of rude screen. Round that screen Louis walked, the tumult within him drawn to the tumult of water. But it was low tide now; the pot only murmured and tossed a bit in its slumber. So Louis sat down on the rock screen and stared out to sea—a dusk of immensity which pulsed in long, noiseless heart beats and murmured at the crags. His woe was even more immense than that.

And on the following day, Friday, he learned that Katey had left the house for good. She hadn't been discharged, but had left abruptly of her own accord and would not return. That terse statement, emanating indisputably from Benjamin the butler himself, had circulated through the servants' quarters until it reached Louis.

That Friday evening Lester Hilton left New York to spend the week-end at Overlook House, as he had promised his wife. Danforth Crane, the judge's son, came up on the same train with him. Not that either of them particularly cared to travel with the other; but trains are free to anybody. Danforth Crane regarded Lester Hilton—in so far as he bothered to regard him at all—with a mild and cool toleration. Lester Hilton was well enough aware of it and secretly hated him for it. Outwardly, of course, he could afford no such ruinous extravagance as would be involved in any display of that sentiment toward the man who, with his father, was making the fortunes of Pennell, Hilton and company. Outwardly, as a matter of course, he made every display of esteem and friendship.

Saturday morning, by chance, the two men left Overlook House at almost the same time for a walk and a mouthful of the fresh sea air. But since they could easily escape each other and that was what both of them wanted to do, they turned in opposite directions.

The sharp north wind of the Thursday before had turned gentle and southerly, bringing genial weather—expansive and bland as one strolled across the luxuriant grounds looking off at the shining sea. But there was nothing bland in Lester Hilton's mind. The brutal luck down in Wall street still held, and he'd had a half hour's talk with his wife—inconclusive, but somber enough, too. His mind was gloomy, and deep down in him his heart quaked. Could it, after all, come to utter smash with him? His lean and overeager face puckered as he asked himself that fateful question of the sea, and he felt a brutality in the sea's bland indifference.

As he walked toward the water a sound arose upon his ear—a long roar. Remembering the pot then, he thought the tide must be high—worth looking at, anyway, for one who had nothing else to do. He went round the screen of tumbled rock, stepped down through a little crevice in the granite and came out on the rim of the pot. The tide was high and the pot boiled finely—a wild tumult of prisoned water, seething and whirling in every part, now churned into milk and the next instant showing faint streaks of green as the waves rolled in and couldn't get out. The whole surface rose and fell in long, spasmodic pants, boiling up and down, but every part of the surface was in its own motion. Hilton looked down at it a couple of minutes and an idea occurred to him—or hardly an idea; more like a thing that pushed itself into his mind. The meaning of it was that if one stepped forward some twenty inches all this trouble would be over forever.

He turned hastily, scrambled up the little crevice, and strode away almost as though the putative designer of the pot had reached a physical hand for him. He went back toward the house, circled its north end and approached the west door. So approaching, he glanced mechanically downward into the little cement-paved artificial valley with a screen of shrubbery at either side by which one gained the service doors of the basement. Two figures stood in the depression by a laundry window and the extraordinary action of one of them arrested Hilton's attention. He identified that figure as the square-built chap with a ridiculous mustache who pushed Mrs. Crane's wheeled chair. The chap seemed to be in a paroxysm of some sort—snatching the cap from his head, hurling it furiously to the ground, clutching a hand in his tow head, confronting the other figure as though about to fall upon him—or perhaps he was about to have a fit. Then the second figure saw the guest and called out, "Good morning, Mr. Hilton."

Whereupon the first figure glared around, snatched up his cap, and ran away. The remaining figure was clad in an absurd, ill-fitting plaid suit of light yellow color and wore a stiff straw hat at a rakish angle. Hilton indefinitely remembered him as some one he had seen about the place.

All Friday Samuel Thorp, so to speak, carried a cannon firecracker around in his mind with a lighted fuse. He wanted that cracker to go off, yet he was afraid it would while still in his possession. For just once in his life he knew something that he didn't tell about. Indeed he was rather helpless and half paralyzed about it, for it was a thing that his imagination could hardly embroider. The truth itself exceeded any lie he could think of and so, with a sort of helplessness, he kept still.

Friday and Saturday morning he haunted Overlook House more closely than ever—considerably to the annoyance of plodding Cousin Jim, who felt that the haunting might be prejudicial to his good job; but one's relatives were the will of Providence, no doubt, like boils. Saturday forenoon, sauntering out once more through the storeroom to the little cement valley, Cousin Sam saw Louis the gardener, who looked downcast, and was walking by on the ground level. The temptation was excessive.

"How you segashistin' this morning, Louis?" Cousin Sam called out, genially, giving his own joke the tribute of a broad smile, and starting up the cement incline.

Any friendly voice subtly warmed the gardener's forlorn heart. He paused, smiling rather wanly, and replied, "All right."

Cousin Sam joined him on the ground level, yearning to cast in a line and see what fish he could catch, yet a bit dubious.

"This is what your Uncle Abner would call something like," said Sam, meaning the fine weather. "It does sure start the sap to perambulatin' in a man. I'm thinkin', if this holds, I must get me a fish pole and a jug of corn juice and mingle with old Mother Nature for a spell." He favored the gardener with a wide, loose-mouthed grin, looking tremendously experienced out of his pale eyes as he added, "I ain't been spificated right since New Year's. I believe it would do me a world of good."

Louis smiled, somewhat wanly, at this pleasantry.

"Guess, from all the signs and tokens that I've been observin' round here, some other people have had more luck," Sam continued with his worldly wise grin.

"Somebody been drinking?" Louis inquired, not with any interest in the subject, but to be polite.

Sam's grin broadened and he rallied the gardener: "You don't know nothin' about it yourself, eh, Louis?"—his manner implying that Louis knew all about it and was discreetly concealing the fact.

"Me?" said the innocent Louis. "No, I don't know anything about any drinking."

"You wasn't participatin' in that little celebration Thursday afternoon?" Mr. Thorp pursued with an incredulous air.

"Celebration?" Louis repeated. "No. I had no celebration."

"No?" said the furnace man. "I reckoned probably you was takin' a hand in it. Somebody was sure havin' a right merry little party Thursday by all the signs and tokens—and gettin' spificated for fair, or I'm a fish."

"Around here?" the gardener asked.

"Sure!" the furnace man replied, with a depth of sage conviction. "Katey, that Polish girl, was stewed to the gills."

Louis' eyes winced as though he had received a stab; and the look of mere incidental interest on his face was succeeded by something tense and wounded. "Katey?" he repeated, and choked a little over the word.

"Sure!" Mr. Thorp declared again. "I saw her myself—laid out to dry off."

It was a moment before Louis could manage his voice to ask, breathlessly, "Where?"

"Right there in that identical laundry," said Samuel Thorp, with the air of producing incontrovertible proof, pointing to the glazed window. "Pretty generally I come out through the storeroom and laundry, you see. Thursday afternoon—about 5 o'clock or some after—I started along that trail. But the laundry door was locked. Thinks I, 'That's kind of queer; this door was not locked a while ago; it ain't ever been locked far's I remember.'"

As Samuel Thorp began speaking Louis had started mechanically down the short descent and Sam walked down with him, still speaking.

"Thinks I, 'That's kind of queer,'" he repeated. Looking around at Louis, he cackled and went on, "Bein' as I'm naturally of an inquirin' turn of mind I thought I'd do a little prognosticatin'—just to be sociable. So I got the stepladder and climbed up to the transom and scratched a little hole in it and peeked through and there—sure's you're a foot high!—was Katey layin' over there on a pile of dirty clothes. I saw her plain's I'm seein' you—plumb saturated, as the old Hebrew prophets used to say."

They had halted. Louis was staring at the glazed window and something was suffocating him.

"What time—what time was that?" he managed to ask.

"Long about 5 o'clock or some after," Samuel Thorp replied, an uncertain grin fixed on his face as he watched the effect of his disclosure.

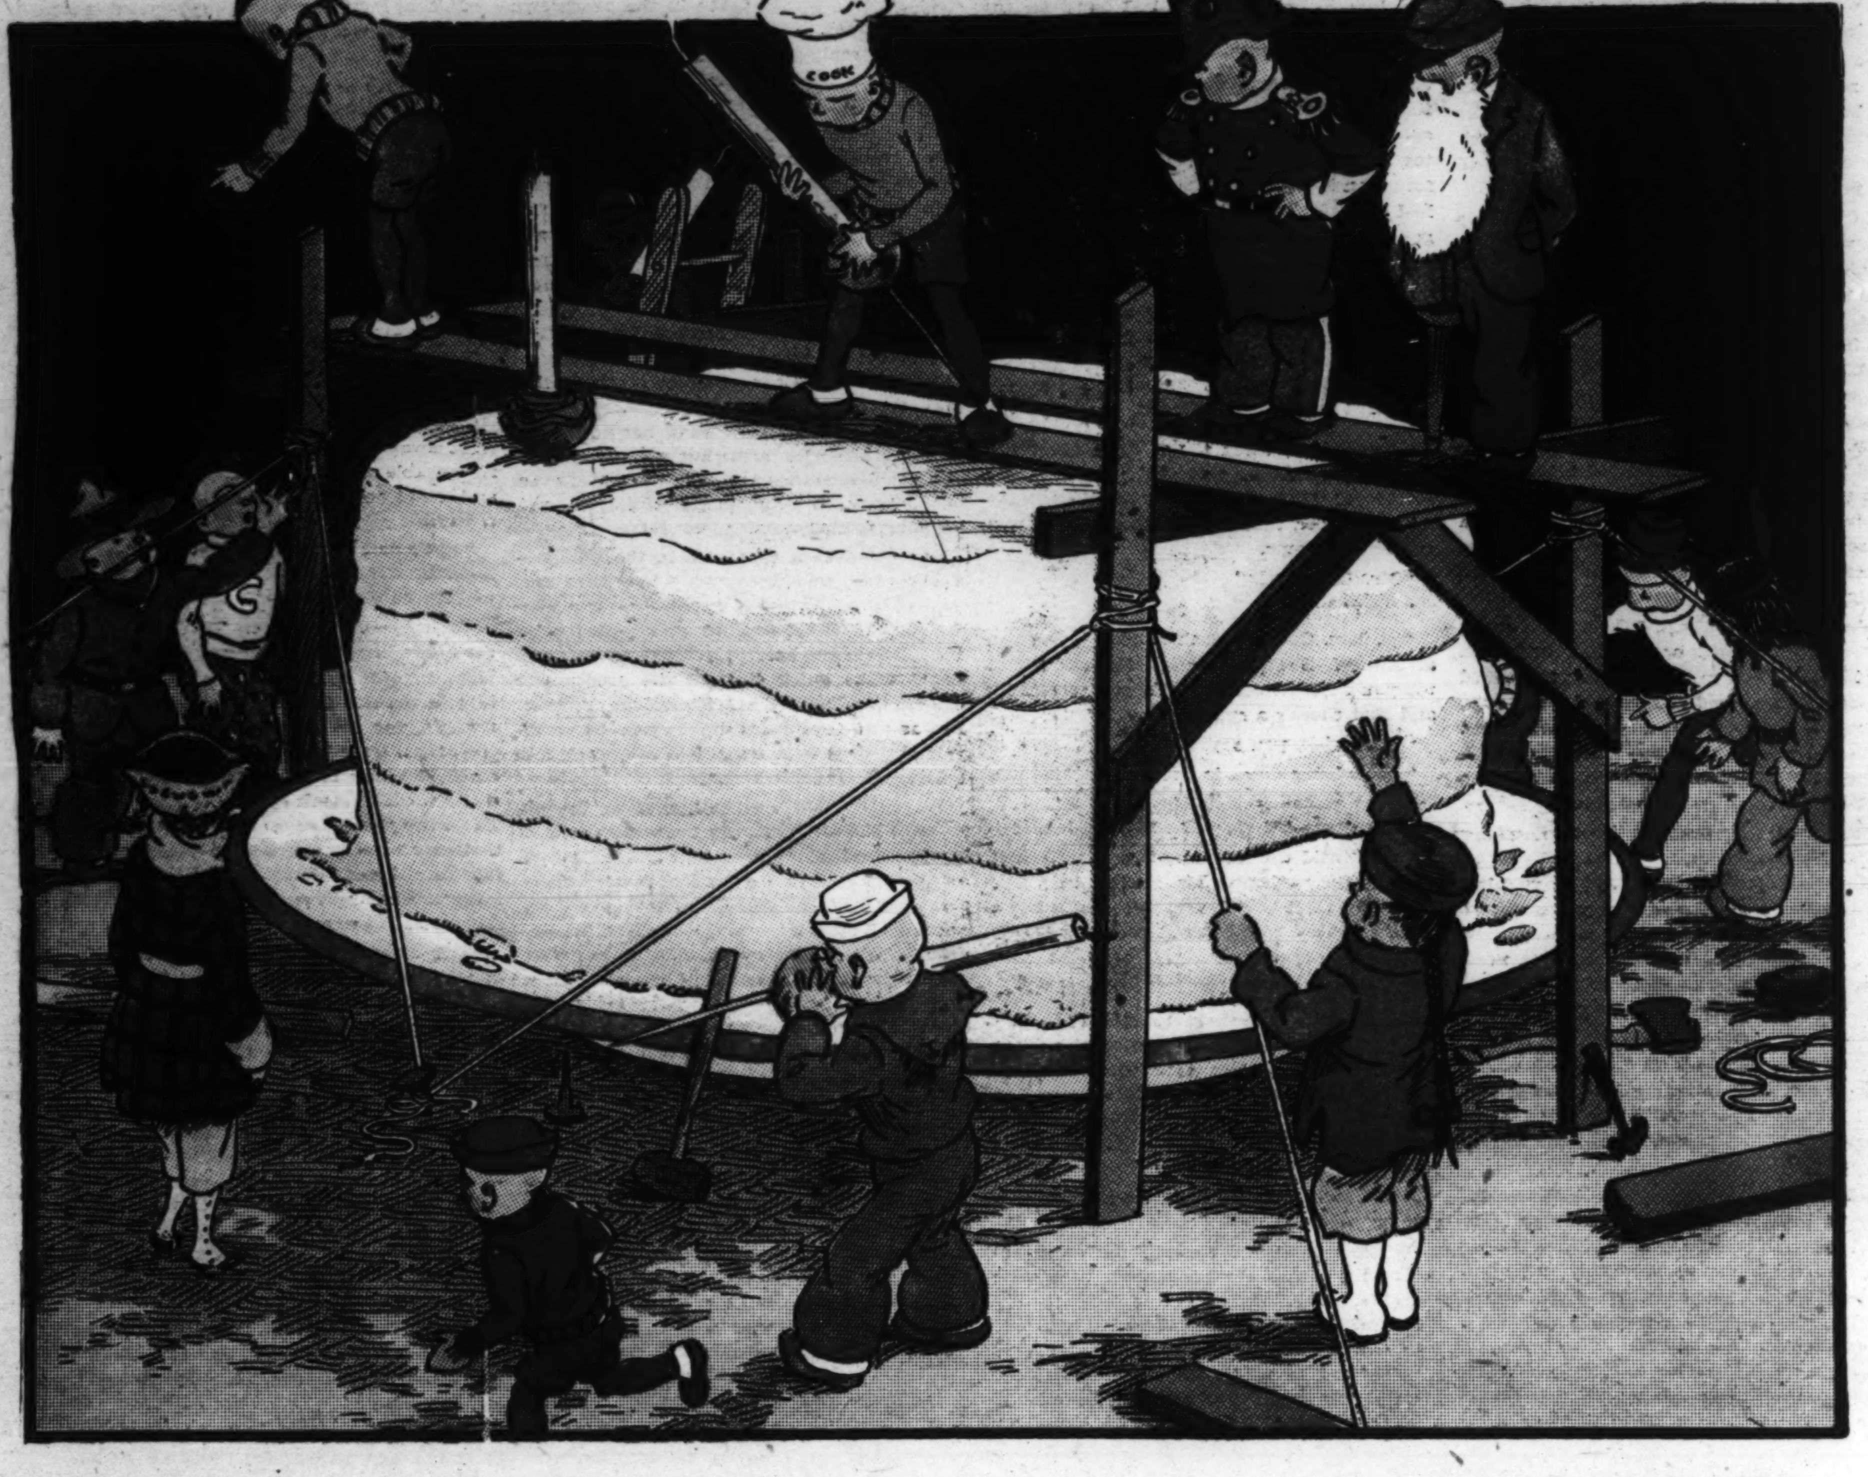
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE CHINAMAN MAKES A DISCOVERY.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



THE Teenie Weenie washing was usually a big one, and the Chinaman and Zip spent the better part of four days each week at the work. Except for the Dunce the Teenie Weenies are extremely clean. The Lady of Fashion is most particular, for that little lady makes a complete change of clothes every day and sometimes twice a day. However, she washes a great many things for herself, and almost any day one can see some of her dainty garments drying on the clothes thread back of the shoe house.

When the week's washing had been ironed, folded, and delivered to the tiny houses beneath the rose bush, the Chinaman usually spent the rest of the week visiting his many friends near the shoe house.

One Friday morning the little chap set out to visit an old hen who lived some distance from the rose bush, and as the little fellow walked along under the cover of some bushes he heard a woman talking.

The woman's voice came through an open window, and the little chap stopped to listen, for the voice was sad and it touched the Chinaman's kind little heart.

"I do wish we could afford to get candles for Emily's cake," said the woman. "It will nearly break her dear little heart, for she has talked so much about having candles on her birthday cake."

"Can't we afford to buy just six little candles, Auntie?" asked a big girl of about 12 years of age.

"No, my dear," answered the woman. "We haven't the money."

The Chinaman climbed up a vine which clung to the old house near the open window and cautiously peering over the sill he saw a kind faced woman and a big girl.

The woman was covering a lovely layer cake with frosting, while the girl looked on with wide eyes.

"Somethings has gottie be done ablout this," muttered the Chinaman as he slid to the ground. "Somehow we gottie glet that candles for blirthday cake."

Just as the Chinaman walked around the corner of an old summer kitchen, which stood in the rear of the house, he heard sobs within.

Peering through a knot hole the Chinaman saw a little girl crying softly to herself and hugging an old rag doll in her soft arms.

"O. Minerva!" sobbed the little girl, cuddling the doll. "I do so want candles on my birthday cake."

"You shall have candles on your blirthday cake allie same," muttered the Chinaman, as he brushed two tears off his fat little cheeks and hurried away.

The Chinaman made inquiries of his friends about the house. He learned from the chickens next door, from two mice and a sparrow that the woman whom he had heard talking was the aunt of the two girls. Emily was the little one the Chinaman had heard sobbing in the summer kitchen, and the older girl was Emily's sister, Jane.

The family was very poor, but the mice, the chickens and the sparrow said they had never known such nice people.

The Chinaman hurried to the shoe house as fast as his short legs could carry him and told the sad story to the Teenie Weenies.

When the Chinaman had finished his story there wasn't a dry cheek in the tiny place.

"Of course we'll get those candles," cried the General. "And we'll put them on that cake tonight so that the little girl shall have her birthday cake just as she wants it."

"I know where there are some candles," cried the Turk. "They're out on the ashpile back of the big house where the rich folks live. They had a birthday cake there several days ago, and I saw the candles thrown out only this morning. We can trim them up and fix them so they will be just as good as new."

Several Teenie Weenies set out in search of the candles, while the General and the Old Soldier made a trip to the house, where they found the cake.

It sat on a shelf in the pantry, and after the little fellows had examined it carefully they decided it would be necessary to build a scaffold over the cake, for the icing was too soft for even a Teenie Weenie to stand on.

The little folks carried the heavy planks over to the house and pushing them through the crack under the door they soon pulled them with ropes up to the shelf.

The Teenie Weenies worked almost all night, but they certainly gave little Emily a great deal of pleasure.

The poor child was almost beside herself with joy when she saw the six little candles on her cake, and she squeezed Minerva, her rag doll, so hard it actually ripped.

To this day the family can't understand how the candles appeared on the cake. Jane and her aunt think it a great mystery, but Emily says Minerva told the fairies and the fairies put on the candles.

OVERLOOK HOUSE

Blue Ribbon Fiction

by Will Payne

THE STORY THUS FAR—Mrs. Edith Hilton is a guest at Overlook House, the stately home of Judge Tillman Crane, a wealthy owner of oil lands. One afternoon, after making her way furtively to the servants' quarters, she is surprised by Katey, a maid, in the act of carrying off a cloak and hat belonging to the girl. Katey had been quarreling with another maid over a minor love affair, but she is delighted that the aristocratic Mrs. Hilton should want to borrow her clothes, and quickly forgets her troubles. Meanwhile Mrs. Hilton, in her maid's disguise, slips away to a nearby town to meet her husband, Lester Hilton, who has sent her an urgent summons. Hilton's brokerage firm has been handling Judge Crane's interests and Hilton himself has been misappropriating the judge's securities. Unwittingly the firm has sent Judge Crane a letter which would reveal this, and Hilton asks his wife to intercept it and substitute another, which he gives her. Edith agrees reluctantly and on her way back is overtaken by Ted Pennell, son of Hilton's partner, who mistakes her at first for the maid, Katey, and then, discovering her masquerade, gives her a lift in his car. Ted promises secrecy and and treats the little adventure as a joke; what he does not know that Peggy Loughman, his fiancee and the daughter of Judge Tillman's one-time partner (now dead), has seen Katey's hat and cloak in the car and is indignant over what she supposes to be young Pennell's philandering with a servant. Back at Overlook House, Mrs. Hilton manages to meet the mail carrier and exchange the real letter for the faked one—a proceeding made easy by the fact that Katey, who usually receives the mail, does not appear. In the servants' quarters they have been looking for the girl without success and Benjamin, the butler, has sought the judge with a whispered message over which the owner of Overlook House evidently is greatly perturbed.

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

Sam Thorp's Discovery.

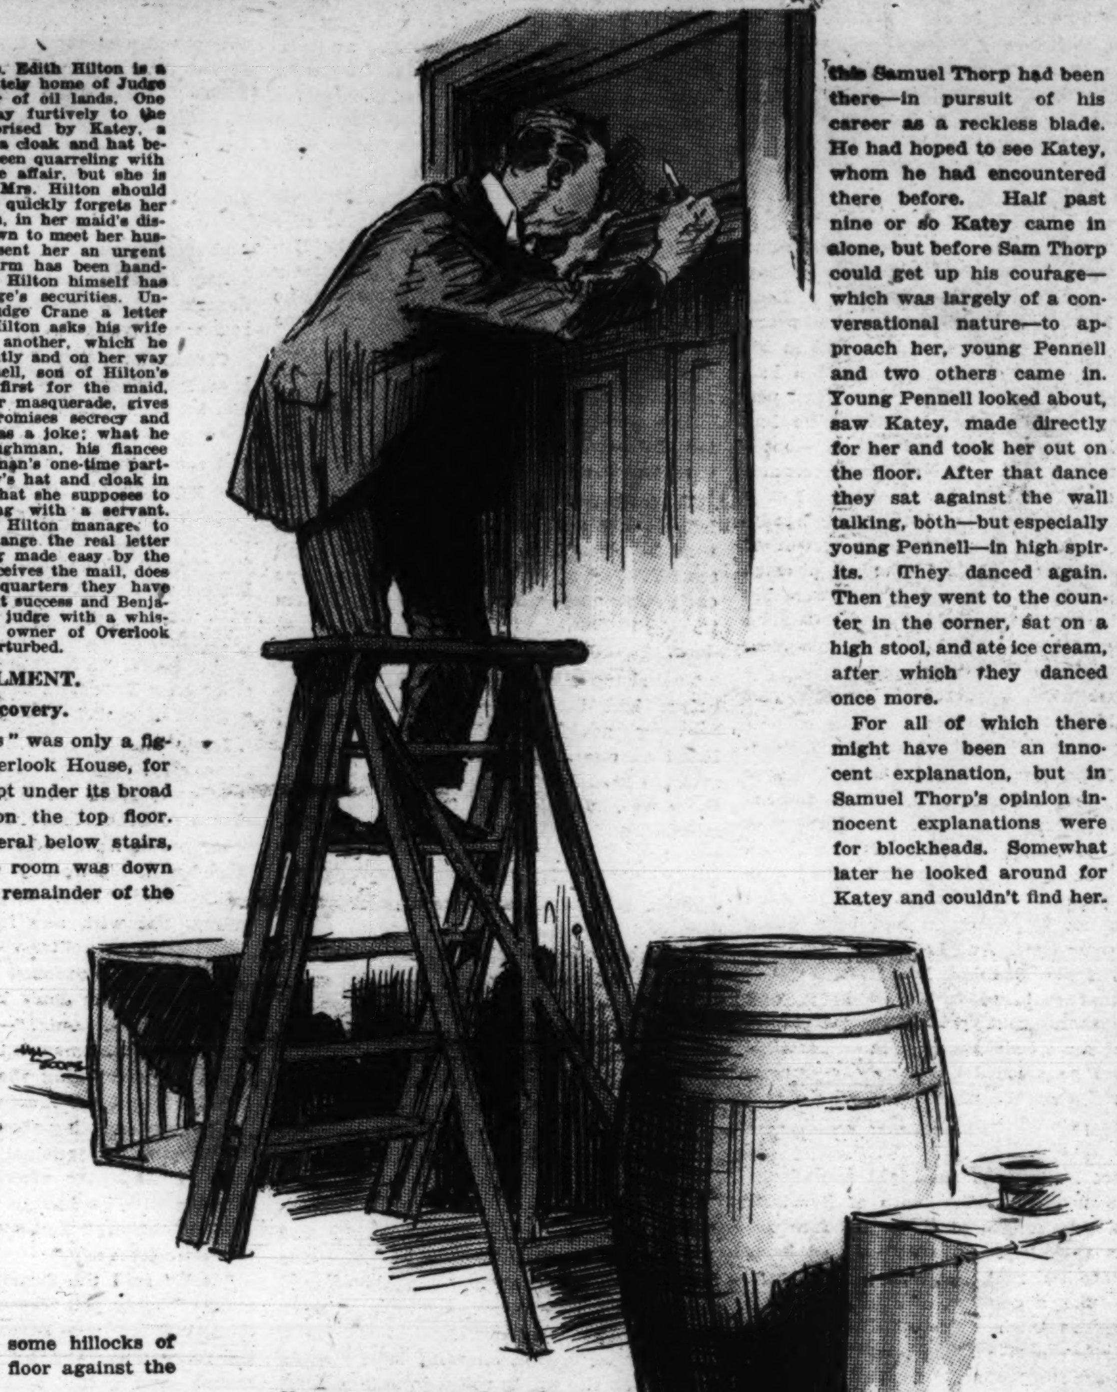
MOSTLY "below stairs" was only a figure of speech in Overlook House, for such servants as slept under its broad roof had their quarters on the top floor. There was, however, a literal below stairs, or cellarage. The furnace room was down there, walled off from the remainder of the basement by a thick cement partition, cavelike, lighted by electrics even in the daytime, with coal bins and many asbestos covered pipes. At the other or north end of the basement was a general storeroom and a laundry. The latter was in operation only two days in a fortnight, when a crew of charladies recruited from outside the house fell upon the accumulation of soiled linen. At other times it was empty, with some hillocks of linen accumulating on the floor against the next period of cleansing.

James Thorp inhabited this subterranean region—not a servant, but an independent and self-respecting American citizen of the village of Windham, where and whereabouts Thorpes had dwelt back to far colonial days. Down a side street there, and partly behind a modest frame dwelling, stood a weather-beaten shed, over whose door appeared the sign: "J. Thorp, Plumbing and Tinsmith." But during as many months of the year as Overlook House was open the shed was locked up, for during those months Mr. Thorp plied his trade in Judge Crane's basement, where he was furnace man and odd jobs man, handy at fixing a leak in the plumbing, handy at almost anything—an industrious, frugal, capable citizen, minding his own business, and duly grateful for the chance which had brought him this excellent job, with tip top steady wages and comparatively little to do when the weather was warm.

This admirable furnace man had a superior cousin named Samuel Thorp, who was comparatively opulent. By his father's will he held certain real estate in Windham, which yielded him an income of near $500 a year. He also had a Yankee handiness and sometimes good naturedly consented to exercise it for hire; but mostly he preferred to contemplate life and discuse the rather important figure which he himself cut therein.

It was a rather scandalous figure, too, by his tell, for he confessed to all the genteeler vices. Sometimes he did play "penny ante" poker and sometimes he did get drunk; but in his conversation those comparatively mild exploits took on a dark, indefinite extension. In confidential talk with his village friends he wrought woeful destruction among the fair sex, of which, however, there was no particular evidence elsewhere. Of all the opinions that had ever been passed upon him the one that would have galled him most was that expressed by Mrs. James Thorp—namely: that he was really as harmless a loafer and liar as ever lived.

For Cousin Sam Overlook House had a great fascination. The industrious furnace man never had anything to say about that establishment, partly because he never saw anything there to talk about. But Cousin Sam had all sorts of surprising information about it, even down to the exact amount of Judge Tillman Crane's monthly income. He spent a considerable part of the summer hanging around there—in the main literally below stairs, yet even down in the furnace room his mind was alive to the luxury above.



He got out his jack knife and soon, by careful work, had a tiny peephole. Still he saw nothing.

About noon of this Thursday, having come up from Windham by trolley, Cousin Sam was strolling up through the woods toward the house in a smart suit of light yellowish plaid, which he had purchased the day before. It lacked quite a bit of fitting him, for his figure was not custom made. He was tall and strong, but his shoulders sloped to an unusual degree, his neck and head being uncommonly long. He himself had some misgiving about the fit of the suit, but with a new blue four-in-hand tie, a new stiff straw hat set at a rakish slant on his long head, and a bamboo stick in his hand, he felt that some imperfections might be overlooked.

Overlook House was particularly attractive to him this summer. He had held several conversations with Katey, the pretty parlor maid, and on that slim foundation had built up some romantic ideas which would have sent Katey into fits of laughter. Following the roadway up the first sharp swell of wooded ground, Sam turned and casually surveyed the scene below. A swiftly moving object in it attracted his attention and he immediately identified that object as young Pennell's car, for although one of his pale eyes had a cast, giving a fairly wall-eyed effect, little within his range of vision escaped his notice. A minute later he observed that Katey, the parlor maid, was in the car with young Pennell; and as it was then about noon, he reflected that that was going some.

Up the shore toward Stony Cove there was a public bathing beach, with a row of little shops in which candy, popcorn, soda water, picture postcards, seashells, and like gear might be bought; also with a square, one story dancing pavilion, where any one might exercise his feet for a dime if he could find a partner. On the Saturday evening before this Samuel Thorp had been there—in pursuit of his career as a reckless blade. He had hoped to see Katey, whom he had encountered there before. Half past nine or so Katey came in alone, but before Sam Thorp could get up his courage—which was largely of a conversational nature—to approach her, young Pennell and two others came in. Young Pennell looked about, saw Katey, made directly for her and took her out on the floor. After that dance they sat against the wall talking, both—but especially young Pennell—in high spirits. They danced again. Then they went to the counter in the corner, sat on a high stool, and ate ice cream, after which they danced once more.

For all of which there might have been an innocent explanation, but in Samuel Thorp's opinion innocent explanations were for blockheads. Somewhat later he looked around for Katey and couldn't find her. Young Pennell, too, had disappeared. All of which has set up a lively and worldly wise speculation in Citizen Thorp's mind.

So now Counsin Sam sidled off into the woods and stood carelessly behind a tree, where he could see the roadway. But the car did not come up the roadway; instead Katey came up the bridle path alone. Through the trees Cousin Sam caught various views of her rapidly moving figure as she made for the house. This, at high noon, was certainly going some! By his own route of the roadway he followed Katey to the house, and went down into the furnace room. But he said nothing at all to pokey Cousin Jim as to what was in his mind, for he could be terribly astute when he chose.

He hung about the house all day, and about half past 5—once more—sauntered out of the furnace room, meaning to go home. Near the north end of the basement the ground had been scooped away and a wide cement pavement laid, so that a wagon could drive down to the outside door of either the storeroom or the laundry, and that little artificial valley was screened by shrubbery on either side. The kitchen was just beyond and the little valley made a sort of commons in which ladies and gentlemen on Judge Crane's pay roll sometimes incidentally met and held sociable conversation. Sam Thorp—on terms of loquacious familiarity with most of the ladies and gentlemen—had drifted out there several times during the day, but had not seen Katey. He was going home that way now.

The most convenient route lay through the storeroom and laundry. Passing through the storeroom, he laid his hand on the laundry door, but found it locked, which was odd. It certainly hadn't been locked two hours earlier, nor ever before within his recollection. A door that was locked now but hadn't been locked before would have aroused his curiosity in any case. Stealthily he tried the knob again and stooped to squint at the lock. Listening at the crack, he could hear nothing; but if the door was locked, it seemed clear to him that somebody was in there—or had been in there—who didn't wish to be observed. That was enough for Samuel Thorp.

Plodding James Thorp, the furnace man, never encouraged any exercise of curiosity concerning Overlook House. The frugal, lowly man had a wholesome fear of getting into trouble and losing his excellent job. So Cousin Sam moved warily now lest he provoke his dull relative's resentment. He at once remembered that there was a stepladder in the storeroom; there was hardly anything he had ever seen there that he didn't remember. Tiptoeing over on his big feet, he got the stepladder, which he cautiously placed against the door and so climbed up to the transom. Lest a passing guest might be offended by sight of the servile operations which went on therein, the outside windows of the storeroom and laundry were of lightly frosted glass. By ill luck this transom over the door between the two rooms was of the same material and Cousin Sam could see nothing. But in such an affair as this he was not easily balked. Investigation showed him that the frosting was on his side of the glass. He got out his jack knife and soon, by careful work, had a tiny peephole to which he could apply his eye.

Still he saw nothing. The laundry was quite empty. It was not as light in there as one could wish, the sun's rays being obstructed by the frosting on the outer windows and also to some extent by the shrubbery that screened the little artificial valley. But Sam peered with all his might. Several heaps of soiled linen lay against the farther wall. On one of them what looked very much like a man's coat had been thrown down. Then Sam saw something shining below the coat and made out a pair of bronze colored slippers with imitation diamond buckles. He instantly recognized those slippers—having a good wall eye and one other for such phenomena. Only one servant in that household went about flaunting her trim feet and pretty legs in open defiance of proper servile footwear. Those slippers were undoubtedly Katey's.

By that time nothing less than a stone wall or a minatory eye could have stopped Samuel Thorp. As neither obstacle was present he tiptoed his stepladder back to its place and addressed himself to the lock in earnest. It was a common door lock and the key had been withdrawn from it. Being naturally handy and intensely inquisitive, he had dealt successfully with a situation of that kind before. Before this also he had ranged the storeroom with the mere aimless inquisitiveness of a crow, so he knew exactly where to find a piece of wire and a pair of pinchers.

It was getting on toward 6 o'clock now and he had to hurry lest plodding Cousin Jim step in there, note what he was doing, and interpose foolish objections. But in a minute he had the wire bent suitably and was industriously picking the lock with it. The door opened and he stepped into the laundry. When he came out a minute later he had a mind full and running over. But he carefully locked the door after him, replaced the pinchers, and hid the wire.

Both the laundry and the storeroom had outer doors opening to that artificial cement paved little valley, so that a wagon driving down there could receive or deliver bulky objects. And they had inner doors opening to the basement. But there was still another means of gaining access to them. Sometimes bulky objects were moved from them to the floors above, so the automatic elevator ran down into the storeroom. Without risk of being seen by any one outside the house or by any one in the open part of the basement, or by any one who should happen to be looking out the furnace room door, a person could come down from upstairs in the elevator and go back again in the same way. That circumstance was in Samuel Thorp's mind.

A large satisfaction was in his mind, too. No doubt some other people were pretty smart; but not smarter than Samuel Thorp! He possessed, and cherished, a nickel plated cigaret case on which the nude figure of a female was stamped in colors. Taking that object from his pocket he got a cigaret and lighted it, casually setting his straw hat at a little sharper angle on his long head. He had meant to go back to Windham by dinner time, but now changed his mind and sauntered over into the cavernous furnace room. ANOTHER VERSION OF THE HARDING SMILE—This, folks, is Mrs. E. E. Remsberg of Santa Ana, Cal., sister of the president elect. When the photographer called to get the picture he did not go to the front door of the Remsberg home, but followed a narrow cement walk bordered with rose bushes, geraniums, and chrysanthemums which led to the rear of the house, and found Mrs. Remsberg doing things to a fat turkey that suggested Thanksgiving dinner. Before the subject knew it she was photographed—gingham apron and all.

Mrs. Remsberg is a great hand for homemade pies and doughnuts, and finds herself rather busy. "I don't know," she said, "whether I will go back with the girls for Warren's inauguration or not. They keep writing to Mr. Remsberg and myself to come, but the weather back there in the month of March is pretty bad, and I haven't quite made up my mind. There's plenty to do right here at home."

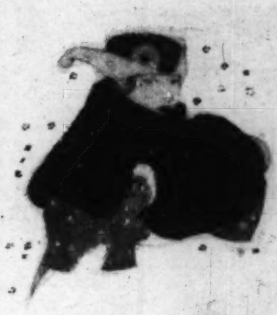
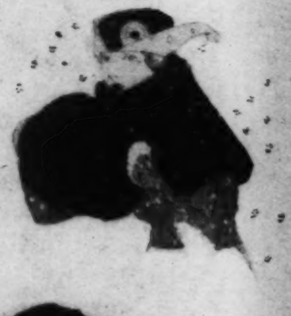
How to banish the needless flaws that ruin your appearance



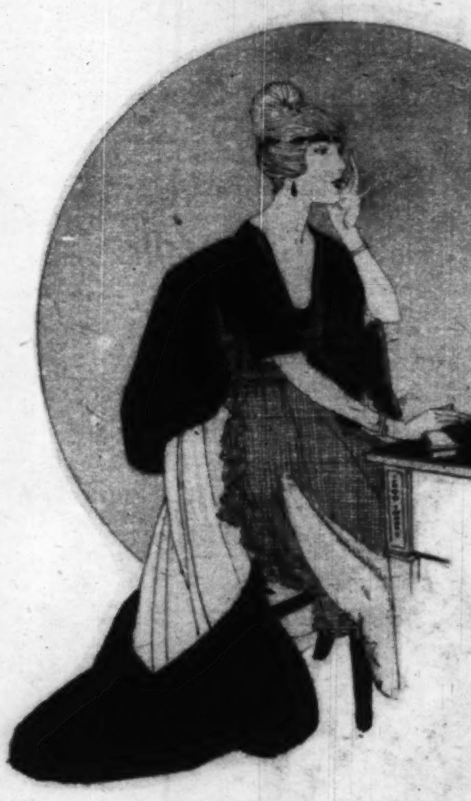


It is so easy to let your skin acquire bad traits

A little roughness, a little shine, a little cloudiness of skin, and one's looks are gone! It is so easy, too, to let your skin acquire these bad little traits unless you know just how to avoid them

WIND and cold, you know, are ruinous to the texture of your skin. They whip the moisture out of it—leave it dry and tense. Then follow roughening and chapping.

Skin specialists say that one can protect the skin by applying a softening and soothing cream always before venturing out. Never omit this. One little slip, and your skin has had its first dangerous lesson on how to grow rough!



To make the powder stay on all evening apply a powder base of Pond's Vanishing Cream

Of course you need for this protection a cream which will not make your face look oily before going out. Pond's Vanishing Cream is made without any oil precisely for this daytime and evening use. It cannot reappear in a shine. Lightly touch your face with Pond's Vanishing Cream. This leaves your face smooth and protects it from the weather. Do this every time you go out and your skin will not chap or get the least bit roughened all winter long. Regardless of the weather it will become more and more exquisite in texture.

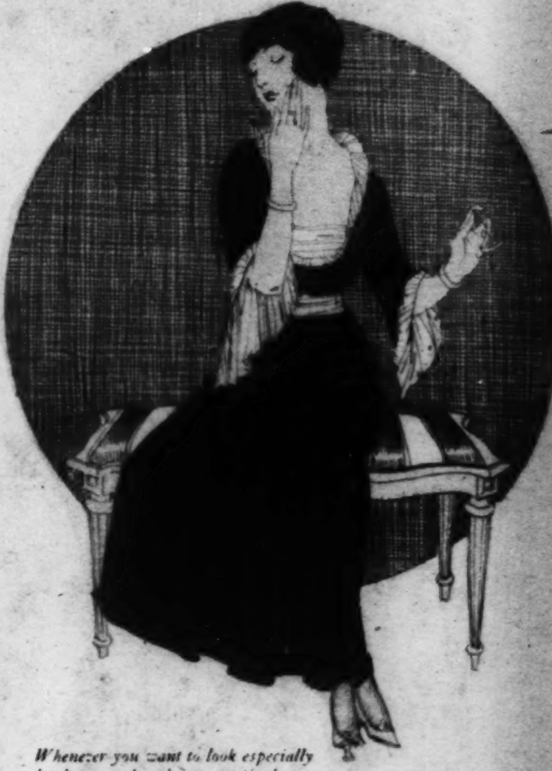
Does the powder keep coming off your face, leaving you all shiny and embarrassed?

Perhaps you are expecting too much of it. Really, it is entirely your own fault if you put the powder directly on the skin and expect it to stay on of its own accord. The finest of powders needs a base to hold it, and to keep it smooth.

For this use, as for protection from the weather, you need a cream without oil. Before you powder, take a bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream and rub it lightly into the skin. At once it disappears, leaving you skin softened. Now powder as usual and don't think of it again. The powder will stay on two or three times as long as ever before.

When your face is tense from a long, hard day, yet you want to "look beautiful," remember that the cool, fragrant touch of Pond's Vanishing Cream smoothed over the face and neck will instantly bring it new freshness. Do this before you go to a dance. All the tell-tale weariness around eyes and mouth will vanish. Your skin will gain a new transparency. You need never let it get into the way of staying tired.

Beware of allowing your skin to cloud up and lose its clearness. When this happens, it is because minute particles of dust have worked their way too deep into the pores to be removed by ordinary bathing. Really, it means that you have been allowing your skin to go only half cleansed! To remove this deeply lodged dust you need an entirely different cream, a cream with an oil base. Pond's Cold Cream has just the amount of oil to work deep into the pores and cleanse them.

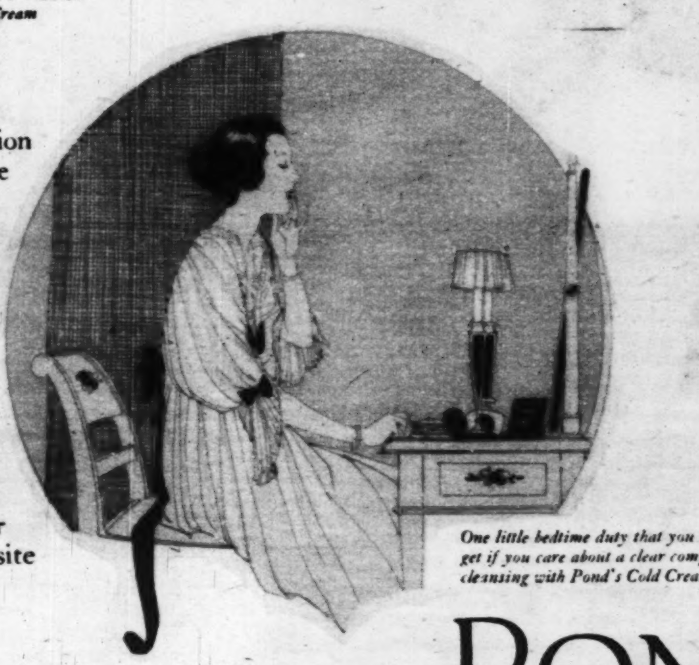


Whenever you want to look especially lovely, even though you are tired, you can give your complexion new freshness at a moment's notice. Pond's Vanishing Cream is famous for the eleventh-hour freshening it brings your skin

Before you go to bed and whenever you have been especially exposed to dust, rub Pond's Cold Cream into the pores of the skin. Then wipe it off with a soft cloth. You will say, "How could so much dust have gotten into my pores!" Do this regularly and you will be rewarded by a clear, fresh skin.

Every normal skin needs both these creams. Neither will foster the growth of hair.

Get a jar or tube of each today at any drug or department store. You will realize for the first time how lovely your skin can be.



One little bedtime duty that you must not forget if you care about a clear complexion is the cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream

Serve Dromedary Dates

A SALAD more tempting or more easily made can not be imagined. Just Dromedary Dates with oranges and lettuce. A pleasing combination that can be served at all seasons.

Moist, luscious, golden Dromedary Dates—nature's confection from the Garden of Eden—are especially selected from the season's choicest crop. Healthful and easy to digest, they are especially good for children. Rich in natural sugar, they are most valuable for giving fuel and energy to the body (a fact worth your consideration).

Serve Dromedary Dates at meals and between meals—just as they come from the package; or in interesting combinations with other foods—stuffed, in desserts, breads, muffins, and cereals. Our Free Booklet tells many alluring ways to serve Dromedary Dates. Send for it today.

Pen portrait of the American woman

INDEPENDENCE — originality — daring. Withal, the sureness born of lifelong familiarity with the wonders of a rich and cosmopolitan country—with the beauties of lands old and new.

In the matter of her dress, a considered perfection, an unerring sense of that which will infallibly contribute to the peculiar sparkling individuality that is hers. Standards of comfort, standards of loveliness which make her the most exacting shopper in the world.

A not unexpected commentary on this elective fastidiousness of the American woman is the fact that she has chosen and made her very own, that silk underwear to which the whole world now accords first rank—

An all-steel vacuum bottle for automobiling, for the home, for the office

NO mishap, no jolt or jar, no matter how severe, no boiling hot liquid poured into it—nothing can rob you of your coffee "piping hot out of the bottle" if you put it in the new Stanley Vacuum Bottle. It will not break.

The new Stanley Vacuum Bottle is made entirely of steel. It can never break.

Even if it drops on a hard floor, or rolls downstairs, or falls from an automobile—it will not break.

Every Stanley Bottle is lined with blue Amalite—a sheer mineral coating which is fused into the steel itself. This keeps the bottle always sanitary and will not rust or tarnish.

Naturally the Stanley is more expensive than the ordinary vacuum bottle, but there are no expenses for repairs or replacements. With the Stanley the first cost is the last cost.

Made in one and two-quart sizes. Sold by all the better department, drug, sporting, hardware, jewelry and automobile accessory stores. An attractive gift for man or woman. Prices (East of the Rocky Mountains), black standard finish: quart size, $10.00—2-quart size, $15.00.

The graceful lines and slender silhouettes so much in vogue this season find exquisite expression in Woven Fur Fabrics.

Shelton Looms Woven Furs have many distinct advantages over animal fur. They are so light in weight that they may be worn on days when the weather is mild, yet they insure protection against the coldest wintry gales. They cost less than animal furs, wear far better and give a greater return for the money invested.

Women of discrimination prefer costumes fashioned of these superior fabrics because of their beauty, their durable and serviceable qualities. Their light weight and comfortable warmth make them particularly desirable for coats, wraps for afternoon and evening, tailleurs, hats, skating outfits, etc.

You will find The Shelton Looms Woven Fur Fabrics by the yard or made up in fashionable garments on sale at the leading stores of Chicago. It will pay you to inquire about these fabrics. The name is on the back of every yard, and the label is in the garment—it is your protection against inferior imitations.

Remove the Film

And see how your teeth glisten

Try this new teeth-cleaning method for ten days. See the results in your mirror. Read what they mean.

Millions have already done that. Leading dentists everywhere advise it. You can see the results in every circle—in teeth you envy, maybe.

See the whiter, safer teeth it brings you, then decide if you always want them.

The great enemy

Film is the teeth's great enemy. When fresh it is viscous—you can feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

Millions of teeth are made dingy by film. Most tooth troubles are nowadays traced to it. Teeth cannot be kept whiter or safer unless you daily fight it.

Film is what discolors, not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance, which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Some of these film-caused troubles attack nearly all.

Hides and clings

Film clings to teeth and hides between them. The ordinary tooth paste does not end it, so teeth brushed daily very often discolor and decay.

Dental science, after careful research, has found some ways to combat that film. Able authorities have proved them efficient. Leading dentists everywhere have come to adopt and advise them.

Those methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we ask you to learn by a ten-day test what those methods do.

Multiple effects

One ingredient of Pepsodent is pepsin. Another multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva to digest starch deposits that cling.

Another result is to multiply the alkalinity of the saliva to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of decay.

Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps the teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily cling. Thus in several ways, new and efficient, Pepsodent combats the teeth's great enemies. It brings essential results which Nature intended, and which old methods failed to accomplish.

Visible results

The results are visible and quick. To millions they have shown the way to whiter, safer teeth. They will soon convince you that film can be combated. Make this test. Few things are more important.

Children, too

Pepsodent is even more important to children than to grown-ups. Young teeth are more subject to decay. When you see what this new method does for you, see that the young folks employ it.

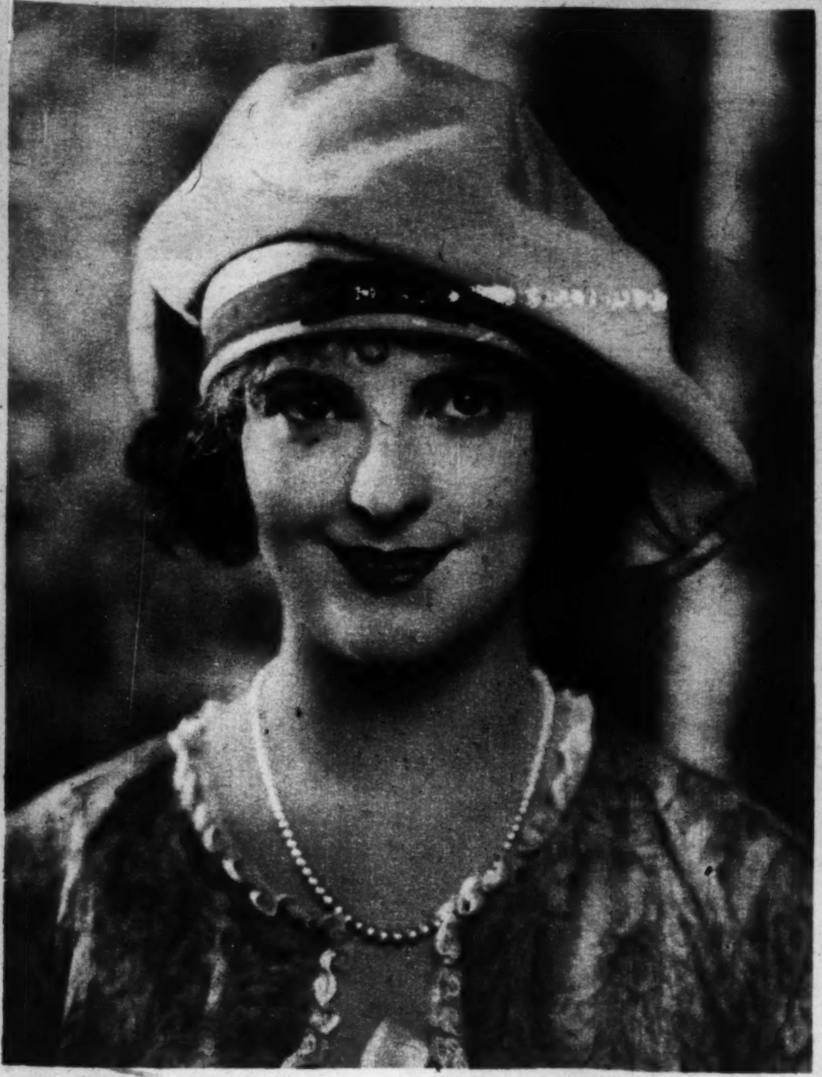
BEBE DANIELS, the little monkey, used to do nothing but straight comedies. Directors kept their eyes on her, however, and now and then you see her in straight parts which she does remarkably well.

This black haired, black eyed youngster was born in Dallas, Tex., in 1901, and educated in a Los Angeles convent. She played child parts for a long time, was with a stock company, was two years in the Rolin-Pathe comedies—and now is a real, honest to goodness star.

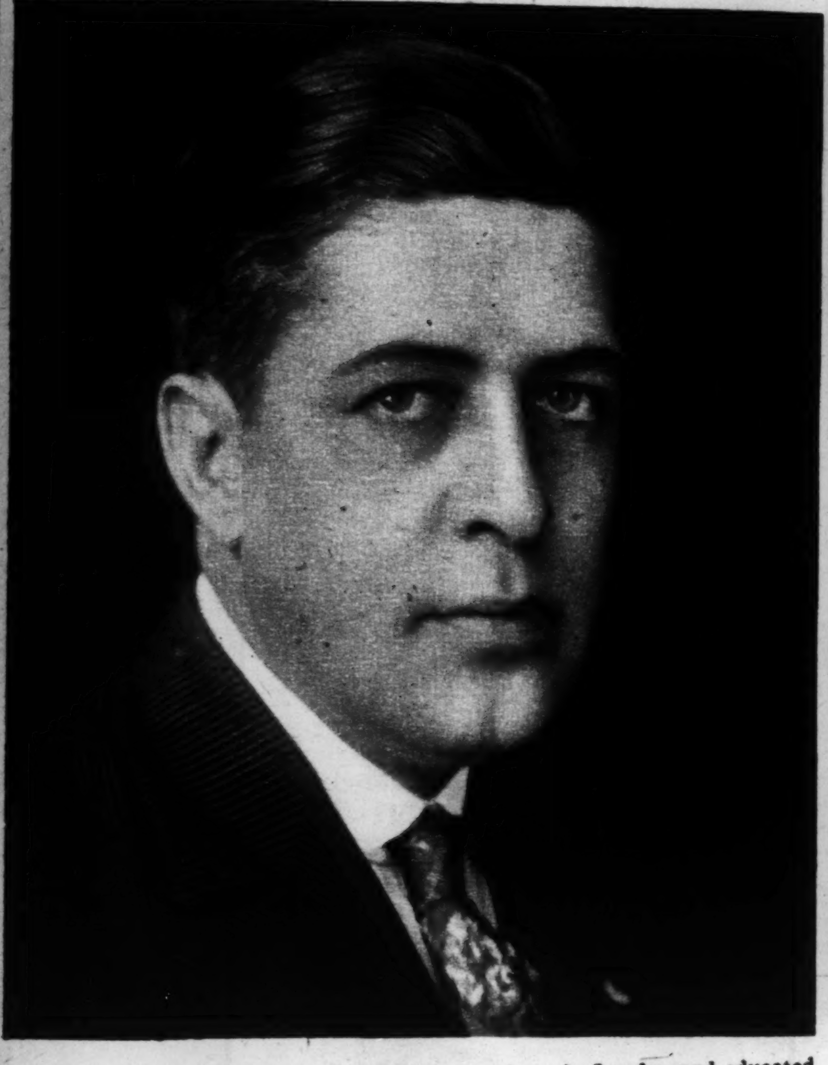
The truth about her is she's 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 123 pounds—and would weigh more if she'd keep still long enough. The people who know her say that if ever there was a jumping jack it is Miss Daniels, of Los Angeles.

Mae Tinee.



PRISCILLA DEAN lives in your album pages. No use to go over her life's history again. If I remember correctly, however, the last picture you received of her showed her with her hair done a la a hair mattress and looking, oh, quite wild and woolly. Now here's a sweet, girlish little Miss Priscilla Dean for your contemplation. Note the string of pearls, the Tam o' Shanter, and the tiny edgings of Valenciennes lace.

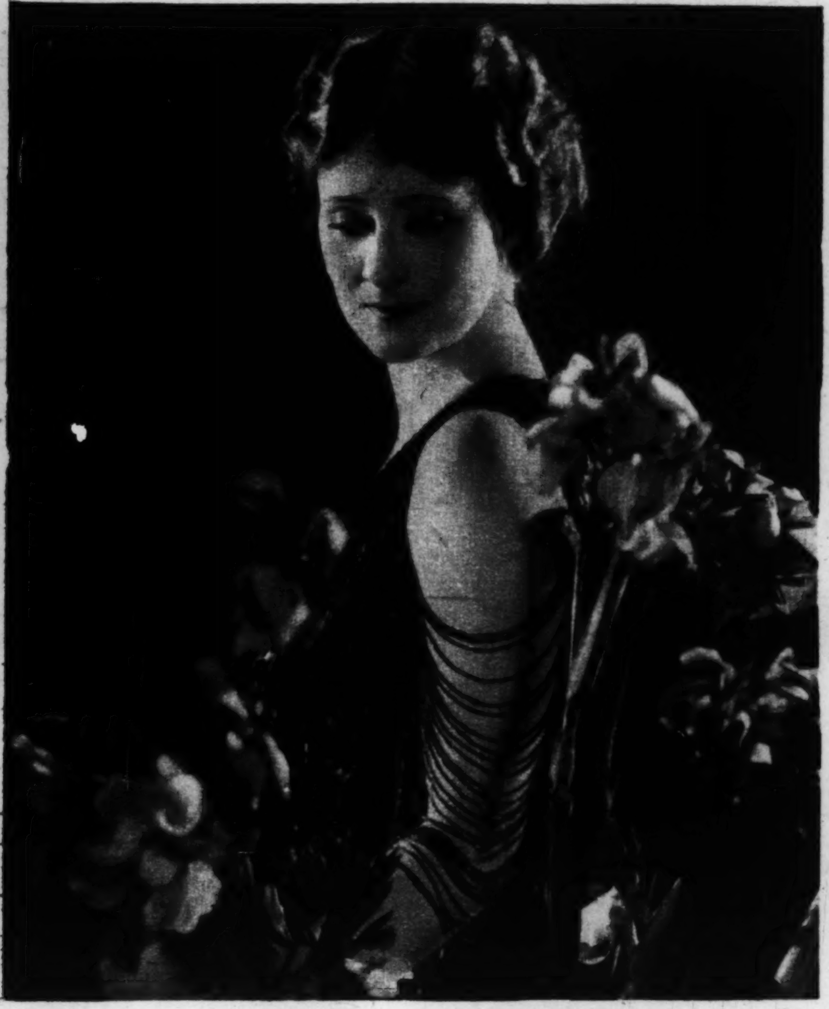
Mae Tinee.



JACK RICHARDSON is an Englishman—born in London and educated at Lindisfarm college. He is not an idol of the screen, but there is no better liked player in the business than this same Mr. Richardson, who can be either hero or villain, or just plain "support" with puffeck ease and composure.

Mr. Richardson has been on the stage in stock and in the London music halls. He is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, and has dark hair and eyes.

Mae Tinee.



IRENE RICH is the charming girl you have seen so often in the Will Rogers pictures. She has the lure of lovely, clean looking hair and skin, steady eyes, and a rare smile that is vurr' sweet.

Miss Rich was born in Buffalo, N. Y., and educated at a girls' school. She has played with Frank Keenan, for Paralta, and is now, according to Goldwyn, permanently located in their studios. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 138 pounds, and has dark brown hair and eyes.

BAYER

ASPIRIN

"BAYER" introduced Aspirin to physicians in 1900.

To get the true, world-famous Aspirin, used for over twenty years, ask for genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," plainly stamped with the "Bayer Cross."

Accept only an unbroken "Bayer Package," which contains proper directions.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer Packages."

Bayer-Tablets of Aspirin

Aspirin is the trademark of Bayer Manufacture of monoaceticacidester of salicylicacid.

Beautify your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggly, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Pimples, blackheads, boils—

are signs of a lowered vitality

A familiar food now used to correct them

"THE causes of acne (pimples and blackheads) are always found in a lowered vitality," writes a skin specialist connected with several of New York's important hospitals. And "the repeated occurrence of boils should always be looked upon as an indication of lowered vitality," he also states.

Thousands of men and women suffer from these painful and embarrassing ailments. About three times as many women as men are troubled with pimples and blackheads. Boils, on the other hand, afflict more men than women.

To correct these widespread ailments, yeast, the familiar little cake of food, has long been prescribed by physicians and hospitals.

Today, the special value of Fleischmann's yeast as a "conditioner" and health builder is becoming widely recognized. It is now known to be the richest source of "vitamine"—a newly discovered food element, essential to health but lacking in many every-day foods. It thus helps correct the basic causes of acne and boils.

In investigations carried on under the direction of Dr. Philip B. Hawk in leading institutions in Philadelphia and New York, its value for treating pimples and boils was demonstrated. There was rapid improvement in cases of acne, and cases of boils were either greatly improved or cured more rapidly than ever before noted — and without recurrence.

To learn more about this new importance of yeast in diet, fill out the coupon below and send for the new booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." Constipation, a trouble that is often contributory to pimples and boils, is also being corrected by the addition of yeast to the diet. You will find interesting reports on its value for this trouble also in this booklet.

How to take yeast

Take from one to three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day, before or between meals. You will quickly learn to like its taste. Different people prefer it in various ways—dissolved in fruit juices or water—spread on crackers or bread or just plain. Those who are troubled with gas should first dissolve it in boiling water. People ask: "Won't it, when taken, have the effect it has in raising bread?" No. Yeast is highly digestible and it is assimilated just like any other food. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast.

Watch Pyorrhea Go

With War's Wonder Antiseptic

Gum soreness and bleeding usually end in one week.
Destroys germ cause promptly. Free trial proves it.

Nothing like Kloria has ever been known before for sore, bleeding gums, pyorrhea, etc. Usually within one week all gum soreness and bleeding disappear, and soon the shrunken gums tighten around the teeth again. Anyone can easily apply it, and the results are really amazing. Doubt it, if you must, but try it.

This is the same wonderful new antiseptic agent which healed war wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered germ infection where all old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test, it is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Apply it without fear to any skin disease, such as eczema or barber's itch, and notice how quickly the trouble fades away. Mark how it soothes soreness, irritation and itching. Note how promptly it destroys the pus infection of boils, carbuncles and sores; how it heals cuts and burns more rapidly than was ever known before. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with Kloria and watch the scalp itching disappear in a few applications, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. Try it for mouth-wash and gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat—how clean the mouth feels. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

Don't Envy Beauty— Use Pompeian"

"How well you look tonight!" Such compliments are the daily joy of the woman who applies her cream, powder, and rouge correctly. Here is the Pompeian way to instant beauty:

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so the powder adheres evenly.

Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance.

Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty?

Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the Bloom. Presto! The face is beautified and youth-i-fied in an instant!

These preparations may be used separately or together (as above) as the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette." Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing) softens the skin. Pompeian BEAUTY Powder, a powder that stays on—flesh, white, Rachel (formerly called brunette). Pompeian BLOOM, a rouge that won't crumble—light, dark, medium. At all druggists, 60c each. Fashions Beauty Contests

by CORINNE LOWE

TOO often the frock of today is a flock! Again this truth is pointed in the costume at the right of the page—a dress of duvetyn plaided in French blue and gray accompanied by a cape which is just as plaid. The frock is trimmed with white lace and the wrap with gray squirrel. Next, a coat-dress of gray velours collared in Australian opossum receives attention because of the straps falling from the shoulders to produce the fashionable long waisted effect. Third, a brown satin frock is set off with plaited white organdy confined by brown grosgrain ribbon. Last, black duvetyn benefits from the attention of unspotted ermine.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The horse may not have won the ribbon, but the lady certainly did. For the famous old society event staged every November at Madison Square garden brought out one fact. It is that you may use ribbon on almost every kind of a costume and in every conceivable way. Indeed, we may complete the evil course of humor on which we started by saying that the horse may not have bolted but the ribbon certainly did.

This is a ribbon year. As we have so often remarked, a little blue serge frock may receive character from nothing save a girdle of cire or other kind of ribbon in contrasting tone. Similarly, the suit. You may have narrow ribbon panels falling over any kind of frock. You are likely to bind the top of your choker collar with a bit of ribbon in some blue or red or green that enlivens the drab hue of the frock. (For never forget that the smart daytime dress of this season is somber.) And then there is the ribbon hat!

Of these last one saw a-plenty at the horse show. Primarily, perhaps, these bonnets are for sports wear, but so closely are the sports clothes of today interwoven with the more formal modes that it is hard to fix the boundaries. At all events, one saw hats made entirely of satin or grosgrain ribbon accompanying smart cloth costumes.

These were less arresting than the newest things in this type of millinery—that is to say, the hat constructed mostly of ravelings. These raveled ribbons are now to be bought already prepared, and they are used not only for entire brims but for saucy pompons and other ornaments. The hat of this predigested ribbon is, by the way, more typically the sports variety than those in solid form.

At the daytime sessions of the horse show there were probably more frocks entered than suits. However, so much are the frocks of today built like the suits that the wearers ought to be compelled to wear a button indicating their costume. It would save the fashion writer so much heavy work. There were, for example, quite a few redingote costumes which, although they gave every indication of being suits, always turned out to be frocks.

These redingote frocks are stunning, by the way, on the tall, slim woman. They generally occur in navy serge, but one which I noted at the show was of the popular Chinese blue. The redingote was plaited, and a turban of otter fur was echoed in its high collar opening in the front and continuing to the waist line in a V.

Right here we may say, too, that the collar which is high in the back frequently opens just in time to show our double chin, and from there meanders down in a point to the girdle. This habit is not confined to fur. The stiff choker collar of cloth occurring on cloth frocks often permits the breeze to strike at the same point.

That the choker collar, ventilated or nonventilated, is with us, was brought out conclusively by the horse show. And one has to admit after having reviewed a regiment of them that they are far from becoming to the average woman. Quite the contrary. In fact, this theory that the low neck line is so awfully becoming is built on meringue and shifting sands. After a woman is thirty so throat ceases to become a virtue. And the fact that we have so long gone about exposing our grandmotherly throats is one more proof that we can all be hypnotized into thinking that the familiar is the beautiful.

Yes, the choker collar is not only smart. It is attractive. And it also presents such a wide range of opportunity for trimming. Many of these chokers, for example, are banded with furs. Others are embroidered heavily in contrasting tones—particularly effective when the choker opens at the front and when the embroidery is continued down in a V to the waist line. Still others are bound with cire ribbon—again the ribbon motif! Some of them button down the front. Others open in the way I have described.

You had only to look in upon the horse show for a few minutes to realize the popularity of the black and white costume. This fashion, set by Paris, is indeed thoroughly established in New York.

Witness the charming afternoon frock at the left of this page. The material here is black duvetyn, and it is trimmed with unspotted ermine. An interesting feature of this model is the way in which the back of the bodice escapes from the narrow girdle of black satin ribbon to form a loose, coated effect in the back. The collar here, while not running true to the high, straight model, indicates the fashionable V closing over a vestee of white satin bound at the top with the black ribbon of the girdle.

Ermine was the favored snow that drifted in upon these black costumes of duvetyn and velvet. However, several black frocks which I saw were set off by white skunk, a fur which has come in for a good deal of attention at the hands of the Paris dressmakers. Still others—one or two—were trimmed with white plush or with white plush or with the imitation ermine now so much in vogue.

Once more we are jaboting. Paris has said we might, and so the poor old blue serge frock, so long bereaved of its softening touch of white, so long harshly set against throats that had forgot all about being "like the snaw drift," may now benefit by its fleck of white. You may get your jabot up against the plain choker collar of this blue frock and look finished. And for the more elaborate black velvet there come long plaited jabots that resemble those we all wore in the good old days.

Other touches of white are also nominated. For example there is the ruche of white organdy which, with its cuffs of similar fabric, similarly treated to brown grosgrain ribbon, finishes the striking brown satin model second from the left.

This frock is interesting for several reasons. First, there is the flounced skirt. Nowadays panels of all kinds are raging so tempestuously in our land that the most of us forget the existence of the ruffled skirt. Yet this mode was noted on several fashionable women at the horse show and certainly in connection with the quaint, tight fitting basque pictured here it is intensely interesting. A wide sash of self material is allowed to fall below beneath the hem of the skirt to produce the desired unevenness of the season. The hat worn with this is a brown plush one trimmed with the coque.

Of the coat-dress one saw much at the horse show. Of gray, even more. The lady looking at the ring incorporated both modes in her costume of gray velours trimmed with Australian opossum. The arresting detail of this costume was afforded by two straps which, falling from frogs on the shoulders, looped under to complete the long waisted effect begun so earnestly by the front. A hat of gray velours banded in rust colored ribbons dripping down in the back brings us once more to our leading theme of ribbons.

Among the many dress exhibits at the show one was attracted constantly to the plaid costumes. So frequently did one see either all plaid or partially plaid costumes that one began to quarrel with the setting of the garden—the old English cottages in the background. The Trossachs would have seemed a better scenic effect when the ladies were so intent upon Rob Roying it.

Sometimes the plaid is used merely as trimming, and it must be said that these tartans with their blocks of red or green or blue do much toward dispelling the gloom of the prevalent neutral tinted frock. They are wonderfully effective for panels, and the dressmakers seem to have grasped this fact thoroughly.

At the right of this page, however, we find a plaid costume which has all the courage of its plaidness. For the simple, straight-line frock of French blue and gray duvetyn is accompanied by a cape that is just as plaid as the frock. The only trimming is, curiously enough, the band of white lace at the neck line of the frock and the huge collar of gray squirrel on the cape.

"LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE!"

by Antoinette Donnelly

MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

"The world was sad; the garden was a wild!
And man, the hermit, sighed—till woman smiled."
—Thomas Campbell.

THERE have been reams and reams of poetry written on smiles, but why bother with poetry when you can get right down to prose if you have a little mirror in your home?

If there's a single doubt in your mind as to the value of a smile, sit yourself down before your mirror and try a nice bright one on your face. If that isn't more becoming than your new $50 bonnet or your $200 peach blown opera frock, I will eat humble pie forever.

A good broad smile has a certain well known automobile lashed to the mast for getting you into places and finding a merry welcome.

Examine your list of friends and acquaintances. Which is the friend you want oftenest to see?

The one with the merry smile or the one with the corners of her mouth turned down by worry, disappointment or just plain discontent?

"No woman can be handsome by the force of features alone, any more than she can be witty only by the help of speech."

There has to be expression—and it must be pleasing. And what more pleasing than a smile?

Mother's New Face.

One of the bright sayings of children that amused me most was that of a little boy of 6, whose mother's habitual expression of unhappiness was for this particular morning transformed with a smile, upon which the youngster exclaimed: "O mom, you have on a new face this morning." And it may be further related—from the mother's own lips I have it—that did more for her expression than yards of preaching by smile missionaries.

Another mother told me her homeopathic remedy was effected by friend husband confiding to her on her return home from a gathering at which she was particularly happy: "Positively, dearest, you look ten years younger when you are smiling and happy."

"And I got to thinking it over and decided that if I could forget my worries and be happy when a-partying there wasn't any reason why I could not do the same thing around home. And to tell the honest truth, I found I had mighty little to worry over to get that ten-plus look. I guess if you want to cure a woman of anything all you have to do is to tell her she is making herself look older and she'll fight for the good old days of youth."

Wear a Smile.

Nothing is truer than that turned down corners of the mouth add years. They make lines—those ugly parenthesis lines from the corners of the mouth down. And it takes a deal of massaging to get rid of them—but all the massaging in the world will not rid the face of them unless there is a change of heart and expression.

Of course it is trite to say worry and discontent never got you anything but wrinkles. But isn't it true? Three-quarters of the wrinkle eradicator makers and the skin food specialists would go out of business if smiles were worn more frequently.

Aren't you struck often, coming downtown in a car, by the rows of faces that look as if they had forgotten forever there was much to be thankful for and happy about in the world? They remind one of houses that had once harbored gay and youthful young spirits, gutted by fire, leaving the walls standing intact.

Or on a busy street corner, perhaps, you have stood and seen face after face go by with tense, worried, pained, and discontented expressions—rarely ever a sunny one. If a cheery face does happen along, you feel warmed as by the sun after a dull cloudy morning.

I'm not going to preach on what this gloom and smilelessness does for the soul, because my job is looking after the face—not the soul, the latter being entrusted to much more capable beings.

It's wrinkles I want to iron out of what otherwise might be perfectly lovely faces.

It's economy on wrinkle eradicators and plasters sold to keep the corners of mouth up that I want to see practiced.

And economy in dress, too, might be added, for a merry face will not require a high priced hat nor a high priced gown.

It is to make friends for you—to make success for you in your home making, business, or professional career.

I heard a definition of a pessimist recently which might be not amiss right here, although perhaps of not the most delicate nature. A pessimist was described as comparable to a cockroach on its way somewhere, but wherever it arrived it would be unwelcome.

Do you think I am stretching the point when I say the smileless, discontented, down at the corners of the mouth person is unwelcome wherever she goes?

You can answer that best yourself if you have such a person on your list of acquaintances.

Look on the Bright Side.

Not long ago I got a letter from a man telling me about a girl whom he was thinking of marrying. He said: "She is a good, conscientious girl, and always looks on the dark side of things."

Now, wouldn't it be just as easy to be a good, conscientious girl and look on the bright side of things? I hate to think of the young man's fiancée a few years hence. For looking on the dark side of things has ruined more feminine beauty and added more years than any other vice to which the sex may be addicted.

The best way to handle wrinkles is to kill 'em before they begin. And you can kill 'em dead as dead can be—particularly those frown and worry wrinkles between the eyes and around the mouth corners—with a smile.

Glance suddenly into the mirror some time when you are thinking hard about how you are going to meet the landlord or the modiste or whatever your pet ogre may be. Surprise your face in the act! Your impulse will be to relax your features and look pleasant, unless you have your face so set it can't relax. Presto! A fine change, is it not?

While you're in that frame of mind come out and pick up the bill again, and I'll wager it won't look half as large or impossible to meet.

Acquire a Happy Expression.

This all sounds as if I were first kin to one Pollyanna, but I'm not! There are times when it is more wholesome to set your face to meet a crisis. And nothing would be more idiotic to preach than a perpetual Pollyannish grin. But it is the time when your face has nothing to set itself against—which is by long adds for most of us three-quarters of the time—that I beg a happy expression.

And not only for the charity it bestows upon the face but for what it does for the health of the body.

You cannot have good digestion without cheerfulness. Nor can you have a good healthy blood circulation with depressed mind and nerves. Nor can you have the buoyant step of youth without it.

So cheer up, old dear!
Get out your mirror and Smile for the ladies,
And smile for the men,
And smile for the pretty face
You'll be sure to have then!

MISS X.: THE PRESSING OUT OF blackheads should be done after the face has been cleansed. Either use a comedo extractor or press with fingers protected by a clean bit of linen. If the mass does not co[illegible] moderate pressure let it alone for a day or two. Wipe with peroxide or alcohol after the pressing. Will tell you more about this and other complexion ills if you send s. a. e.

Had to Step Lively.

The father of "my girl" owned one of the first autos in our town, and she was learning to run it. One day on the main street I cranked it for her. It bucked and nearly run over me. In order to get out of the way I jumped up on the hood. Then in her excitement she forgot how to stop the blooming thing, and I had to ride the whole length of the avenue in that ridiculous position. E. J. S.

Lasting First Impression.

We stenographers have our trials and tribulations. It being my first morning at a new place of business, I, of course, wished to make a good impression. I was called to take dictation by one of the officials of the firm, and as I proceeded to follow him to his private office, I felt something pulling after me. The sash of my dress had wooden balls on the end covered with the dress material, and these balls had become tangled in my wire waste basket. I tried my best to loosen them, but could not succeed. Finally, picking up the wire basket, I walked through the office with about twenty pairs of eyes looking my way, and you can imagine my employer's expression upon seeing me in his office with a wire waste basket in my arms, until I had explained the circumstances. R. H.

After One Year.

One morning I was busy doing housework—had on an old apron and my hair tucked up under my cap. The doorbell rang, and when I went to the door I found that it was a solicitor trying to sell coupons for photographs. He had several samples with him of photographs that had been taken at this particular studio. He showed them to me, and would make a remark about each one as he was showing it. After he had shown me quite a few, he said: "Now, here is the best of the lot, and she's some queen; I call her my girl down at the studio." I waited breathlessly to see the picture and you can imagine my surprise when I looked and saw that it was a picture of myself which had been taken the year previous. The solicitor was as much surprised as I was when he found it was my picture, and offered many profuse apologies. S. L.

Are You Worn Out At Night?

Then you should try wearing Cantilever Shoes. They distribute the weight so easily, support the arch so effectively, are so comfortable and so restful—that you will finish the day as fresh as you started it.

Much of the weariness that we attribute to overwork is in reality the result of ill fitting footwear. Shoes which cramp the arch muscles and distort the foot cause strain and nervous fatigue. But in contrast, Cantilevers, which lighten the work of the arch and allow the foot perfect freedom, increase your health and energy instead of taxing it.

Cantilevers have a flexible shank that adapts itself to each position of the foot, permitting the foot muscles to exercise and grow strong. The under-arch sole can be drawn up, by pulling the laces, to fit the instep at every point and provide restful support. The natural sole line encourages correct carriage.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

Questions on problems confronting the home sewer will be answered in this column or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

CROCHETED WASH CLOTHS.

CHRISTMAS is only a short time away now, and while you doubtless have most of your gifts ready, there are sometimes unexpected ones to do at this stage. Have you seen these dainty wash cloths? Many women are making them, both for their own use and for gifts as well. I don't believe anything for the home ever comes amiss as a gift and one can never have too many such things, so it is a pretty safe gift to make.

Whether you give one or several to one person is a matter of personal choice, of course, but they are quickly made, and the color used in the border can give a pleasing variety to them.

A ball of cotton warp will make several cloths. Buy pure white; it comes in white and tan, and is sold at the counters where the worsteds are kept. A rather coarse hook is needed. Make a chain of forty stitches, and turn back and use the single crochet stitch all the time, always putting the hook under the chain instead of taking up one of the threads of the stitch. Crochet back and forth until you have crocheted a square.

Then take a mercerized embroidery cotton, in pink, blue, or any desired color, and go around the white four times; then make four rows of white. Finish the cloth with a shell stitch, making four stitches to a shell and going around once besides, using the single stitch.

This makes a firm, pretty finish. If you want to make it quite unusual looking, as well as wonderfully pretty, use different shades of the color. If you are using pink, go twice around with the deepest shade, then work the other two rows with the lighter pink. In the shell border use the lighter shade for the shells, and the finishing single stitch edge with the dark shade.

Answers to Sewing Queries.

MISS V. H. Z.: There is no pattern for the collar and cuffs shown in the paper a short time ago, but I should think, with the aid of the picture and article, you would not have much difficulty in copying them.

MRS. S. E. S.: I have mailed you an answer about the patterns you ask about. It is generally possible to dye any color black, but whether or not you will be successful in dyeing satin. I don't know. There are, of course, dyes specially for silks, and if the quality is good, the dyeing may turn out well.

MRS. B. L. J.: I think you may be able to buy patterns for the baskets of fruit or flowers at any of the places where patterns are sold.

SALES FOR MONDAY—BOTH STORES

IS PRESENT DAY DRESS IMMODEST?

What do you think about the present day dress? Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, says it is indecent. Do you think so or not? Do you approve of the modern maid's rouged cheeks and abbreviated skirts, or no? Do you think her morals different than those of the maid of a decade or so ago as the result of her dress vagaries? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on this much discussed topic. Send along your opinion. Write on one side of page only. Address Miss Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

Just Little Vanities.

I am a mere man, and never expect to earn a cent by the pen, but I am interested in your question concerning women's wear and their sundry other decorations.

Between you and me—I think women certainly have the worst end of the bargain. If you take away their little vanities, what is their life that that they should desire to prolong their days? What is a small box of French powder and ditto rouge, if not to hide their innumerable frailties, defects, and deficiencies? And what avails all their artistic efforts to make themselves more pleasing and attractive than God has made them to the eyes of the opposite sex—very opposite, indeed!—if they must be smothered by a mass of draperies, which after all, we must admit is nothing less than the "purdah" prescribed by an exacting Mohammedan tyrant.

I plead no cause of Aphrodite, being a puritan myself, but I think that any man who cannot trust himself to look on beauty unveiled, without unholy imaginings or hypocritical horror, betrays a visit to Circe's Isle, and in these later days he is usually called a moron. On the other hand, the woman who can't endure the sight only betrays her untimely age.

I make profound apologies to the rare exception, as well as for rushing in "where angels fear, etc."

OLIVER CROMWELL.

In All Things Moderation.

As a college bred woman of 30 who has traveled around the world, I wish to protest against the tendency to extreme exposure of the body as evident in the fashions of the present day. I believe in beauty; but may not the beauty of body be subordinate to the beauty of mind and spirit—the latter being certainly a rare thing to find at any time.

I have an evening gown to make, and have searched diligently in the fashion magazines for a suitable pattern; but I cannot find a thing I should be willing to appear in. And although I think that I am not totally devoid of physical charm, I much prefer to charm with wit and understanding than with an insinuating display of pink flesh and undulating curves.

If fashion experts and women of mature judgment do not set an example of womanly beauty without exposing at least half of their bodies, how may we expect to prevent poor silly and ignorant girls, who follow the fashion, from becoming prey to the class of men they meet in the numerous places of public amusement, who cannot help regarding these girls from the standpoint of mere sensuality?

A short skirt, just to the shoe tops, a modest neck, and certainly some sort of sleeves in a dress are not too much to request for both comfort and propriety.

Mine is the Greek ideal—"In all things moderation."

MRS. O. C.

Strong for Modern Miss.

A great deal of my time has been spent in the society of members of the fair sex, and because of this and the fact that I have given much consideration to women's apparel, I think I am better qualified than the average man to write on the subject of women's dress.

To say that women who wear décolleté gowns and knee length skirts are immoral is too sweeping a statement. I feel confident that most of the young girls in low necks and short skirts wear them with the most innocent of intentions. The only evil about an abbreviated costume is that which forms in the unchaste mind of the male.

As for cosmetics, I'd pick a girl with a nose like a marshmallow in preference to one with a shiny beak any day. The judicious use of paint and powder certainly improves a girl's appearance. When Mother Nature gives Mary Smith rosy cheeks and Susie Brown pale ones, why shouldn't Susie, with her little rouge box, take up the job where Mother Nature left off? Exercise and fresh air bring color, I know, but not always in the right place.

The modern girl does not go around with a lily in her hand, but she is just as virtuous as the demure miss of some time back, with sweeping skirts, wasp waist, and choking collar. It's clothes that make girls beautiful, and those of today are much more artistic and hygienic than those of our grandmothers or great-grandmothers.

I have implicit confidence in women, and the vast majority of them can be depended upon not to carry fashions to the extreme. I'm 100 per cent strong for the modern miss.

J. E. D.

Likes 'Em Short.

Have mercy on the commercial artists, and leave them short a while longer. It's ever so much easier to draw arms, legs, and necks if fashion decrees they are to exist, instead of being bundled in gloves, long skirts, and ruffles.

True, the untrue ads lose interest for us with so much nature unadorned on the street, but the fashions are lovlier than ever before to me.

With a shortage in everything, of course sleeves, skirts, and waists, are affected.

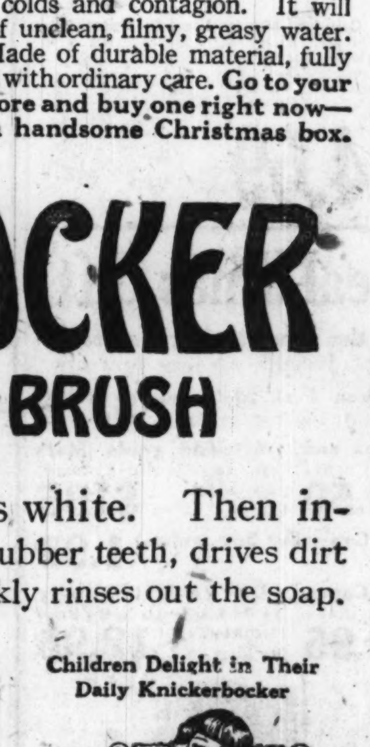
Three minutes and your bath is over. There's no splash. Hot, warm or cold shower. Tub always clean. Knickerbocker stimulates circulation—fortifies against colds and contagion. It will end forever your old-style bath in a tub of unclean, filmy, greasy water. Knickerbocker is the only sanitary way. Made of durable material, fully guaranteed one year. Lasts three to five years with ordinary care. Go to your favorite drug, hardware or department store and buy one right now—you'll find the Knickerbocker on sale in a handsome Christmas box.

KNICKERBOCKER
SHOWER BATH-BRUSH

Shampoo? Soap your head till it's white. Then invigorating water, through hundreds of hollow rubber teeth, drives dirt and dandruff—all of it—out of the hair; quickly rinses out the soap. Your hair is left fine and silky.

The Knickerbocker saves time and costly shampoos for men and women. Better than any tonic, it keeps hair and scalp healthy. It may prevent years of baldness.

Children Delight in Their Daily Knickerbocker



Saves Mother Work and Time

Millions of families enjoy it daily, children love it, mother is saved time and work, and Dad goes out every morning with spring in his step after his Knickerbocker shower, shampoo and massage.

Make this the sensible Christmas for you and yours. Give radiant health—the sensible gift—the Knickerbocker!

So go to your Drug, Hardware or—Department Store—now—and select the Knickerbockers you'll give for Christmas—while merchants have their Stocks complete

TRAINING THE MEMORY.

DOROTHY, who has been substituting for Mr. Black's secretary during the latter's absence from the city, is going back to her old position after this week, but she is going back a much more assured and self-confident young woman than she was three or four weeks ago.

Ann, Marion, and I were commenting on the favorable change in Dorothy when she joined us the other day. Instead of changing the subject Ann asked her, by way of a greeting, if she didn't think her chances for a better permanent position had been enhanced by the few weeks spent in Mr. Black's office.

"Indeed I do," Dorothy assured her. "In a house as big as ours it's a distinct advantage to be known to the chief executives of the firm and department heads. And, being in Mr. Black's office, I've had a chance to become known to all of them."

"Of course, that helps," said Ann. "But what I meant was, don't you feel that the experience you've just had helps to fit you [illegible] job in the house?"

"O, yes," Dorothy answered, with her new air of self-confidence. "I've learned a lot about being a good secretary since I've been in Mr. Black's office. And the thing that seems the most important of all to me is that I'm actually learning to train my memory from a poor one into a good dependable one."

"Well, that is important," Marion agreed. "But I didn't know you had any difficulty about remembering things, Dorothy."

"It's been one of my greatest failings," Dorothy admitted. "I've always realized it, but up to the time I went into Mr. Black's office I accepted it with resignation, and did nothing whatever to improve or correct it.

"I was in Mr. Black's office only a day or two when I realized there were certain items of information that came in each day that I would have to keep in mind, for when he asked me about them he seemed surprised that I couldn't answer offhand. I grew so ashamed those first few days of saying "I don't know," or "I forget," or "I'll have to look it up," that I decided I'd have to make an effort to remember certain things. Otherwise I was afraid I'd lose out entirely with Mr. Black.

"After making the resolution," continued Dorothy, "I got a little note book that I could carry in my pocket if necessary, and I jotted down in it the things that were necessary for me to remember. I carried it about with me, and at first I had to glance through it occasionally to refresh my memory, but I soon found that the mere writing down of an item helped me to remember it without referring to it again."

"That's a good system," Ann nodded approval. "I know several people who make notes of everything they have to do or want to remember."

"You don't have to do that yourself, do you, Ann?" asked Dorothy.

"Not for everything, although I do make a memorandum of anything especially important.

"When I was in high school," Ann went on, "one of our teachers, besides having us memorize poems and long passages of prose, used to read every day a paragraph from a book that wasn't familiar to any of us and then call on some one to repeat it as nearly as possible word for word. Or she would write some lines on the blackboard, erase them after a moment or two, and ask us to repeat them verbatim. Our whole class found this such an interesting experiment that we continued to try it out on one another whenever we could. It was a fine memory test, and, thanks to that, I've a pretty good memory."

"You'll find, Dorothy," continued Ann, "that if you'll look and listen with your mind as well as your eyes and ears you won't have any difficulty remembering things. Just a moment of concentration is all that is needed to impress a thing on your mind, so that you will find it there in your memory, waiting whenever you are ready for it. Then you won't have to write everything down."

"I'll try your suggestion of concentrating, Ann," said Dorothy, as she drew on her gloves preparatory to leaving the table. "But I think I'll keep on with my memoranda until I can trust my memory a little better. That's the safest way for me at present."

LOVE LETTERS

How does a love letter contest appeal to you? Don't you love to read them? Don't you love to receive them? Can you write a good one yourself? The Tribune is going to pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

WINTER IN NO MAN'S LAND.

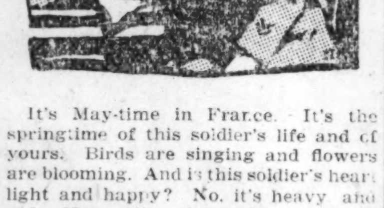
While in France thousands of soldiers suffered the loneliness that comes when mail is long delayed or lost. The above letter was written and published, unsigned, on the editorial page of an A. E. F. paper.. It was a real letter to a real girl and she recognized it without the signature. But it was general enough to express the sentiments of many soldiers, and their sweethearts and other girls read it, and got busy, and soon had "beaucoup" letters.

WHY can't I hear from you, little American girl? And why are you so far away from me over the ocean? Where are your precious letters that my soul longs to read? Did you write them over there in the new world, dear? Did you send them from the golden west? My heart says you did. Your letters are wandering over the eastern hemisphere looking for me. They are lost in Europe—lost to me. Lassie, won't you write?

Don't my letters reach you in the other half of the world? And those keepsakes of the world war—those "souvenirs de France"—are they lost before they get to you in the homeland? And the artistic mementoes of these wonderful peoples and places "overseas"—do they fail to find you in that native land of ours? Don't you ever hear from me at all? One month since I heard from you—two months—a season—half a year—eight months—God, but it's hard not to hear from you!

Now that the war is over, now that universal peace is dawning, it's beautiful here in France. People are so good to us, and there's so much to learn for future usefulness, but there's lonesomeness here without letters from you. This Yankee must have news of little you!

Where are you this year? What are you thinking? What are you planning? What are you doing? Are you well? Are you happy? How I'd like to know!



It's May-time in France. It's the springtime of this soldier's life and of yours. Birds are singing and flowers are blooming. And is this soldier's heart light and happy? No, it's heavy and sad. Heavy like the rocks of a lone, barren island in that great ocean that separates us. Sad like a nightingale lost from its singing mate by a storm during the hours of darkness. It will be winter time in no man's land till your letters come over the sea to me.

Pretty blue-eyed lassie, little American girl, with the sunny smile, won't you send a kind word across the ocean? A little love thought from the far, far west? Just a little letter, if you please?

Somebody "somewhere in France" believes in you through your messages have gone astray. Somebody trusts you. Somebody adores you. That somebody is I. Lassie, don't you care? Somebody loves you. Lassie, won't you write?

CORPORAL TWILIGHT TED,
"Somewhere in France."

SIMPLE FORTUNE TELLING GAMES

by

DORIS BLAKE

THE most popular form of fortune telling is by cards, as the repeated requests in my mail indicate. Usually the card fortune telling is a rather complicated thing, but today I am giving you a fairly simple chart to follow.

Shuffle the pack well, and draw twelve cards at random. From those you draw you read your own story with suggestions indicated by the meaning of the different cards given below.

DIAMONDS.

Ace: A ring or par[illegible]. King: A light married man. Queen: Fair woman, married or single, according to next card. Jack: Fair young bachelor. Ten: [illegible]. Falsehood when next to a male face card. Nine: Enjoyment. Eight: A parcel. Seven: Money. Six: A gift of money. Five: Children. Four: Marriage. Three: A surprise. Two: A visitor.

HEARTS.

Ace: Large dwelling or large building. King: Medium complexioned man. More red than sandy. Queen: Medium complexioned or rather red haired woman. Jack: Medium young man, red-sandy hair. Ten: Proposal, either of business or marriage. Nine: The "Wish Card." Eight: Pleasure. Seven: A New Friend. Six: Gay society. Five: People. Four: A strange bed. Three: A strange country or a drive. Two: A kiss from a traveler or a short journey for yourself.

CLUBS.

Ace: A letter. King: Brown haired man. Queen: Brown haired woman. Jack: Brown haired young fellow. Ten: Either deep water or a long journey. Nine: Crosses. Eight: A disappointment. Seven: Troubles. Six: Eating and drinking. Five: Falsehoods and deceit. Four: Tattle. Three: Tears. Two: Little space of water.

SPADES.

Ace: Travel if point is up; package if point is down. King: Very dark man. Queen: Very dark woman. Jack: Dark young man. Ten: Sickness at distance. Nine: Anger. Eight: Vexation. Seven: Unexpected annoyance. Six: A quarrel or anxiety. Five: A death or drunkenness. Four: A sickbed. Three: Sorrow. Two: A coffin or an accident.

To tell your fortune by cards, ask any question that can be answered yes or no, and shuffle the cards; the first ace you come to answers your question. The red aces are yes, the blacks, no.

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

Wringer for Dryer.

Quite the funniest thing I ever did as a child, and I was not such a young child at the time either, was to put my newly washed hair through the wringer. Believe me, I came to grief. My chum and I were giving each other a shampoo that night in my mother's kitchen. I conceived of the brilliant idea. My hair was the first washed, and at my proposal my chum and I both agreed that it was worth trying. I guided the strands into the rollers while she turned. You can imagine the results! The hair wound around both rollers and when we attempted to unroll them they rolled back the other way. There was I, unable to move my head; my wet hair winding first one way and then the other. Finally mother came and much to her horror and amazement at our idiocy beheld my plight. She was obliged to take scissors and cut away much of my hair. The process of elimination was sore and long. And one which I am not likely ever to forget.

M. P.

Her Pet Aversion.

Snakes were my greatest horror. Even wriggling so-called hair snakes, which swam around in the water, made me shudder. Other children had told me that they were formed from horses' hair, which had dropped into the water. Not knowing any better, I believed them.

One day as I was performing the usual ear washing task a few strands of my own hair happened to get wet, and dangled down in front of me. A slight breeze caused them to wriggle around as if they were about to come to life. I had never heard of Medusa up to that time, but she has had my sincere sympathy since.

From all the terrified screaming and dancing around that I did my sister thought I was no less than scalped. And it was only after she had pulled out a few hairs and put them to soak to show me that nothing would happen that I was convinced there was no danger of becoming afflicted with snaky locks.

H. T.

New Turkey Trot.

I never eat sorghum or use it in cooking, for the simple reason that I had an experience in my childhood that has forever turned me against it. We lived on a farm, and one molasses time my brother and I thought it would be great fun to catch a couple of turkeys and drive them through the sticky mess as it lay in the vats. It was fun, too, and I think a new turkey trot could have been given to the world if some dance master had seen those ungainly birds high stepping and weaving their way through that pond of goo. Old enough to know better, yes, but the temptation was too strong. I had my fun, but it now keeps me from enjoying a most delicious sweet.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

IN THE LIBRARY.

EVERY Saturday night with the week's work behind me I would go to the town library and spend a few hours poring over some seldom disturbed, musty volumes. One night, while I was turning the pages of the collected works of a favorite old author I came upon a little slip of paper on which was written: "Do you, too, think this the most beautiful story every written? "V."

I read the story and penned the following under V.'s words: "Many thanks for interesting me to read such a wonderful tale." "K."

I thought no more about it. However, the next Saturday night at my usual haunt, something inspired me to again glance through the same author's book. Judge my surprise to again find a note from the unknown V. It ran: "It made me glad to find that some one besides myself appreciates these old books. Could you suggest any others? V."

I immediately wrote out a list of my favorite books. V. responded in kind, and soon a pleasant little correspondence started up. I could soon tell that V. was a girl, and such a charming personality did she weave into her notes that one night in my letter I requested a meeting. Her response was that it was better we remained unknown. I did not know her, she might be an old woman or some other inappropriate character for a young boy like me.

This led me to believe that V. had spied on me and found out who her correspondent was. By this time my curiosity it it was not something stronger, had become so great that I determined to have a look at the mysterious V.

This was difficult as she could either place her messages in the daytime when I was busy at work, or, as she knew me, she could keep away from the reference room when I was there. However, as the poet says, "love will find a way," and my way to hide behind the end of the bookrack, where I was invisible to anyone looking in the room.

At the beginning of the evening I placed my note in the book. I then waited two long, uncomfortable hours until closing time. Before going I removed my note. The next night I found a letter from V. inquiring why I had not answered her last message. I took hers out and put in mine. Another long wait with no results. The third night there was no note from her. She must have been puzzled to find her note gone and no answer from me. About 8 o'clock I heard footsteps approaching that part of the room. Nearer and nearer they came, right up to the shelf where I was hiding. I heard some leaves flap, and then stepped out.

There she was, laughing and blushing up at me. One of the sweetest girls in the—oh, what's the use? After that we exchanged thoughts by a much closer route, but the romance of our introduction has never faded.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Ill Three Years.

"I know a young man who has been sick for three years from pneumonia which developed into "empyema"—draining of the lung. It may be years before he is cured—if he ever is.

"While not able to work, he would like to start a little mail order business that could be operated from home. His sister would help him out. In this way he could earn some money to pay doctor's bills. Some one experienced in the mail order business on a small scale could be a good samaritan by teaching how to start up.

"Or, if this is not practical, could some kind person give him some home work to do? T. C. H."

I shall be happy to pass on any information about this to the writer.

Asks a Phonograph.

"I am an old man 73 years of age with an invalid wife nearly the same age, and I have to stay home to take care of her. Will you kindly ask your readers if they have a discarded phonograph to give us, so as to make it a little more pleasant for my wife, she loves music so much? She has not been able to leave the house for the last three years. I have a pair of new eardrums to give to any one who needs them. T. A. G."

Can't you see the picture this old invalid and her husband make? She is "just sitting at home," and he doing everything to help make life easier and cheerier for her. It will afford me great pleasure to send their address.

Needs a Go-Cart.

"Probably you can squeeze me into your corner. I have a child 1½ years old and would like to know if you have some one who has a gocart or a buggy, as it so hard to carry her all over, and I cannot afford one. Am willing to pay express charges. Mrs. B."

Offers Sewing Machine.

"I would like to make the offer of a hand sewing machine through your column. It would prove useful to some one, I know. Mrs. S."

Many thanks for your kind offer.

Making Cornstarch Beads.

"We are two girls of 14 years of age and want to make cornstarch beads. Would you please send us directions? "M. M."

If any one among my readers has the direction for cornstarch beads, may I ask that you send for the inquirer's name?

Shorthand Books to Give.

"I have three books on typewriting and shorthand which I will send to any one interested. F. C. W."

F. C. W.'s address will be given upon request.

Cannot Buy Clothes.

"I am a discharged soldier and in great need of a suit and overcoat—size 36. We have a child 1½ years of age and a new baby. I have had many expenses and cannot possibly afford to buy clothing. J. H."

I am sure your request will meet with the response it deserves.

Will Loan Books.

"I have in my possession a number of good story books of different kinds that I will be glad to loan to some lonely shut-in who is not able to get books from a library. I will, on receipt of address, gladly send them the list of books for them to choose from. "H. A. H."

This attractive donation will find ready acceptance, I know.

Nu-tro

The New Milk Product

For general use
not just for special dishes

Use Nu-tro just the same as milk or cream. Use it freely and generously in cooking, in baking, in coffee or on cereals. Its cost is moderate. Nu-tro is wholesome and delicious, economical and convenient.

Nu-tro is a blend of pure, fresh, cow's milk, with the animal fats extracted, evaporated to double strength and enriched with refined coconut fat, resulting in a product of far greater food value than anything of a similar nature.

This recipe for old-fashioned doughnuts made the Nu-tro way:

1 cup sugar.
1 cup Nu-tro.
1 egg.
1 tablespoon butter.
2 teaspoons baking powder.
A pinch of nutmeg.

Mix butter and sugar, add egg, well beaten, and cup of Nu-tro. Stir in dry ingredients (after sifting), using enough flour to make a soft dough. Roll and cut on floured board. Fry in deep fat until a delicate brown.

An easily made test of Nu-tro—Use it in coffee

Notice how Nu-tro adds to the delightful flavor and brings out the delicious aroma of good coffee.

There are many tempting ways of using Nu-tro. Try the recipe above for old-fashioned doughnuts made the Nu-tro way.

Larabee's Best Flour Is Famous for Its Flavor

The secret of flavor in breads and cakes begins with the selection of your flour.

There is a distinctly likable flavor to bread made from Larabee's Best Flour, due to the Larabee process and the superior quality of the Kansas Red Turkey Hard Winter Wheat from which it is milled.

Larabee's Best Flour will make "the most bread from the least flour". Test it for yourself and prove these facts.

are a few models that have ntage of a little more preten- terial than that used by the their club. They are quite in their style values, how- nd are offered to any and all ds to emulate in charades as a ward making America a fashion know who made the first model, you? As somebody said the day, "Lanvin still goes in for ." She is almost the only person in the world who does at present, and yet she has great vogue.

Lanvin dress with black faille bodice and skirt of black silk lace.

White velvet dress; draped skirt, bell sleeves, and high collar edged with skunk.

Black duvetyn and monkey fur.

An actress is wearing this costume in the vaudeville, and creating comment for her good costuming. It consists of a black faille bodice with a "modestie" or, in good middle western English, corset cover, of black tulle and with a little fringe of the tulle springing out of said modestie for a sleeve. The real Lanvin touch comes in the skirt, which you will observe is in the manner of those sent you last year. Lanvin adores them. This one is of black silk lace, and a thing called a cocarde, which looks like a target on the side of the bodice, from which stream ribbons shading from pale pink to rose. A black panne hat accompanies the costume, garnished by a downward sweep of aigrette. The lady wears the ever present black kid gloves.

Although you wouldn't think so from all you have seen on the subject, the second model, too, is Lanvin. I think the dress ought to look well on American women. It has a foundation of pale rose brocade, over which hang loose panels of gold lace, down the middle of each of which run strips of blue ribbon, which end their course in a blue tassel. The two strips going over the hips flow downward into trains. The bodice is of pale rose brocade.

The model wears with it an ermine coat with a skunk collar. The hat represents a popular dinner hat of the day. It is extremely large and flat, is of panne velvet, and has a large bow across the back.

The artist and I saw a rather unusual dress at tea the other afternoon. It was of white velvet—which is cropping up here and there as a material—Russian in feeling—so the artist tells me—with the fashionable long waisted line and a long skirt beautifully draped and edged with skunk. There were bell sleeves and a high collar edged with the same fur. The woman wore a Reboux hat of blondine, which is the name for light brown feathers, and a black muff with an ermine rim.

The fourth offering tells its own story; it is of black duvetyn and monkey fur—scene 11 a. m. in the Bois. The artist and I decided it took a pretty homely woman to wear monkey fur well.

Bobbie and his brother Joe were in the habit of teasing each other after being put to bed, resulting ofttimes in a hair pulling contest. On the night in question they lay locked in fond embrace telling fairy stories.

I said: "Boys, why can't you always be good this way?"

Instantly Bobbie replied: "You must remember that Joe isn't always good."

Llewellyn came up from the basement, which was smoky on account of a new fire having been started in the heater. Running for a glass he said: "O, mother, I want a drink. My mouth is so foggy." G. H. J.

Mother was peeling and quartering apples, preparing them for cooking.

Rosalie, coming in, said: "U-m-m! I smell apples."

"But, Gamma, I smelled whole apples!" F. H.

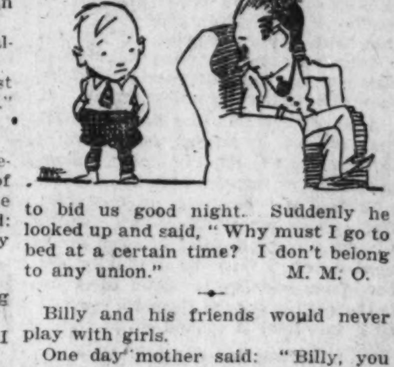
My brother was staying up somewhat later than his usual bedtime one evening. I had reminded him several times that it was 9 o'clock and time to bid us good night. Suddenly he looked up and said, "Why must I go to bed at a certain time? I don't belong to any union." M. M. O.



Billy and his friends would never play with girls.

One day mother said: "Billy, you are always so dirty; sometimes I wish you were a girl." The child answered: "Gee whiz, girls are cleaner and their hair is better, but gee I'm glad I'm not one. Cause if I was the kids wouldn't play with me." C. C.

Robert loved to chase the little ducks. His mother had forbidden him to do so because several had died from so much running.

One day she was forced to call to him: "Robert, I thought I told you not to chase the duck."

Willie had been told that he must always wait patiently till he was served at meals and not cry across the table or grab for his food. One day while dining with his mother at a home where there were no children the little fellow was accidentally overlooked. He was patient for a time, but at last he could restrain himself no longer, and, leaning across to his mother, he said in a loud voice, "Mother, did all the little boys around this house starve to death?" THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

CHRISTMAS FARE.

We can find warrant in history and tradition, expressed in prose or verse, for almost any sort of a Christmas dinner we wish to get up. The boar was simply a wild pig. Its great head and coarsely large portions of the animal were served on massive tables accommodating great families with coarse appetites. A small roast of pork, prepared with modern refinements, is a true enough representative of that ancient meat, just as a table five feet at its widest and longest represents the old board easily accommodating a score.

Sir Walter Scott, in his poem of "Old Christmastide," describes the old viands in a way that may make us quite content that we do not have to be merry with such objects before us. He says:

Then the grim boar's head frowned on high,
  Crested with bays and rosemary.
There the huge sirloin reeked; hard by
  Plum porridge stood, and Christmas pie.

From that same poem we can get authorization for the Christmas goose in the lines:

Nor failed old Scotland to produce
At such high tide her Christmas goose.

So strong is the traditional Christmas feeling for the feast that Englishmen in remote parts of the earth have "made merry 'neath the white and scarlet berry," no matter what they had to eat, provided they could decorate their food and their living quarters in a holiday way.

Decorate Simple Foods.

Simple foods, prettily decorated, may yield just as much of happiness in the eating, and much more afterwards, as those much more elaborate. With a few almonds, a little orange peel home candied, with some little cinnamon candies, and perhaps a piece of angelica with which to simulate green leaves, we may decorate the simplest of batter puddings in such a way as to make it a delight to the eye. Of course, to make this pudding is about one hundred times less work than to prepare a regulation Christmas pudding.

The new Christmas spirit must get its substantiation from the new health spirit everywhere abroad, and the little batter pudding harmonizes with that. Besides there is no brandy to burn over a pudding of the old sort which we may really consider passe for that and other better reasons. And again, look to those old lines which do not say plum pudding but plum porridge, the cooked batter.

Plum Batter Puddings.

Perhaps no single recipe published in this department has had wider acceptance than that for little batter puddings—one batter with many variations by using different fruits. The formula is: One-half cup of sugar, one tablespoon of melted butter, one egg, one-half cup of milk, one cup of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder.

Put a tablespoon of this batter into a buttered cup, best in the broad, low cooking cups, add a tablespoon of fruit raisins, or shredded dates or apple, but raisins are best for Christmas; cover with a tablespoon of the batter, sprinkle with shredded almonds, or decorate in a little pattern with one red cinnamon drop and two or four leaves of angelica. Bake for one-half hour.

Serve with a hard sauce if you like. Each cup may be brought to the table on a service plate, surrounded with holly or with a spray of holly at one side. These little puddings are good warmed up.

Roast Goose.

Singe the surface and rub off the burned hairs with a cloth. Rub hard! Wash the goose and scrape the skin with a small but not too sharp knife. If you choose to skin the goose so as to get the most service from its abundant fat, cut off the wings and neck close to the body. These, with the heart and gizzard and sometimes the first joint, are seasoned with salt and pepper, allowed to stand over night, and then prepared like any stew or in some special fashion like the sour stews.

To remove the skin with its layer of attached fat cut along the breastbone down to the lean meat, then carefully draw it off. In washing the goose use waters until the inside comes clean, but work quickly, then wipe dry, and the goose is ready to season and truss. If the skin of the goose has been removed—always for economy's sake and only by those who know how to make profitable use of it—the skin of the neck or a pork or bacon rind or a real blanket of "larding bacon," which is a thin and large square of entirely fat salt pork, may be fastened with skewers over the breast before it is put to cook.

A stuffing of mashed potato is acceptable for goose, or one of meats ground up, seasoned well, and pounded to a cream, but a bread dressing or stuffing is less acceptable with goose than with any other meat. If the idea is only to season the goose well in some way put into the body several onions, some stems of celery and an apple.

A bit of vegetable may be used under the roasting or baking goose, which will season the basting liquid. Some hot butter or merely some hot water—a little—may be used at the start. Baste every ten or fifteen minutes until done. A good, solid, or even fire is needed, but it must be gradually lessened from so-called hot after the goose is thoroughly heated through, especially if this fowl is cooked in its skin.

Trying Out Goose Fat.

Cut up the skin and its layer of attached fat into little squares, sprinkle with salt, and leave over night. Rinse with fresh cold water in the morning and put on to cook gently in three or four cups of cold water. Cook for about two hours, and finally cook all the water away. If the cracklings are likely to get too brown in cooking out the water from them, skim them out, drain, and dry them in the oven. They are acceptable for sandwiches, etc. With cautious cooking they will not need to be skimmed out, and they will be of fine quality.

The fat of the intestines should be soaked in salted water over night and cooked separately. A quick way to get the goose fat is to fry it without water, but the cracklings are not then highly acceptable. There are many uses for goose fat in cookery—cakes, etc.

Roast Pork Shoulder.

Buy a six pound shoulder of fresh pork. Trim and clean. Put into cold water over the fire and bring slowly to a boil. Skim when the water gets to about 180 degrees, and parboil until the meat is thoroughly heated through. This saves time in the roasting and conserves the fat of the pork, too.

Prepare a dressing, for the knuckle, of one large onion, chopped fine and gently cooked or smothered in two tablespoons of fat. Add to this one-half cup of toasted bread crumbs, two tablespoons of ground prunes, one medium apple chopped fine, and bind with one egg. A little piece of stem ginger cut in bits makes of this an excellent seasoning medium for the pork. The amount of dressing this makes is sufficient for seasoning the six pounds of pork

Cut a slit in the knuckle for it. Some of it may be pasted onto the roast. Pour some hot fat over the shoulder, when it is ready for the oven, in order that the surface may be well crisped when the roast is done. After the meat is partly roasted add a half cup of boiling water to the basting fat, and baste every fifteen minutes until it is done, in order that it may be perfectly seasoned. Perhaps thirty minutes to a pound should be allowed for this.

The roast may be garnished with all the vegetables prepared to serve with it—sweet potatoes, onions, etc. Instead of apple sauce, fried apples may be served with the pork, so putting the dinner all on one platter. It is the least expensive roast available today, and may be made highly acceptable. There should be a good pan gravy made by pouring off most of the fat, thickening the rest, and finishing per custom.

Meat Pie Crust.

For the crust of a medium sized pie baked in a deep earthern pudding or pie dish, take two cups of pastry flour, one-half cup of shortening, and ice water to bind. Work the fat into the flour with cool quick fingers, unless you have learned the knack of chopping it in with two knives. When the whole is like fine sand gather it in a mound, make a little well in the middle, pour in the small amount of water used gradually, stirring from within out until every bit of the mixture has been taken up, when it should be stiff enough to knead. If the water is added with care no part will ever be too wet. Trouble begins when any part gets too wet because it means extra working.

Use two-thirds of this dough for the bottom and sides of the pie and one-third for the top to cover. Roll out bottom part in as circular a form as possible, and fit it into the pie dish. Put in the filling, and put on the rolled out top after wetting the edges of the lining part with cold water. Press the two together, and bind them by some fancy work made with some special utensil, or with the back of a plain case knife. Little regular marks made with this, which hit down into both parts, bind the top well.

The upper crust should contain holes for the escape of steam. These may be in a little wreath made by forming a line like a circle half way from the center with tiny cuts out from this like leaves, tiny because they will grow larger in the cooking. Make some small cuts in the center.

Pie crust should be kneaded quickly so as to bind the whole, but not till as smooth as a bread dough. The crust may be put on ice fifteen minutes, once or twice over, before it is rolled out. Nothing smooths it like this.

Meat Pie Fillings.

Any nice meat stew, the liquid nicely thickened, may be used for a meat pie filling, but it is useless to put an unsavory filling into a crust, although I have tasted such on the spot where meat pies became the most famous Tastes differ, of course.

If chicken is used, prepare as for chicken fricassee. An imitation chicken pie may be made as follows: Stew one pound and a half of fresh pork with three small onions, a sliced carrot, a green pepper cut fine, salt to taste, and when the whole is within twenty minutes of being done put in four medium sized potatoes cut in good sized blocks.

There should be at least a pint of liquid when this is done, and, there may be twice that. For a pint of liquid allow three tablespoons of thickening rubbed in a little butter. Cook and stir till well thickened, add the meat shredded and the other ingredients. Pile the meat in the center of the pie in filling, and pour the well thickened liquid around it. If it is well thickened but not too stiff it will not boil out, but the holes in the crust are also to prevent that. Some people save out a part of the liquid and put it in after the pie has been baked—only so long as is needed to b [illegible] the crust well.

Daddy—She's the wonderfullest mother

She always has time to play with us and read to us, and tell us stories 'neverything

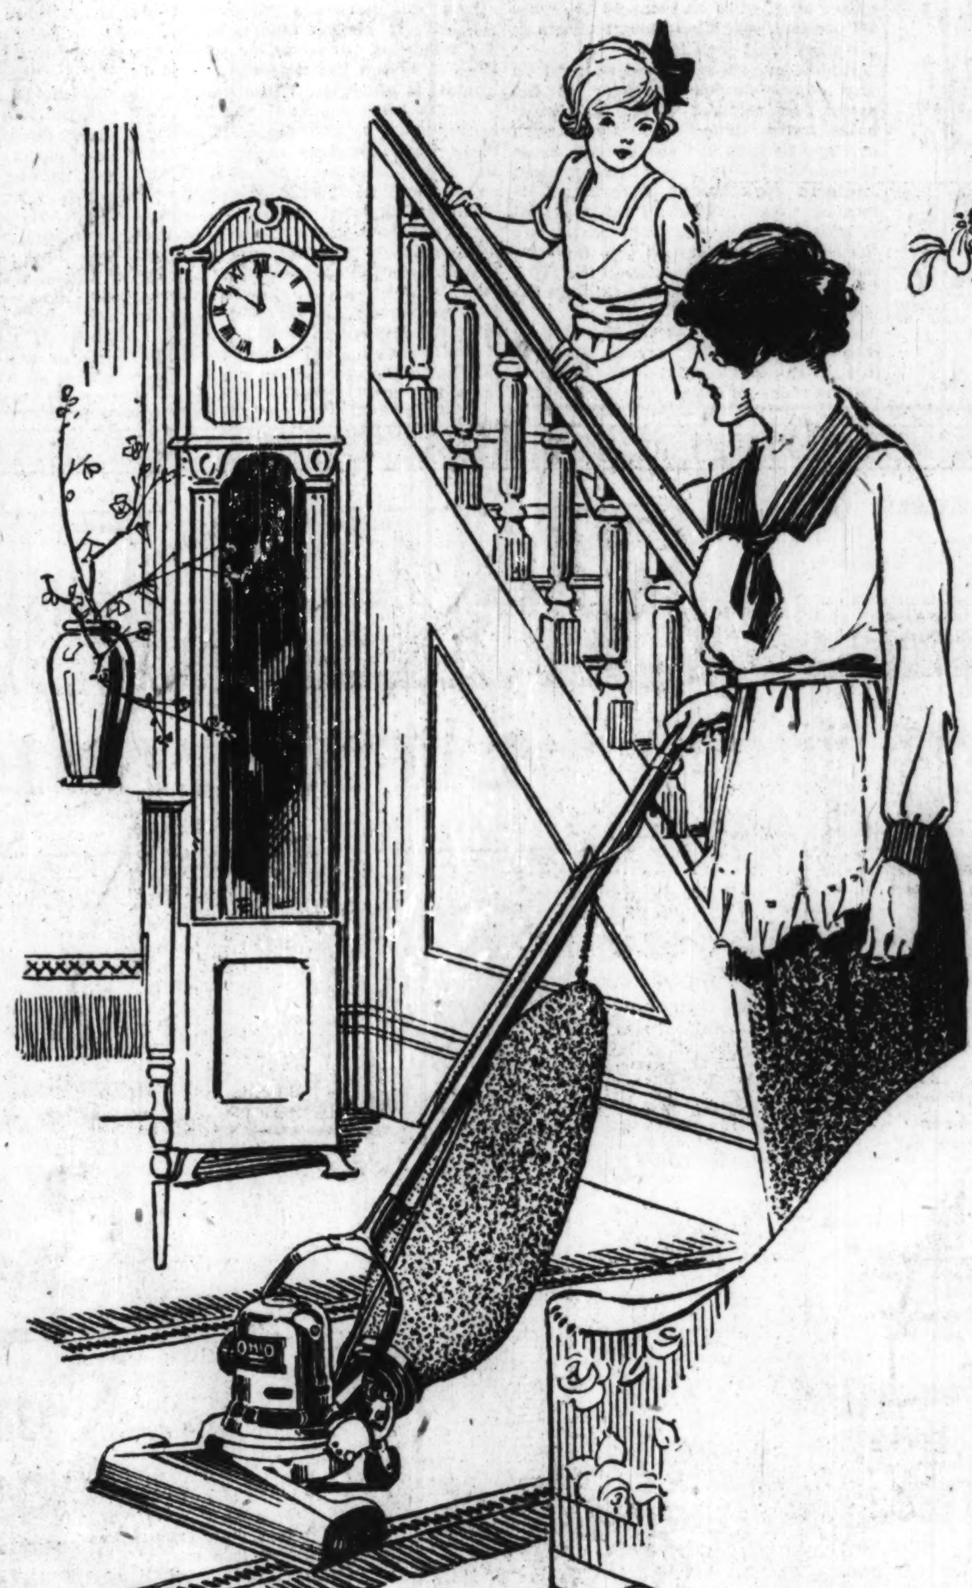
DO YOUR children think your wife is the "wonderfullest" mother? Not if she never has time to read to them. Not if she is always too tired to play with them. Children appreciate a mother who is a pal to them, just as you appreciate her being a pal to you.

If when you come home at night, you find the children fretting and your wife half ill with work, and altogether too tired to enjoy the evening with you—something is wrong. She is paying too great a price for the satisfaction of keeping her home clean. Did you ever think of that?

Giving your wife an Ohio Electric Cleaner for Christmas is really giving her, your children and yourself, hours and hours of happiness. And happiness is the finest gift in the world. A little thoughtfulness on your part will save her time and her health. This will make it possible for her to be a real mother—the "wonderfullest" mother—to your children. And children look back when they grow up and remember what kind of a dad you were in giving them a mother free to play with them.

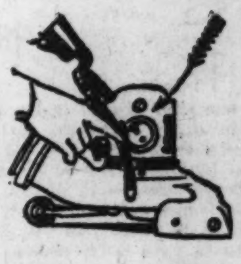
An Ohio Electric Cleaner makes it possible for your wife to enjoy going to parties with you—to dances, to the theatre and to a dozen other places.

You give her time to do other things besides housework when her children do not need her attention. She can read, or go to lectures and concerts, she can rest and talk with her friends. It broadens and brightens her. She becomes gayer; her conversation becomes more interesting. You and she and your children grow happier daily until it just seems as if your heart overflowed. And all from a little thoughtfulness and a Christmas gift. Give her an Ohio this Christmas.



The Ohio has an automatic switch

An Ohio Electric Cleaner is enough to delight any woman's heart. It helps her accomplish easily her ideal of household cleanliness, without taking all her time and tiring her out. That is its first purpose—to really clean.

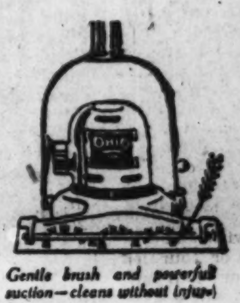


The Ohio has an automatic switch—no danger of burning the hand

The Ohio has an automatic switch. When you push the cleaner, the motor starts. When you stop, you put the handle in an upright position, and the motor stops. And there is no chance of burning your hand through the short circuiting of a frayed electric cord. And as for convenience, there is nothing to think about when you start. You just start. And when you stop, an automatic valve closes so that no dirt can fall back from the bag onto the floor.

—and a friction brush

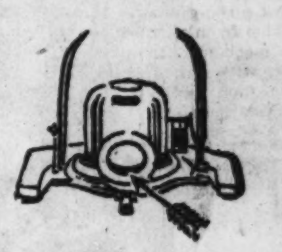
It is just as easy to use the Ohio on a thick rug as on a hardwood floor. It weighs only 11½ pounds and takes only a tiny fraction of 11½ pounds of force to push it about.



Gentle brush and powerful suction—cleans without injuring your rugs

The brush that is used is not an electrically driven brush. Its action is very gentle. Its purpose is merely to loosen threads, etc., from the nap of the carpet so that the powerful suction can carry them into the dust bag. The powerful suction is the real cleaner. It is the one combination—gentle brush and powerful suction—that really cleans without injuring your rugs.

Then of course, there are all necessary attachments for cleaning other things besides the floor—draperies, upholstered furniture, mattresses, tops of doors and mouldings, etc.



The automatic dust valve prevents dirt from falling back from the bag onto the floor.

A demonstration at any dealers or in your own home will show you exactly what the Ohio Tuec can do. It is the greatest and at the same time the most economical Christmas gift you can give your wife, because it means giving happiness.

9083—Woman's and miss' night dress—Sizes 16 years and 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material and 2¼ yards of edging and 3 yards of ribbon.

How to Use the Patterns

One sees a great and attractive variety of aprons in the shops, varying in size from the one designed to entirely cover one's dress to the small tea apron. It is a temptation to buy these things ready made, but it is an extravagance for many women to do it. If you are not expert in making clothes, aprons are a good thing to begin on. They don't take long to do, you can buy good materials, and you will find the saving, if several are made, will be considerable.

No. 8619 shows an attractive one piece apron, easy to make, and to get in and out of. Probably many women will make several, picking up right lengths in percale and gingham on the remnant counters of the stores.

Instead of being seamed under the arms, the edges are bound entirely around the apron. Bias binding in some color in contrast to the ground of the apron material will make an attractive finish. Or the edge can be turned in all around and basted down, and a rather coarse quality of rick rack braid basted on so that the points on one side extend beyond the edge. Then the apron is stitched twice around the entire edge, once as close to the edge as possible, and the second stitching about one-half inch inside.

Bindings such as should be used on any edges shaped as those of the apron just referred to should always be cut on a "true" bias. The length or warp threads and the woof or cross threads are crossed at an exact right angle to one another to form a perfect or "true" bias. If the material is wide and only short bias strips are needed, one corner of the material may be turned to give a strip the right length, thus saving cutting into the entire width.

After the cloth has been folded so that the warp exactly crosses the woof threads the fold is creased and the first cutting done through the fold. The cut edge is then a "true" bias edge. A pasteboard or other measure, clearly marked as the width desired for the strip, is laid so that the square end of it is exactly parallel to the cut edge, and then the width is marked at intervals. Each strip should be measured to get accuracy, for laying a cut strip on the cloth to cut others by almost invariably makes others cut from it a little wider.

Any line off the straight of the cloth is more or less of a bias, and sometimes for facings, where there is no strain, one may use pieces that are not strictly perfect biases, but never for trimming purposes, or where the edge to which the bias strip is to be applied is much curved or shaped.

Cloths with diagonal threads, like serge, cheviot, and crêpe, should always have the bias strips cut from the right hand selvage of the cloth, as you look at it from the right side. Then the diagonal threads will run at right angles to the cut edge. If they are cut from the opposite edge the diagonals will run parallel to the cut edge, and no matter how accurately the measuring and cutting may be done the strips will look bad.

No. 9800 is a good design for a simple house dress and is cut in large sizes for stout figures. The skirt is cut in three pieces, and measures for size 46 two yards around the bottom. Striped material will make up becomingly, and the collar can be in a solid color.

The waist is cut allowing for a plait on each front at the shoulder. This plait is stitched down a little way from the shoulder seam, and is set into the waist band, folded. But the waist should be loose enough so that when on the plait is not pulled wide open over the bust. This is ugly looking and always shows that the waist is too small over the bust.

No. 9803 is a pattern of a night dress that can be made up most attractively. Probably every woman who wears flannelette gowns during the winter months has her supply on hand, but if any such gowns are needed this is a good pattern to use.

It is also a good pattern for thin gowns. The yoke can be cut from allover embroidery or lace or from plain material and embroidered. It does not need to be elaborately trimmed to be dainty and pretty. But all lingerie materials should be fine and good and the work beautifully done. If trimming is used buy good lace or embroidery, and where hand sewing should be done don't try to save time by substituting machine work.

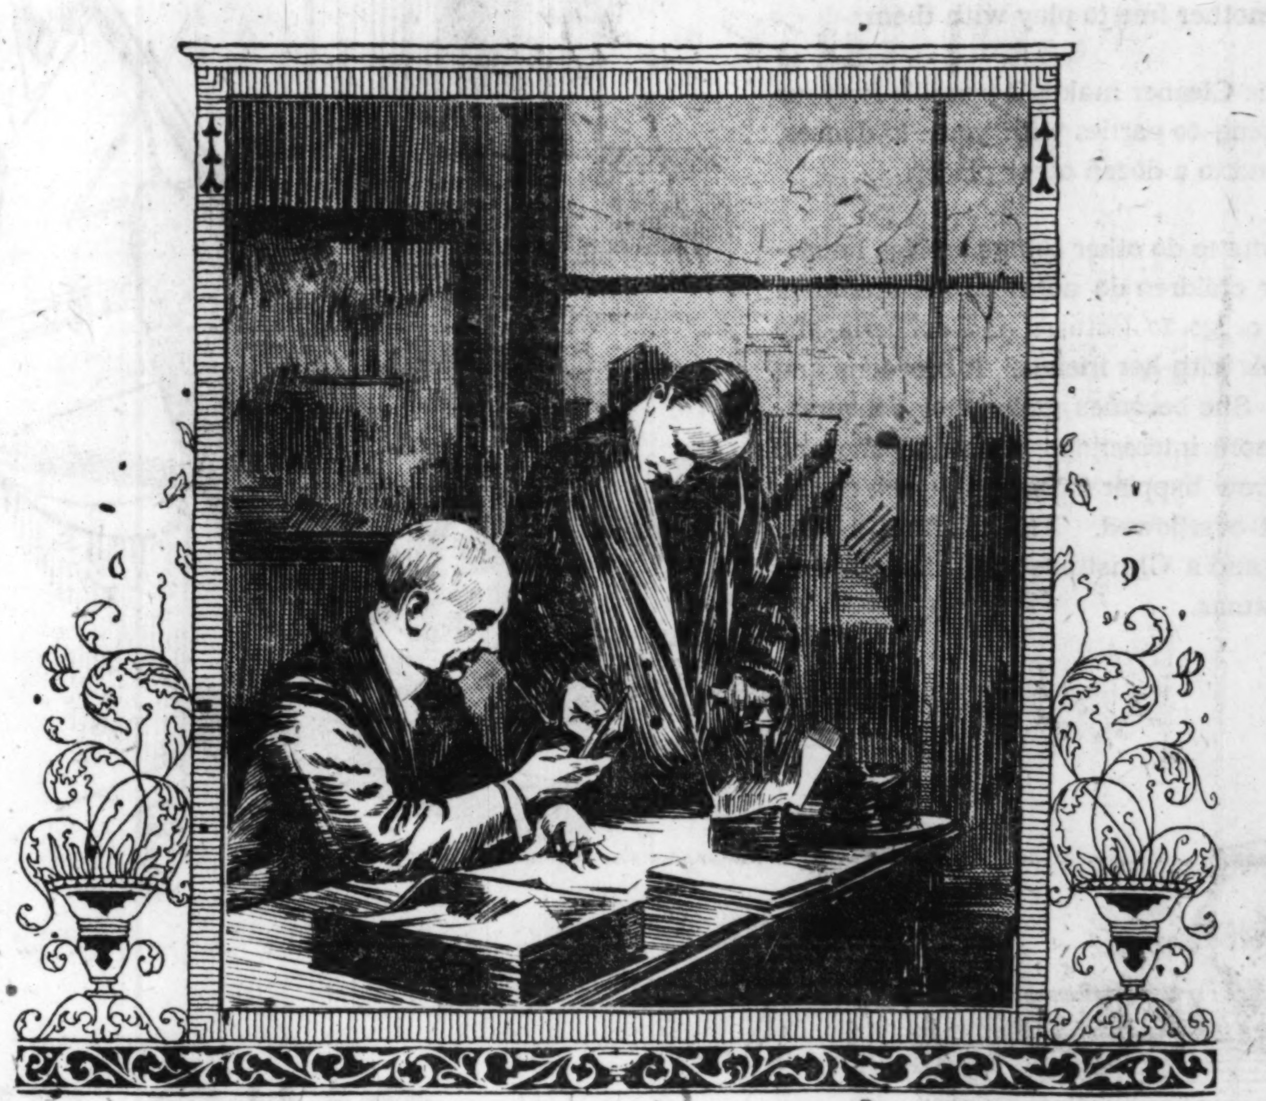
SHEAFFER'S
LIFE TIME PEN



It Gets More Names on the Dotted Line

About the last thing a good salesman reaches for is his fountain pen, but when he does he wants it to write without stuttering. That's why the SHEAFFER ranks in such high favor with thousands of the "Jim Henrys" of big business who are getting the "John Hancocks" on the dotted line.

If your sales force isn't carrying this "good companion of the pocket" the smartest thing you can do this Christmas is to give every last man a SHEAFFER Life Time Pen. With this pen they can write seven carbon copies just as easily as with the hardest lead pencil.

Your salesmen will admire your sporting blood in selecting the best pen money can buy—and they'll respond to its friendly challenge to produce more orders.

And while you're about it—get the SHEAFFER for others on your Christmas list. There's nothing can match its beauty, mechanical excellence and every day utility.

THE ROOS LINE

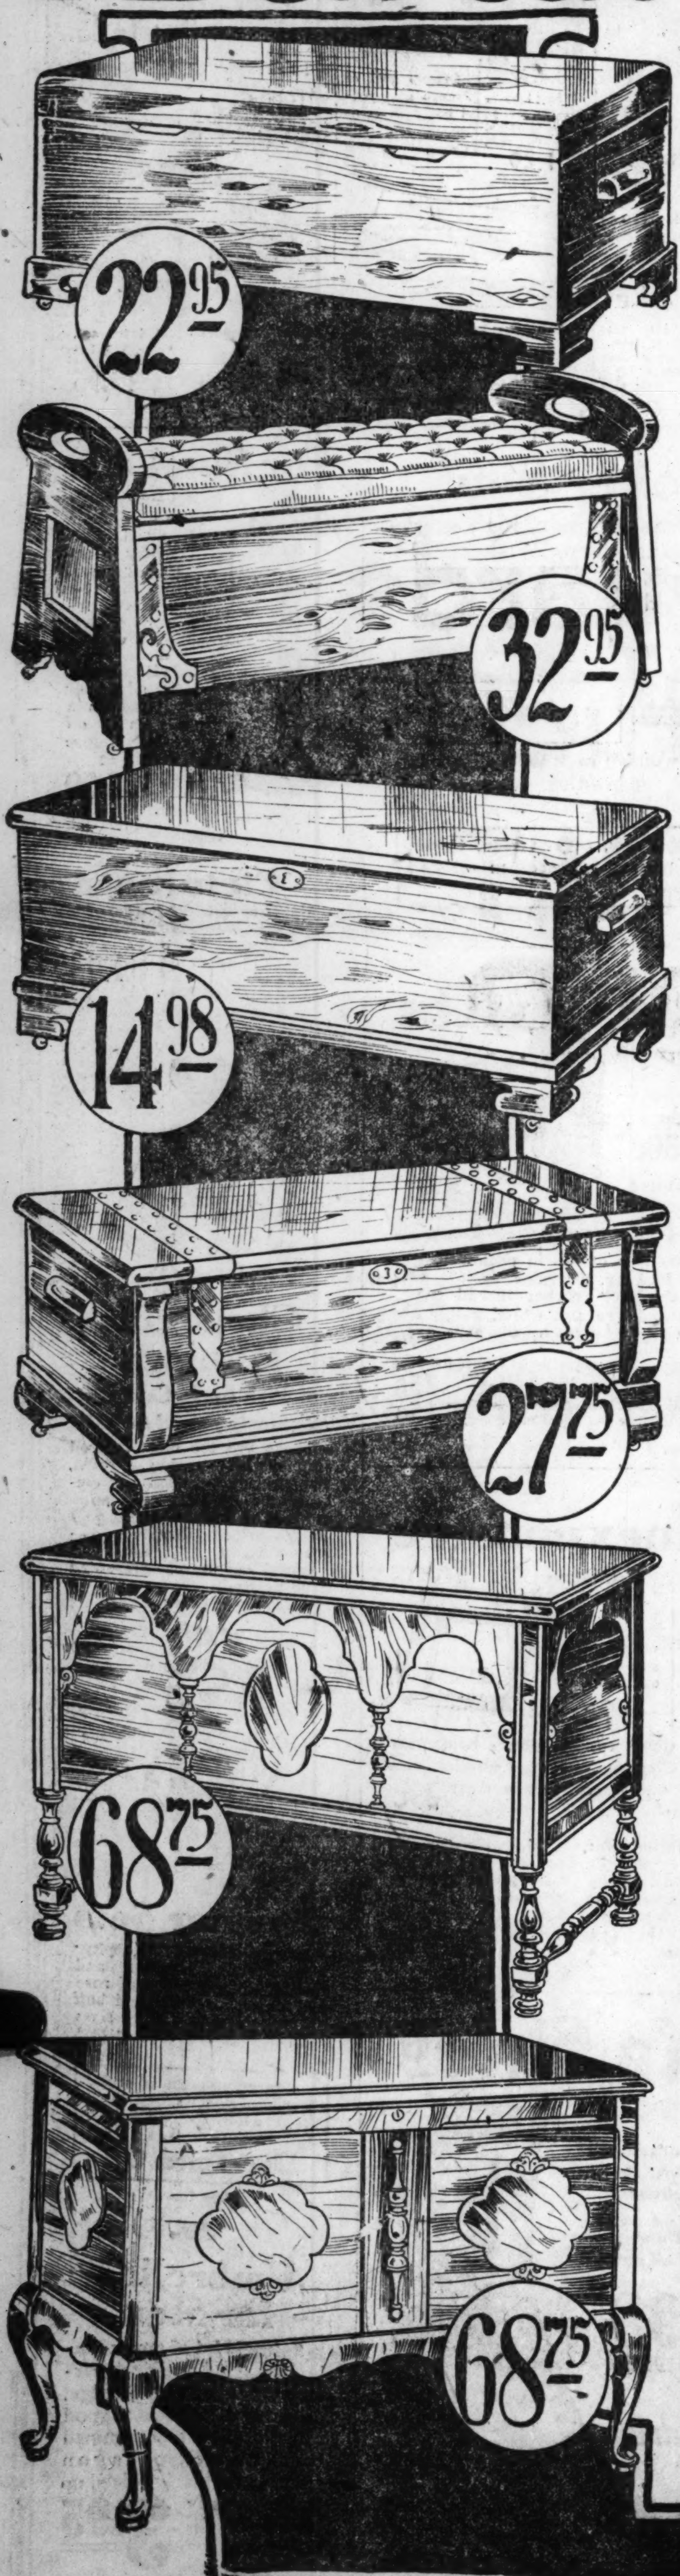
ROOS RED CEDAR CHESTS OF CHICAGO

A Great Sale of Roos Cedar Chests



We should say THE GREATEST sale of cedar chests. Because never before—to our knowledge—has such an assortment of cedar chests—so great a variety of styles—been offered to the public in a one-day sale. Coming as it does just before Christmas, this sale presents an unusual opportunity to secure one of these splendid Christmas gifts at a decided saving. Note well these particulars:

All are the well-known "Roos" (Chicago) make—
All are of 7-8 in. selected fragrant red cedar—
All are equipped with substantial hardware—
All are finished in natural color—
All are trimmed with 10 oz. copper, satin finish—
All round corner chests are of one-piece construction—

The fact alone that these chests are of the well-known Roos (Chicago) make is sufficient to stamp this as an extraordinary sale. Roos chests are not stained—no defects are covered up—you see the beautifully grained red cedar just as it is. The round corner chests are the aristocrats of all. They are absolutely airtight, because the lid fits snugly over a raised beveled molding on the interior of the chest, making it airtight and positively dust-proof.

FORBIDDEN FRUIT GRAPE SYRUP

from California — — the Garden of Eden

A delicious table syrup made from the pure juice of California wine grapes. Nothing is added—only water is taken out.

The red alicanti Forbidden Fruit Grape Syrup has the tang and wondrous flavor of the alicanti grape. It is delightful and delicious.

It is more economical than ordinary syrups. Its flavor is so pronounced that you only have to use a tiny bit.

The white muscat Forbidden Fruit Grape Syrup retains the distinctive flavor of the muscat grape, but introduces it to the palate in a new and delightful form. It is unlike anything you have ever tasted—so distinctive and pleasing.

The patented Sefailian process retains the delicious flavor and bouquet that ordinarily escapes in the form of vapor when the grapes are boiled.

Forbidden Fruit Grape Syrup is delicious on hot cakes and waffles—on bread and muffins in place of jelly—in puddings, on ice cream and in sauces in place of wine.

Forbidden Fruit Grape Syrup makes a refreshing beverage that has the wine grape flavor. You simply dilute with water.

Forbidden Fruit Grape Syrup has high food value and is a wonderful aid to digestion.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care the Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Just Making Conversation.

"Dear Miss Blake: Knowing how sympathetic you are, I am going to ask you something which has puzzled me. One evening last week I went to dinner with a friend and during the course of conversation he said to me: "The trouble with you, Ethel, is that you have not found yourself." I asked him to explain his statement, and he just looked at me and smiled. I am not in love with this man, but I was wondering whether or not you would be kind enough to explain to me just what you think he could have meant by this remark. I might also add that I had said nothing to give him the chance to say this.

"ETHEL."

I can't see anything to object to in the man's remark. He probably just meant that you were capable of doing bigger things if you had the bigger opportunity or he might have meant something else just to make conversation. You must not be too analytical about these conversation themes.

Scatter Your Sunshine.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a very pretty girl. She is about the same age as I am, which is sixteen years. I do not know if she likes me, but I rather think she does but don't like to show it. I would like to know whether I should keep on going with her or if I should not, and I also wish to know if I should let her know that I love her. JAMES"

The best plan for all concerned, James, would be not to concentrate on one young lady of sixteen, but scatter the sunshine of your presence among various young ladies of sixteen, or rather, until you have accumulated a few more birthdays, let the girls be friends, not sweethearts.

Best to Wait.

"Dear Miss Blake: About six months ago I met a young man whom I care a great deal for anad vice versa, as he says, but last month he had to leave the city to attend college. Since then we have been corresponding steadily. Before he left, he asked me to marry him, but he has four years ahead of him before we could think of getting married. I suppose he is coming here to spend his Christmas vacation. Shall we at that time get married secretly and he go back to school and I continue working, or not? I am 19 years of age. A. R."

No, dear, the secret marriage would be a great mistake. Wait until he is through school, which in four years will leave you still quit young enough for marriage. During this period of life the affections are liable to quite sudden and decided change. Supposing this should happen to the young man or to you, yourself? You would be in a pretty muddle, wouldnt you? If you weather the next four years, true to each other, you may be sure of a most successful married life. So, let that be the test.

Probably Lakes Candy.

"Dear Miss Blake: Your kind services are greatly needed. I had gone with a young man for about six months and then he joined the navy for a short time. He gave me a ring (not a diamond) to remember him by, and we correspond. I like him very much. Would you tell me, please, if I should send him a Christmas present? If so, what? It is so hard to decide as he is in the navy and has everything that he uses in it. He has a cigaret case and all the handkerchiefs he needs, etc.

"CLIMENE."

Make him a box of home made candy. He can take that with a relish in the navy. Or, if you are smart with the needle, how about a couple of handmade handkerchiefs, monogrammed and hemstitched in color, as seen in the smart shops?

Can't Be Serious.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a young man for nearly two weeks and have already fallen deeply in love. My mother objects to our being married as I am too young. Should I elope as I am simply wild about him? He is terribly good looking. SMILES"

You would be signing your letter "Sorrowful" instead of "Smiles," young lady, if you did such a silly thing. But I don't think you are in earnest at all. I couldn't think it. Consequently, I cannot give you any more of my valuable time.

Wait Till You're Sure.

"Dear Miss Blake: I like a boy very much. He is in many of my classes at high school. But outside of the classrooms he never pretends to notice me. Should I be the one to approach him with a 'Hello,' or what should I do? SUSAN."

Don't "hello" him, Susan, until you are sure he would like to be included among your friends. You should wait for an encouraging glance at least, even though it is the young lady's privilege to speak first.

Formal Engagement Unnecessary.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 and have been going about with a man about six months or more. He has asked me several times to marry him, and each time I have consented. What I cannot understand is that he never talks of getting engaged and never mentions when we will get married. Do you think I should ask him about it, or should I let it just go on as it has been going? ANXIOUS BABETTE."

You might inquire about the marriage day, since the young man has broached the subject to you. He may be just waiting for you to show a little interest. You don't have to have any formal engagement, however, but a girl has a right to know when she may plan a wedding day after she has been proposed to.

W Doctors do for their own sore throats

"I want to congratulate you, Doctor, on the great success I hear you are having with your throat cases. I myself have attacks of inflamed throat every winter, can't seem to get rid of them. Wish you would take a look at mine and tell me what to do."

"I guess, Doctor, I will have to introduce you to Formamint. Here's a real good throat antiseptic with which you will keep the soft tissues in an almost constant antiseptic bath, because you will find Formamint pleasant and convenient enough to use frequently. I find that the average patient will readily dissolve a Formamint tablet in his mouth every hour or so, and you know how hard it is to get them to use gargles or sprays consistently, even two or three times a day, especially children.

"Formamint tablets certainly relieve sore throats and are heading off a lot of tonsillitis for me, but I am even more interested in their prophylactic power, and so I am advising my patients to use them freely during the throat and influenza season to prevent infection."

Formamint is sold by all druggists. Any druggist will tell you how widely Formamint is recommended by throat specialists, physicians and dentists.

Long Horn Instruments Produce the Most Pleasing Music

The trombone soloist enraptures and thrills his audience with the smooth, mellow tones he is able to produce with this long horn instrument.

The long horn of the trombone amplifies the tone and gives it purity. So with the Puritan Phonograph. The sound waves, in their travel through the long wood Puritan horn, are stripped of any mechanical vibration or record noises. You hear only the true, refined tones with all their original beauty.

Completely built in the Puritan Factories—every part Guaranteed

Puritan Records

Puritan Records are also a real achievement. They are recorded and made entirely by the Puritan organization.

The Puritan Reproducer is specially built to play all makes of records. Thus, the Puritan gives you all music and plays it for you with a rare purity of tone.

In choosing a phonograph as a Christmas gift, judge first of all by tone. Go to a Puritan dealer near you and hear the sweet, mellow tones that come from the long Puritan horn.

Dealers: The Puritan Proposition is unusually attractive—Write for it.

STAYS HOT 6 TO 10 HOURS

A Comforting Gift for Christmas

This Guaranteed Hot Bottle Will Last an Ordinary Lifetime. What Gift Could Be More Appropriate?

For Baby

An EVER-READY HOT BOTTLE is safest for Baby. Warms crib or carriage. Does not leak.

For Sickroom

For hundreds of sickroom uses an EVER-READY hot application is a blessing.

For Hospitals

Modern hospitals are displacing the unsanitary rubber water bag in favor of the Ever-Ready.

THIS remarkable hot bottle—made of copper beautifully nickeled—radiates comfort and warmth. It's a Christmas gift which will bring joy through many years of constant use.

The Ever-Ready is not a hot water bottle; but it is chemically heated. It gets hot when you shake it—and stays hot 6 to 10 hours.

The principle of the Ever-Ready Hot Bottle is most interesting. It is simple—and scientifically perfect. The bottle is filled with a harmless chemical which does not deteriorate with use. To operate the bottle remove the cap and allow the air to enter—replace the cap and shake the bottle. It gets hot instantly—120 degrees of wholesome heat—a safe heat that does not burn. The chemical itself is not consumed, but lasts for years.

See the Ever-Ready Hot Bottle at your dealer's. It is sold and endorsed by leading dealers everywhere. The guarantee is your protection

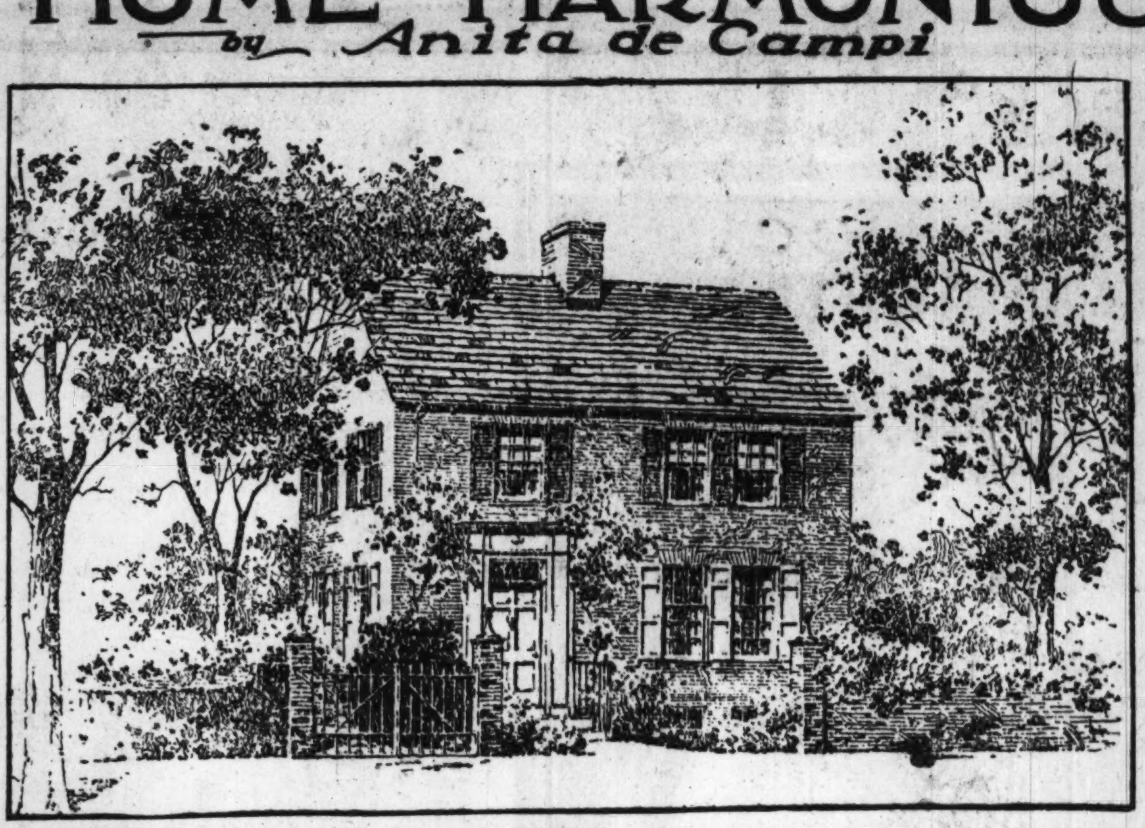
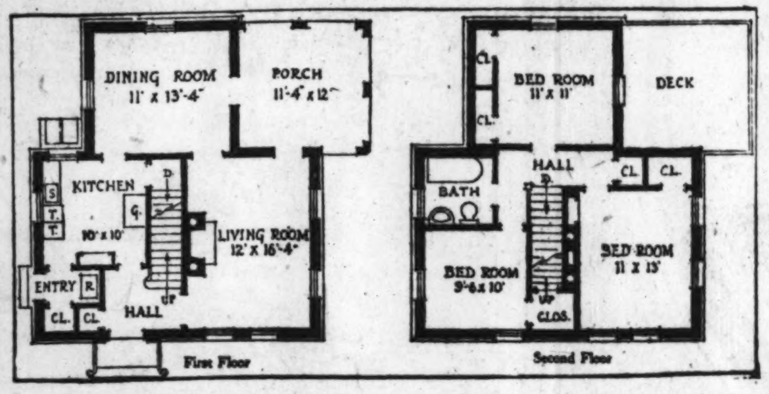
The HOME HARMONIOUS—

by Anita de Campi

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.





MODERN COLONIAL HOME.

THERE are many towns and sub-part of the country, where the urbs, particularly in the eastern style of domestic architecture is so settled and so uniform that any wide divergence from it seems out of place. Nearly always this architecture is good, though sometimes a bit stiff and formal. On a street with these reserved, decorous, traditional houses, a bungalow is as startling and unpleasantly conspicuous as a shirt sleeved man at a state banquet.

The owner who starts to build a new dwelling in such surroundings finds himself in difficulties. He wants his house to fit his needs and those of his family, to express their ideas, and to do this without getting itself stared at.

The home figured here will solve this problem for many a harassed builder. It is as modern as the morning's news, and yet it fits in the most staid surroundings. It is chock full of individuality, but not the obtrusive sort. Outwardly, it is a small, handsome colonial dwelling which deviates from the accepted pattern just enough to cause a ripple but not a break. Inside, it shows the hand of the trained and inventive architect at every turn.

The hooded entrance, which takes the place of the usual entrance porch, is a little at the side, and opens into a small hallway. At the left, in this hall, is the coat closet, which no dwelling can afford to do without. Straight ahead is the short passage to the kitchen, and beside it are the stairs leading to the upper story. These stairs always should be colonial in pattern in such a house, and, thanks to the methods which have linked art to modern manufacturing, there is no trouble in getting just what is needed.

At the right of the hall is the opening to the living room, 12 feet by 16 feet 4 inches. This is a large room for so small a house, but the full spaciousness of the interior is not told in figures. At the rear of the living room is the living porch, just under 12 feet square, overlooking the garden. This adds immensely, not only to the comfort of the family, but to the apparent roominess of the interior. By glassing in this porch, it can be turned into a sunroom during the cold weather, but with or without glass, this connecting link between house and garden is a health giver and a joy.

The living room is lighted from two sides, not counting the light which it gets from the porch. The fireplace is on the inner long wall, backed up against the stairs. In this way all the heat is conserved, and a few sticks of wood on cool autumn mornings send a warmth to the upper floor as well as around the living room.

At the back of the house, reached from living room and porch, is the dining room, 11 feet by 13 feet 4 inches. This room, likewise, gets light from two sides as well as from the porch. The close association with porch and garden adds to the charm of such eating quarters.

The kitchen, 10 feet square, is directly back of the hall, between hall and living room. Thanks to this arrangement, the housewife who does her own work is saved many steps and much time. The kitchen has no pantry, but the service entrance at the side has a place for the icebox, and there is a large, capable closet beside this entrance, which is equal to much of the work that a pantry is supposed to do. The basement is reached by a door at the rear of the kitchen, and there is room on the landing of the basement stairs for a useful built-in cabinet.

Upstairs are three bedrooms, the smallest of which is 9 feet 6 inches by 10 feet, while the largest is 11 by 13—again an unusual size for so small a house, but this architect has wasted no space. All the rooms have closets, one of them has two closets, and space is provided for the family linen by still another compartment opening from the hall. The low attic can be used to store trunks. The bathroom is well located and equipped, and, if the owner desires, he can turn the covering deck of the porch below into a sleeping porch without injuring the lines of the house in the least.

Not the least important thing about this delightful little dwelling is that it will go nicely on a fifty foot lot, and can be built on one even narrower.

The walls of this house are face brick, with either common brick or hollow tile for backing. The rich, varied tones of the brick help the dignity of the design and play their part in making this a home equal to any neighborhood. The roof is covered with asphalt shingles and the gypsum plaster of the interior is laid on metal lath.

The floors are the only exposed part of this building which will burn, and probably no fire ever started with a floor. If by some miracle it did start there, the gypsum plaster and steel lath would hold the flames back from the furring studs for a full hour—ample time to warn the people and put out the blaze before it can spread.

The first cost of this dwelling, built in this fashion, is about 10 per cent more than if built of wood throughout. The difference in insurance alone will overbalance that trifling difference in five years, not to mention the saving on upkeep, and the fact that no man lives long enough to see a well built brick house grow old.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. H.: Have blue and rose satin damask for your overdraperies and gold colored silk gauze for the window curtains. Get a piece of colorful brocade a yard and a half long and a yard wide for your table runner. Use rose colored cotton repp for the overdraperies in your bedroom, with curtains of ruffled white swiss. You might repeat this material for your bedspread and trim it with narrow upholstery fringe.

MRS. F. H.: I think your plan of using the homespuns is excellent. Since your house is white outside, I think that the white shades would be quite in accordance. For window curtaining in a colonial home, nothing is more appropriate than the ruffled white muslin that was used in colonial days. Keep to the same style of curtaining throughout the house. You may, if you like, vary this with valances or lambrequins inside. The ball edging is also correct.

Treat the sun room as a part of the living room and repeat the style of curtaining in here. I think you may use the filet net as you suggest to advantage.

Have your floors medium dark and waxed. Light walnut is the most popular tint.

It would be nice if you could get figured linen in some pretty colorful colonial pattern for your lambrequins (shaped), and cut motifs from this fabric and stretch it on wire shield shaped frames for your electric lights at the side walls. Repeat the dominant color of the fabric in silk for other lamp shades. China silk is used as a foundation, with meteor silk over it, often in contrasting tint.

MRS. C. L. B.: With your white calcimined interior, I believe that the peasant style of furnishing would be attractive. Imagine, for instance, furniture of deep intense blue, ornamented with conventional flowers in peasant style, some of the chairs having rush seats. For draperies you might use hand woven fabrics in stripes of brilliant color and rag rugs. You had better trust to your builder to provide you with well fitted windows for your porch.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

THE disinclination of the players to appear in cities other than New York begins to look ominous. What are we to do to regain the favor of the reluctant ones and win them back to our forbidding but hospitable shores? Our theaters are commodious, our press is hot in its praise, and the cheery hearths of our hotels burn brightly in pleasure at their presence. The boulevards make smooth going for their motors, and in the night cafés, (spirited centers of late eating) they can sup on puddings no less savory than those available in New York. We allow them, here, to act on Sunday nights, a privilege not permitted them in their own capital, and we go to see them in crowds comparable, fiscally, with the audiences in the east.

Among our less material favors we offer them the Public Library. They have the symphony concerts on Friday afternoons, and especial matinées of the opera on Sundays, whereby they may refresh themselves with the tonic draughts of another art. Our galleries, zoos, and museums are improving forums of study and recreation; and from our footpads we protect them, for I have never heard of any New York actor being sandbagged in the Chicago byways. No benefit is too proud to have them perform upon its program. We have the great heart and the honest handclasp of prairie friendship, and our eye grows brighter when it sees them come.

What more can we do in testament of our wanting them, and in methods of pleasing them once they are here? Our atmosphere, as the poet says, breathes rest and comfort, and our many chambers seem full of welcomes. Yet here is Miss Marie Dressler, star of "Cinderella on Broadway," utterly passing us up, as the saying is, and refusing to approach us nearer than Indianapolis. I am told that Miss Dressler deplored a failure in Chicago to appreciate "the subtleties" of her comedy, but I feel sure that she was kept away by something deeper than that. A play called "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," announced for Chicago last week, was stopped from coming because three actors, among them that great artist, Mr. Henry E. Dixey, found it inconvenient to leave New York. The chorus beauties are averse to exile here. Their union demands time and a half for encores in Chicago from Mr. Ziegfeld and his brethren, and even then are sad in contemplation of the distant and the sacred joys of home.

Mr. John Barrymore, it is said, while loving our western ways, will visit us no more, and we are deprived, unless we go to New York, of viewing the work of that finest of the American actors. Only a little less lamentable are the plans to remain away from us of Miss Laurette Taylor, Miss Billie Burke, and Miss Elsie Ferguson, to say nothing of scores of other essential but less celebrated persons of the theater. Of course there is a bit of comfort in the fact that the Misses Taylor, Burke, and Ferguson are remaining away from everywhere else, so far as the drama goes, since they do not seem to be lucky in the acquisition of popular shows.

Still further is our grief crowned by consolation. We are not entirely deserted by the theater's patriciate. Any suburb that is honored by the residence therein, however temporary, of such pleasing performers as Miss Barrymore, Miss Cowl, Mr. Barney Bernard, Mr. Collier, Mr. Donald Bryan, Mr. Ralph Morgan, Mr. George White, Miss Helen Shipman, and some hundreds of others is not entirely destitute of gladness. Moreover, it will be found that many times when the managers substitute willing for unwilling actors on the arduous westward tours, the substitution is more than satisfactory. Let us not, for the present, break our hearts for hunger, but be satisfied with the generous crumbs. Still, ere the situation becomes precarious, we should consult ourselves and the actors to learn how we may grow more admirable in their esteem.

MICHAEL MORTON, who wrote of "The Yellow Ticket," is author of "Woman to Woman," the leading rôle of which Miss Willette Kershaw will play. A. E. Anson and Miss Hilda Spong are of the cast.

The New York Telegraph reports the following scene in the lobby of Powers' theater, where Miss Barrymore is playing "Declassee."

Chicago treasurer—No; this here play is by Joe Atkins.

Burton Holmes' "photo travels" this season include journeys to Constantinople, to Jerusalem, to the Garden of Allah, to the cities of Spain, and to Venice and the Italian lakes. The course will soon begin at Orchestra hall.

Answering many inquiries from nearby cities as to the plans of "Abraham Lincoln" after it leaves the Blackstone Christmas night, the management announces that it will not visit anywhere in the Chicago territory. It returns to the east, with Boston as its main objective. For sentimental reasons it was desired that a performance be given in Springfield, but this was found not possible. There will be no "second" company.

The list of the players in the Follies due at the Colonial next Sunday includes Fanny Brice, Mary Eaton, John Steel, Van and Schenck, W. C. Fields, Carl Randall, Jack Donohue, Ray Dooley, Bernard Granville, Lillian Broderick, Moran and Mack, and Jerome and Herbert.

"The Half-Moon," in which Joseph Cawthorn, Joseph Santley, and Miss Ivy Sawyer strive to please, is to be the successor in January to "The Girl in the Spotlight" at the Illinois.

Miss Margaret Lawrence, late of "Wedding Bells" and "Tea for Three," is the actress who will succeed Miss Martha Hedman as Arthur Byron's assistant in "Transplanting Jean" in New York City.

Despite the unprecedented enthusiasm of the press accounts of James K. Hackett's "Macbeth" in London, his season has closed there, for a time at least. He is now in Paris.

They are still rechristening the two new Selwyn theaters in Chicago. One of them is now the Harris, named for Sam H. Harris, according to Mr. Harris. The Woods new theater is still without a title, though it is said that the McCormicks may relent and permit their patronymic to identify the house.

H. H. Frazee, the Boston baseball and dramatic impresario, announces that he will revive "The Song Bird," a play by the Hattons, with Miss Marguerite Sylva as the star. Miss Jane Cowl played "The Song Bird" briefly in Chicago several seasons ago, but it was deemed not worthy of her by the public.

A new revue with the original title, "Greenwich Village Scandals," is promised with Miss Mae Murray, the film queen, as the star.

Eight best sellers in the theaters last week:

Miss Barrymore in "Déclassée."
Miss Cowl in "Smilin' Through."
"Irene."
"Abraham Lincoln."
"Happy-Go-Lucky."
William Collier in "The Hottentot."
William Hodge in "The Guest of Honor."
George White's "Scandals."

Eight best sellers in music last week:

"Old Man Jazz."
"The Hula Blues."
"Squealin' Pig Blues."
"Frog Legs."
"Beela-Boola."
"Bow-wow."
"That Old Irish Mother of Mine."
"Lead, Kindly Light."

A second company has been organized to play "The Bat" in Chicago beginning Dec. 26 at the Princess. The players will be Miss Lizzie Hudson Collier, Carl Anthony, John Stokes, Gilda Leary, Ryder Keane, Robert Barratt, Charles Coleman, Edward Colebrook, and Miss Eva Williams.

Milwaukee is in revolt against the New York producers who send substitute companies to play there. Sherman Brown, manager of the Davidson theater, has notified the Broadway powers that all No. 2 companies have been canceled at that house and that it will be closed unless original casts are provided. The Messrs. Selwyn have already canceled a minor "Buddies" outfit, booked for Milwaukee, and the organization now playing at the Woods will take its place. In large advertisements announcing this benefaction the Selwyns indicate that they regard themselves as philanthropists in treating Milwaukee so generously.

Discussing the remarkable increase of Chicago's interest in Russian dancing, Morris Gest, the pioneer impresario of the ballet in America, says:

"The glorious thing about America is that it is the melting pot for the art of the world today. Our riches and prosperity has attracted the genius of the world. We are given the cream of the cream of all the world's art to pick and choose from. We are not creators in the realm of music, and our painters and poets and dramatists all lack the mission and the message the Russians have because of their suffering; but we have a genius for assimilating the art of other nations and grafting it on our own. We are doing this with the art of the Russian plastic school of dance today, which I predict will be developed here in a wonderful manner within the next few years. We have shown in 'Mecca' what can be accomplished along these lines.

"And when my epitaph is written I ask for nothing more than this line: "'Here lies Morris Gest, who brought the first Russian Ballet to America.'"

The New York Times offers this morning the following theatrical news and comment:

A new field of road revenue has been opened with the discovery that the midnight shows of the New York roof gardens have a strange, but powerful fascination for the provinces. Just at present "The Midnight Rounders," late of the Century roof, is playing to huge receipts in Philadelphia, with Eddie Cantor as its star, and in Atlantic City, in the next few days, John Henry Mears will offer a remade version of one of the earlier Morris Gest late-hour shows. The cast of the latter will be headed by Blanche Ring, Charles Winninger, and Richard Carle. The Shuberts, encouraged by the success of the Cantor show, are at present looking around for material out of which to fashion another touring organization. Mr. Ziegfeld, as yet, has sent none of his roof entertainments on tour, but he has contemplated the step for a long time and the success of the Shubert experiment will probably decide him.

Mr. Woods apparently is feeling more optimistic about the theater situation, for he has placed one play in rehearsal and is casting a second. The first is a work by Michael Morton entitled "Woman to Woman," for which Willette Kershaw, A. E. Anson, Hilda Spong, and Charles Waldron are among those employed. The second is another (and apparently less typical) Wilson Collison farce, called "Up in the Haymow." It has been retouched by the many sided Mr. Hopwood.

The news that Miss Laurette Taylor is planning to act "Peg o' My Heart" again came as a surprise to a considerable section of the playgoing public—since Miss Taylor, the other time that she acted "Peg," was compelled to keep on doing it for so long that she began presently to refer to the play as "the international scourge." According to the gossip "Peg" will be revived some time early in the new year, and at about the same time Miss Taylor will begin work in a motion picture version of the play.

Although Lionel Barrymore is committed definitely to John D. Williams, there is a hardy rumor that he will be seen in the spring in "Macbeth," the production to be made by Arthur Hopkins—with the aid, of course, of Robert Edmond Jones. At all events the Messrs. Hopkins and Jones are at work on a "Macbeth" production, and report links Lionel Barrymore with it.

"THE HOTTENTOT"
A Horse Play Without any Horseplay
By Victor Mapes and William Collier
As Seen by the Critics:

"We were honestly overworked. Mr. Collier made us laugh when he talked and when he was silent."—Percy Hammond in Tribune.

"There seems to be but one thing to say after you see 'The Hottentot'—that William Collier irresistably is the first of the American comedians."—Ashton Stevens in Herald and Examiner.

"In the acting of airy American farce Mr. Collier has no rival."—O. L. Hall in the Journal.

"William Collier, blue ribbon farceur of the American stage."—Charles Collins in the Post.

"Probably the town will not stop laughing at 'The Hottentot' until after Easter."—American.

"A typical Collier play and up to his best standard, 'The Hottentot' bids fair to live long and prosper."—Journal of Commerce.

Evidently Amy Leslie didn't enjoy "The Hottentot."

Elgar's Orchestra Stays at Dreamland All Winter Just as I Promised. Billy Jackson don't get them for the Western Vaudeville or the Keith Circuit

All my life I have worked toward better things for those whose pleasure is dancing—never knocking, always boosting; providing BETTER SURROUNDINGS—FLOORS—AIR — HOURS — MUSIC MORE BEAUTY OF SCENE ROOM

DREAMLAND with Elgar's Orchestra is the crowning achievement of 26 years' hard work in that direction.

The music at Dreamland is the best there is. It would be a knock—a real solar plexus blow at the business and a bitter disappointment to our patrons to let this incomparable group of musicians slip away into vaudeville.

I aim, as every other ballroom proprietor should, to keep the good dancers on the ballroom floor and not chase the public away to a vaudeville show to hear real music and see real dancing. Following my aim I have made Dreamland the most popular place to dance in this country. Strangers are flocking in and are well cared for.

Norma Talmadge and Wallacc Reid Win the Big Popularity Contest

By Mae Tinee.

WELL, what do you think of it, now that it's all over?

Maybe you're not pleased. If you're not, perhaps it's your own fault. Don't think, so though.

You see, the great trouble with most of us is lethargy. We like people, but it's too much trouble to tell 'em so. We think they do something awfully well—and let it go at that, never stopping to realize that we'd be really doing a great, big, kind, human act by telling them just what we thought of them, and why.

It must be said, however, that in your case this time the reverse has been the case. You've not only sent in one vote for your favorites but I seriously suspect you of robbing ashpiles and small children of papers, the coupons of which would help to swell your vote. (Not seriously—but you have been zealous.) We have certainly had to harp on the little old idea of one vote to a person this week, haven't we?

You know I asked you last week what was the matter with Mary Pickford? Quite a few letters have come in. Would you like to look at excerpts from several of them? If so, here they are:

"Mary Pickford has been making too few pictures lately. That's why she isn't receiving so many votes."

"Miss Pickford went and got married to Douglas Fairbanks, and she has been too busy being his sweetheart to bother being America's any more."

"You want to know why Mary Pickford isn't ahead of Norma Talmadge? Well, you think you know everything, why don't you go and answer the question for yourself. We ain't paid to."

"She's just as popular, only she isn't so enterprising as Norma."

And so on. No space for any more.

I want to talk to you about something else, too. Many of you have written saying as follows—or pretty nearly as follows:

"Why the ——— ——— ——— don't you count the votes of people we do send in? I sent in one for Miss Gazzoozoolum and Mr. Patootie, and they haven't appeared in the paper once! Don't tell me you're conducting a fair contest. You aren't or you would see that at least the names of Miss Gazzoozoolum and Mr. Patootie appeared."

Well, now, let us reason together. If you will notice, only the names of twelve appeared each day—and they are the winners. Your vote for Miss G. and Mr. P. were duly counted.

Your vote, however, could not by any chance place the names of Miss Gazzoozoo Lum and Mr. Patootie in the list of winners. There would have to be some more to keep it company. Had the requisite number come in, they would have been checked up and—there would have been dear Miss G. and Mr. P. right up with the band.

You understand now, don't you? There's been no conspiracy against you. Your votes and your Miss G. and Mr. P. schust as dear to our hearts as the votes of the Talmadge-Reid combination, and the favorites themselves.

Nobody shall do you wrong while we are on the job with our good, our good, well, nobody did do you wrong.

So, if you're unhappy about the outcome, take your medicine bravely. There'll be another contest by and by. Think ahead! Be a good sport, and if you've got anything mean to say, don't say it—WHISTLE IT!

As soon as we can get around to it we are going to give you lovely pictures of the new king and queen in our rotogravure section.

THE WINNERS.

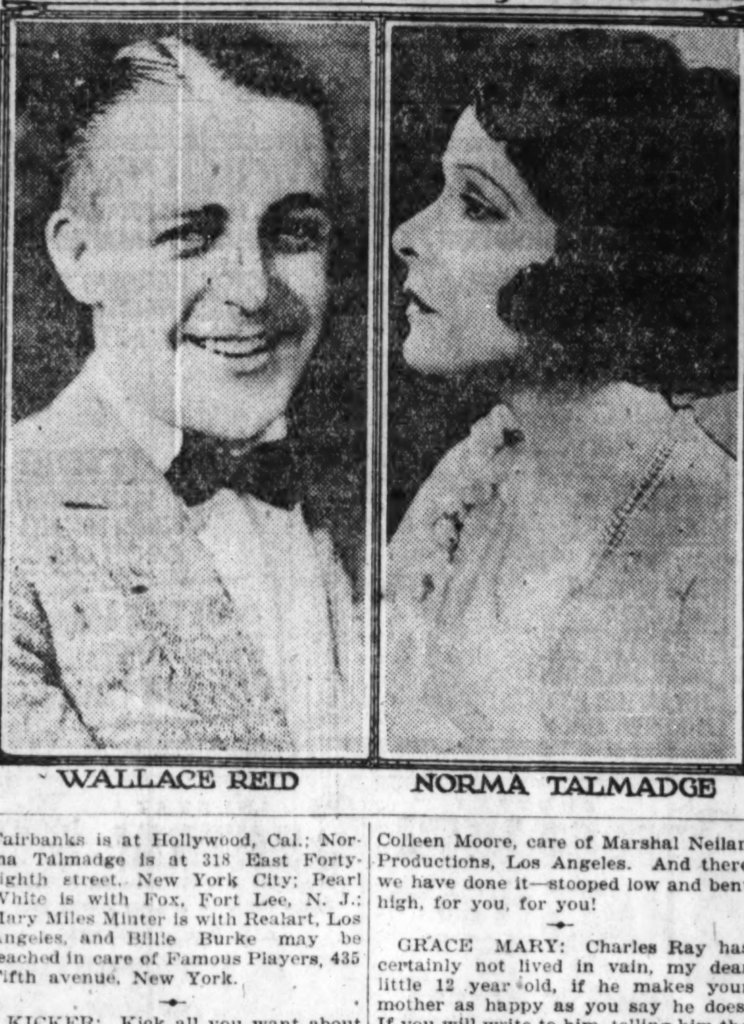
These two young people may certainly thank the gods for their hosts of friends in Chicago. Never, we may say, have we seen such active campaigning as has been done by the folks who knew Mike's boy Tom when he went to school in this city. They have been with him and his young wife, ZaSu Pitts, tooth and toenail.

(No question what a Gallery-Pitts acquaintance thinks about during a popularity contest!)

The NEW KING and QUEEN of MOVIEDOM



WALLACE REID NORMA TALMADGE

Ask Me! Ask Me!

MARJORIE P. B.: Hello, yourself! Glad to see your coupon. It was counted—twice. (Once for the male star and once for the female.) Sorry I couldn't count it four times, but honesty is our policy, and it has paid. You should see the bee-yew-tiful new building where we work now. Don't know that I could "sneak" a picture of Miss Cowl into the rotogravure section for you, but I will speak to the editor and see if she won't remember what a beautiful thing the Christmas spirit is and put one in for you just because. Y'wekkum. Come again.

THIRTEEN YEARS OLD: It was awfully nice of you to take time to write! Bet you're mighty busy now with football, aren't you? O, has the season closed in your neck of the woods? No, the "Ask Me" appears only on Sunday. Mary Miles Minter was born in Shreveport, La.; Douglas Fairbanks is at Hollywood, Cal.; Norma Talmadge is at 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York City; Pearl White is with Fox, Fort Lee, N. J.; Mary Miles Minter is with Realart, Los Angeles, and Billie Burke may be reached in care of Famous Players, 435 Fifth avenue, New York.

KICKER: Kick all you want about the "closeups" and you won't hurt anybody's feelings much except the husbands and wives of the close-up-ees. The sooner the directors learn to "make it snappy" the happier we'll all be, won't we. (Don't forget to fill up your coupon, please!) It's quite a ways to where you are, but I reckon the contest will be running by the time your answer comes. You tell me to "boost, don't knock." Whadda you want—a monopoly?

CHUBBY: In "Once to Every Woman" Rudolph Valentine played the part of the wretched young nobleman. Yes, wasn't he fine!

MISS L. G.: Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please, with your request repeated.

B. S.: Yes, we'll "stoop so low and bend so high" for you. Address Pearl White, Fort Lee, N. J.; Charles Ray, care of First National, Los Angeles, Cal.; Dorothy Dalton and Ethel Clayton, care of Paramount, Los Angeles; Colleen Moore, care of Marshal Neilan Productions, Los Angeles. And there we have done it—stooped low and bent high, for you, for you!

GRACE MARY: Charles Ray has certainly not lived in vain, my dear little 12 year old, if he makes your mother as happy as you say he does. If you will write to him, telling him the facts, I'm sure he'll send you his picture. If he doesn't, why he just isn't the Charles Ray I think he is, that's all. I'd love to have you write to me, and if you will I promise to answer your letters. I'm a bum correspondent—but I would like to write to you now and then.

GRACE G.: I have never in my life before been likened to anything so nice as a "sparkling, bubbly woodsy brook." I love that! I thank you.

MRS. EDITH N.: Your votes were counted if they were bona fide. Don't blame you for wanting to support your favorites. Why run with the crowd? There's more room running alone and no chance of getting your feet stepped on.

J. L. H.: Address Douglas MacLean, care of Ince, Culver City, Cal. Y'wekkum.

H. M. E.: Write to Corinne Griffith, care of Vitagraph company, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Young Visiters" on Stdge Reduce Comedy to Farce

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Probably it never has been determined what proportion of the readers of a best seller follows the story to the stage to see what the dramatists and the actors do to it. But if only a fourth of those who read 9 year old Daisy Ashford's "Young Visiters" see the play, it should net the producers a tidy little half million.

Most of them, we fear, will be disappointed. Though the transcript has been faithfully made, and the dialogue quoted verbatim, it provides entertainment that is rather dull and spiritless when it is not childish. And this because the grownups who have directed the performance have sought to burlesque the story in place of playing it seriously, as young Daisy wrote it.

They have followed her written descriptions of characters and scenes literally, and visualized not what was in her mind, but what they, as grownups, imagine she saw. Thus the impression is created that they are making sport of her, rather than of themselves, and their efforts to be amusing are consciously labored and, for the most part, ineffective.

They have also burlesqued the scenic setting, as though that, too, had been copied from designs by the authoress. Hence it is grotesquely fantastic in place of being "grand and sumshious," which does not help.

There are many scenes, but the changes are simply made. In the first of these Miss Ashford is discovered seated at her school desk laboriously at work on her novel. The curtain lifts, and Mr. Salteena is having breakfast with Ethel Monticue.

'Let's go on a visit to Bernard Clark," suggests Mr. Salteena. "Yes, let's," agrees Ethel, batting her eyes wildly. The journey is made by portable cab, with the horse and driver painted on a life size "cutout," Ethel and Mr. Salteena carrying the cab with them as they trot along back of it and pretend to admire the stationary scenery.

The railway train is also a portable affair, drawn by hand, but this time the scenery unwinds with a panoramic effect until they arrive at their destination and are met by Bernard's footman and taken to the hall. Bernard is a grand young man with a cerise sash, and shows his visiters almost immediately to their adjoining bedrooms, that they may rest after their journey.

Next morning they awake with their heads appearing above the two beds that were provided with clean sheets and commanded a grand view from the windows, and then they descend again to Bernard's hall, where Mr. Salteena attempts to stop the ripening love affair between the romantic young people by relating a few riddles. They are finally rid of him when Bernard sends him to the Crystal palace to meet the Earl of Clincham and be socially polished.

Salteena, as you will remember, was not quite a gentleman and was desirous of being considered a little less mere than the mere people from whom he sprung. At the palace Clincham meets him and agrees, for a modest fee, to do what he can, both to make him socially eligible and to get him a position galloping beside the royal baroushe in green plush knickerbockers. He also agrees to take Mr. Salteena to the levee at Buckingham palace, which they approach in a hansom with other costly people.

They find the Prince of Wales presiding, with his small but costly crown, and a placard on the wall explaining that the dear queen is slightly indisposed. The levee is a grand success, especially after the prince thoughtfully orders three glasses of champagne and some ices, and a duchess gayly sings "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-aye." Ethel and Barnard also attend the levee, having come up to London for a few days of gaierty.

The following day Bernard takes Ethel into the country that he may propose marriage to her. She accepts him, even though Mr. Salteena protests that he had intended marrying her himself. But Bernard is to her like a heathen god, though she will always think of Mr. Salteena in a warm manner. They hold the wedding reception at Gaierty hotel, and start away for their six weeks' honeymoon in Egypt, from which, Ethel confidently announces, they plan to return with a son and heir. And so the burletta ends.

The scene of the levee is much the most amusing. Here Clincham and the prince and all the costly people achieve something of the spirit of the book by not overplaying. The cast is competent but uneven, the Ethel of Marie Goff and the Salteena of Herbert Yost having been so badly directed that their highly extravagant performances sadly handicap the others.

In "The Broken Wing," which is one of the new melodramas, a life-sized airplane comes crashing through the roof of a Mexican ranch house hurling its mechanician through what seems to be a solid adode wall and leaving him lying crumpled near the footlights a dying man, while the pilot hangs limply over the side of the fuselage calling for help. It is the most realistic stage effect the moving pictures have inspired, and leaves its audiences literally stunned by its suddenness and realism.

The play was written by Paul Dickey and Charles Goddard, the authors of "The Misleading Lady," and doubtless was intended for the screen, which doubtless it will reach before the end of the season. Inez Plummer, who may be remembered as the young wife of "Too Many Cooks," is the heroine, and twists her greaser-English speech as effectively as any of them. Charles Trowbridge plays the amnesia victim, and Alphonse Ethier a busy bandit.

MUSIC

On Five Survivals Among the Operas from Shakespeare

By Ruth Miller.

NO Anglo-Saxon has ever written a great Shakespearean opera. If Purcell hadn't been born so early in the history of the lyric drama he might have committed himself successfully. One of the modern British sextet of creative musicians, including Ireland, Goosens, Bridge, or Bax, may fall into that pleasant error. Mayhap the equivocal honor will be bestowed upon some erudite American whose bookshelf contains "The Taming of the Shrew" along with his well worn "Scarlet Letter" and the "Tale of Two Cities." (This particular enumeration of the masterpieces dear to the heart of the omnivorous and native literary mind is not my own).

But in this day of American operatic treats and English lyric procrastination, the honors for the greatest opera founded on the dramas of the master must lie between a Frenchman and an Italian.

Gounod with the literary aid of those sturdy librettists, Barbier and Carre, wrote "Romeo and Juliet." Prior to that accomplishment, sixteen diligent attempts had been made. These early efforts failed principally because they followed the popular and senseless tradition of the lyric drama. Noteworthy among them is an operatic best seller of the seventeenth century, Bellini's "I Capuletti ed-i Montecchi."

It was comprised of howling, sentimental arias linked together, festooned with jingling coloratura ornaments of festive trills and darting staccati, long held high notes, and other florescent vocal fireworks. Indeed, these old-time Italian operas were something of a sporting event, an amazing exhibition of competitive vocal skill.

Consider this historical instance relating to the awe inspiring virtuosity of one of that breed of bravura vocalist which, like the estimable bison, is fast dying out.

One Davide, a singer with the remarkable compass of three octaves covering four B flats, created a furore in Rossini's "Otello," ranked by some with the jewel of opera bouffe, his "Barber of Seville."

A French critic wrote that he created "an enthusiasm of delight which would have scarcely been conceived without having been witnessed." And he accomplished this orgy of emotion by "crushing the principal motive of an air beneath the luxuriance of his ornamentation, which has no other merit than that of difficulty conquered."

In other words, this drama of the immortal Moor was utilized as a peg upon which a composer hung his sugared tunes and musical fireworks; a vehicle in which a singer with a freakish mechanical vocal equipment was carried to the peak of artistic sensation.

In our decadent operatic present we have only one Galli-Curci and one Titto Schipa, but the woods were full of them in the pleasant days when the sole requirements of a successful girl were Dresden prettiness and mental vacancy, and those of popular music a sapient tune and acrobatics.

We are glutted today with operatic splendor, scenic extravagances, and luxurious trappings. Like any satiation, it has brought on fault finding and the peevish quibble. But, however we may weep, as we read of glittering vocal glories in the ancient history of music, over the present day scarcity of virtuoso singers, we should check our sobs long enough to count a few operatic blessings. We have no such Elizabethan horrors as old women and male sopranos enacting the rôles of Cæsar or the Roman senators. The Romeo who strides out upon the Auditorium stage this afternoon in the season's first presentation of "Romeo and Juliet" will be the lithe and masculine Mr. Hislop.

And returning after many verbal wanderings to this sole survival of the seventeen operas built on Shakespeare's love tragedy. When Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" was sung first in Paris in 1867 French critics were inclined to rank it above this music maker's "Faust." But it never gained the popularity of that sentimental escapade of the venerable Dr. Faustus because its lengthy and dreary original score stands in crying need of a stern blue pencil.

Then, too, it requires cautious and shrewd casting. We, who have idealized these immortal lovers, have little sympathy with a waddling Juliet and a wheezing Romeo. But nevertheless buried in its musical slag is some of the purest lyric ore, flaming hot from the furnaces of Gounod's inspiration.

Gounod wrote the opera in the fiery years of his manhood, and his enthusiasm over it was reflected in his remarks to that much quoted Viennese critic, Hanslick, "the composing of Romeo took possession of my very soul; in ecstasy and anguish day and night for several years. To this work I owe the happiest hours of my life."

Fighting Gounod's master work for first place among the five great Shakespearean operas are Verdi's "Falstaff" and "Otello."

"Falstaff," written when this marvelous operatic veteran was nearing four score, is, in its structure and conscientious interpretation of Shakespeare's lines, master music that stands unabashed before the thoughts of that super litterateur. Those of you who heard it yesterday remember the Honor monologue, a superb piece of recitative with a characteristic accompaniment in which the clarinets and bassoons fairly talk as they give the sharp negative to the knight's sarcastic questions.

When one considers Verdi's eighty years and then the bubbling spontaneity, delicious merriment, astounding fertility of invention of this last of his thirty operas, one stands mute before the apparently limitless fecundity of this genius.

Fourth in this Shakespearean quintet is Thomas' "Hamlet," a dreary, tedious opera.

Fifth comes "The Merry Wives of Windsor" by Nicolai, who was a Prussian despite his name and Italian style of music.

Another Shakespearean opera of German parentage is Gotz's "Taming of the Shrew," in which Theodore Thomas and his American Opera company sunk a small fortune something over thirty years ago.

"Hamlet" has tempted many composers, including one Caruso born in Naples in 1754. This was Luigi and no ancestor of Enrico's.

"King Lear" seems to have discouraged most musicians.

"Macbeth" has been attempted several times, twice in fact by Verdi, but the finest and most imaginative of Shakespearean operas are yet to be written and produced.

For only with the ultimate development of the music drama (which has no reference to the Wagnerian symphonic poems with mimetic obbligato wherein each and every character devotes all his declamatory outbursts to the telling of the story of his life or else indulging in petty narrative concerning some one's else family skeleton) will music makers find operatic means of giving adequate musical expression to any of Shakespeare's plays. Proof of the paucous grain of truth in that statement lies in the fact that the five operas just mentioned were written after Wagner had unseated the old operatic régime with his healthy iconoclasm and over two hundred years after the master poet's death.

The wily European librettist has turned to the modern theater for his stories in his "Madame Butterfly," "Le Chemineau," "Girl of the Golden West." He has resorted to melodrama, Olympian symbolism, and ransacked the literature of the fourteenth century. He has illustrated musically the pallid passions of Maeterlinck. The American has dwaddled with the Cleopatre thesis and the anecdotes of the noble redskin.

Perhaps when all other sources are exhausted he will discover that for all his literary halo Shakespeare has some interesting and human operatic possibilities.

The music calendar for the week will be found on page 11 of this section.

A HOLIDAY CANARD.

By Guy F. Lee.

The jokesmiths of the holidays
Are deathheads at the feast;
Theirs is a most peculiar phase
Of fun, to say the least;
They've sad consistency—in truth
Their criticism's trash;
They show a sorry taste, forsooth,
By knocking turkey hash.

I am a shark in choicy food,
And that is why I know
That when they hammer chow so good
They do it for the dough.
They never had and cannot get
For marbles, love, or cash,
A dish that will the palate whet
As slick as turkey hash.

You cannot blame the colyum guys,
They've got to do their bit;
While they're not witty, they are wise,
And get away with it.
But I suggest that some fine day
When they desire a splash
Of epicurean splendor they Go tackle turkey hash.

New York Music Letter

By James Whittaker.

JAMES HUNEKER, who started to write about music as soon as there was any such thing, and has never been able to stop, has written a book on the art which went on the market last week. The matter is thinly disguised behind a title—"Painted Veils"—a novel plot with love and intrigue and chapters, and a scandal. Only 1,200 "subscribers" are in on the scandal, for the author safely chose to make his first edition a limited, de luxe, sort of "knock at the family entrance if you know the proprietor" one.

I suppose the scandal centers around one scene, wherein a lady pounds on a gentleman's door and cries: "make me a woman!" That sort of thing shows the perils of becoming too familiar with music without becoming able to compose it.

Writing notes instead of letters, Huneker could have made as many women as he wanted with nothing but a double bar to stop him. But he must write his music in plain prose. There's a lot in music that is startling when prosed. Or, to put it differently, there's a lot in music that has escaped the reformers for not being plain prose. There is not, as yet, a National Board of Censorship for melody.

The scandal about Huneker is tragic. All his life long he has thought professionally in the terms of such rhapsodic stuff as the overture to "Tristan," for instance. Now, quite as professionally, he puts it down in black and white, and the puritans have him spotted. Luckily there are only the 1,200 "subscribers" to make it hot for him, and it may be assumed that several of that number will either approve prose Wagner or keep their mouths shut about having read it.

When you have finished with the scandal concerning the book, you may turn your attention to its content, which is hectic, uneven and brilliant, like cut glass and diamonds displayed impartially in the gas light of a Bowery pawnshop window. The book takes the legend of Istar, daughter of Sin, for its elastic program. If you patronize the symphony societies you may remember that Vincent D'Indy, the pure-minded Frenchman, used the same legend for a symphonic work.

This, as Englished by W. F. Apthorp for Huneker's foreword, is the fable: Toward the immutable land Istar, daughter of Sin, bent her steps; toward the abode of the dead; toward the seven-gated abode where He entered; toward the abode whence there is no return.

At the first gate the warder stripped her; he took the high tiara from her head.

At the second gate the warder stripped her; he took the pendants from her ears.

At the third gate the warder stripped her; he took off the precious stones that adorn her neck.

At the fourth gate the warder stripped her; he took off the jewels that adorned her breast.

At the fifth gate the warder stripped her; he took off the girdle which encompassed her waist.

At the sixth gate the warder stripped her; he took the rings from her feet, the rings from her hands.

At the seventh gate, the warder stripped her; he took off the last veil that covered her body.

Istar, daughter of Sin, went into the immutable land; she took and received the waters of life. She gave the sublime waters and thus, in the presence of all, delivered the son of life, her young lover.

The dance of the seven veils—age-old inspiration of musical composition—as you see—but with a newer twist than Mary Garden gave them when she was young and slender and danced the last moments of Strauss' "Salome," winding the sixth veil about Herod's beaded brow. D'Indy, explaining the inspiration of his Istar variations, spoke of Mary Garden and her Salome. He had seen them on the stage of the opera at Paris. D'Indy is a good man. He writes good music. That is a bit unfortunate for D'Indy—but it explains his Istar. He was offended by carnal Salome. Her veils dropped from her like seven chastities, leaving her unchaste.

Then he found the Istar legend in the original Indian of the Epic of Izdubar and thought of the great refutation of Wilde's seven-fold sin. For the spirt of Istar's disrobing is that seven vanities drop from her wicked body as she goes, and she comes to the end of her course naked and pure.

"La verite toute nue (The naked Truth)" is printed in the fly leaf of Huneker's new book. The same truth inspired D'Indy, who sat down to write seven austere variations, the ingenuity of which is that, contrary to the historic plan of variations by which the older masters tailored their simple themes progressively until they were quite unrecognizably bedecked at the last, the Frenchman's series starts with his theme all wound up in muslin clouds of counterpoint, which are ravelled gradually until he finally comes out at the other side of an Atlantic of sound with his theme, like a bare bone, between his teeth.

Huneker's prose variations on his eternal topic, music, are not austere. They are readably flippant. "A happy singer, like happy nations, has no history," he paraphrases for the initial sentence of one of his seven large chapters and, straightway, makes his singer, the Esther (later Istar, for publicity purposes) Brandes of the book's adventures unhappy. She must have a history. And he gives her one which will be publicly decried and privately envied by several of our prime donne of the day.

For, along with much damaging, Esther has much triumph. And, though she is plebeianly drunk—and presumably made a woman—in one chapter, she is royally vocal—and certainly made a star—in the last.

There will certainly rise up a controversy about what particular one of the present sopranos is delightfully and adoringly libelled by Huneker in "Painted Veils." Several ladies of the opera quarrelled over the heroine of Mrs. Atherton's "Tower of Ivory." Eleanor Duse accepted the insult of D'Annunzio's greatest novel with bowed head, but, perhaps, a compensating thrill and might conceivably be annoyed if the King of Fiume should now come out with a declaration that he didn't mean anybody in particular.

My guess at the concrete identity of the heroine of Huneker's naughty novel is—

But yours will probably be a better one.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MRS. FRANK C LETTS PHOTO BY KOEHNE

Miss Sarah Spencer, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Oliver M. Spencer of 847 North Michigan avenue, was introduced formally to society yesterday at a tea given by her parents at their residence. Miss Spencer is one of the most attractive and popular of the season's debutantes.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman of 712 Rush street is general chairman and Mrs. Frank C. Letts of 1100 Lake Shore drive is vice chairman of the Christmas tree festival and Toyland circus to be given for the poor children of Chicago from tomorrow until Dec. 23 at the Coliseum. Every child in the city will be given the opportunity to see Santa Claus, a brilliantly illuminated and gorgeously decorated tree, and to receive a gift. In addition they will see the circus and menagerie, ride the ponies, and eat candy, peanuts, redhots, pink lemonade and lollypops to their hearts' content. Blocks of tickets are being purchased by individuals and firms for distribution among poor children, and the management is arranging for all children not otherwise provided for. The proceeds will go to the yearly maintenanace of the Red, White, and Blue club, a little club for the children of the streets.

Christmas Festival to Thrill Hearts of Chicago Kiddies

By Mme. X.

SCARCELY are the lights out and the echoes fled of the famous Pageant of the East in the hollow vastness of the Coliseum when a fresh influx of humanity invades it to prepare a spectacle with which to woo the pelf from one section of the public in order to benefit the less fortunate of another.

Quite fittingly the oriental entertainment for the Lying-in hospital is to be followed by a north European festival for the children of the city. Overnight there will sprout in the center of that historic ring a towering sixty foot tree, sprinkled with shining frost. It is the Christmas celebration to which the youth of Chicago is invited to drink at the fount of legend.

No southern mythology has so charming a fable as that of Kris Kringle, driving in a sleigh drawn by reindeer, on Christmas eve, with his pack of toys to deliver, via the gaping chimneys, to the waiting stocking. For the children of Chicago this ever new story will be retold this coming week at the Coliseum.. They will flock there by the thousands to meet old Santa Claus face to face and to feast their eyes on the sixty foot giant of the Michigan woods a-glitter with icicles and laden with gifts.

There also will be for their diversion a circus, a merry-go-round, a Ferris wheel, a crack-the-whip, a novelty called "crazy houses," and the singing band of white Hussars. Best of all, however, will be a real Santa coming out of a real chimney and producing from his pack three real, live dolls. There will be presents of toys, a jingle book for each child.

In short, the aim is to make it a veritable civic Christmas fectival in which all the children of the town, no matter what their walk (or toddle) of life have a share. In order to insure this, 400,000 free tickets have been given away through the public and parochial schools.

Red, White and Blue Club to Benefit.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, chairman of the whole undertaking, says that she receives daily scores of letters from youngsters from Chicago and the surrounding country asking for tickets, and each child who asks gets one. The better off children are asked to pay 25 cents a ticket to defray the costs of the big party and to make something over for the children of the Red, White, and Blue club, for whom Mrs. Coleman is working.

This is an organization which is, in a quiet way, making American history. It is situated at 1001 Currier street, near Milwaukee avenue, a district chiefly distinguished for its well established criminal record. The membership of the club consists of 400 Polish, Russian, and Lithuanian boys and girls, ranging in age from 5 to 18 years.

The club comprises five rooms, in which games, books, and other occupations are provided for the children. Mrs. Sophie Edelstadt and her extremely pretty daughter, Miss Vera, are the guardian angels of the club, and are making out of this none too promising material the men and women who will have a hand in directing the future of this great nation.

That is why I call it a history making institution. There is no more important problem in this country than the healthy assimilation of our immense foreign population.

On Mrs. Coleman's board are the Mmes. Charles B. Pike, Robert G. McGann, Arthur Cable, Kay Wood, Richard Fox, E. S. Beck, Miss Helen Gilbert, with Mrs. F. C. Letts as vice chairman. The enterprise has attracted attention wherever the problem of the foreign born is being handled.

Twelve Knights Call.

'Tis the cordial request of the Butchers and Bakers
And also their friends, the Candle Stick Makers,
That Miss Blank Blank will meet them in Carnival hall
For a summer night dance and a mid-winter ball
On Twelfth Night, Thursday, the sixth of January.

Thus chant the Twelve Knights, mysterious gents who receive their mail at 76 East Monroe street. At their call several hundred cheerful souls [not of the brand of Margot Tennant's souls] have been gathering lo these many years, clad in picturesque attire, to dance, flirt, and sup in the some secret spot, that is, some ballroom whose whereabouts are never revealed until the evening of the party. It is the gayest, most informal of the winter's festivities, a veritable "gambol," if the prime mover will forgive the spineless, makeshift of a pun, and the word be given its Bible significance—"the young lambs gambol to the tabor's sound."

There are so many balls in the offing that it seems probable that the party slippers and dance pumps will wear out long before the season ends. The first Assembly ball next Friday is the most important of the near future, though the Bachelors and Benedicts, Junior Leaguers, and Friends of Opera will all chide me for such an assertion.

The great success of the many and varied social and philanthropic undertakings here is due to the fact that the promoters of each one firmly believe that theirs is the most important affair that ever was designed and put forth. Such faith can move not only mountains, but even a hurrying, self-absorbed, caviling world.

As we stagger along the social highway, off in the distance rise a succession of beckoning figures, Pierrots, Harlequins, and clowns, crying out: "Hurry! Here's more music and dancing and feasting. It's not yet time for rest."

Ruffo Splendid as Tonio.

The opera is nightly attracting larger and more enthusiastic audiences. Last Wednesday's performance of Titto Ruffo in "I Pagliacci" was one of the great dramatic experiences of a fairly experienced attendant on opera and play. One forgot the singer's splendid voice in the still greater splendor of his interpretation of the rôle of that inexpressibly tragic horror, Tonio, the clown.

The opera stars shine more in the social firmament this year than formerly. Mrs. Alexander Smith-Cochran, for instance, whose stage name is, I believe, Ganna Walska, is being much entertained here. Her husband, who arrived last Monday, is also a favorite guest, being already well known to many Chicagoans. He is a typical New Yorker, while his wife fully sustains the reputation of the Polish women of being the most fascinating in the world.

She is to make her debut, not only in Chicago, but on any stage, on Dec. 21, in the title rôle of "Zaza." She and Miss Francis, also of the opera company, were the guests of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman last Sunday.

Prokofieff Speaks Here.

A more than usuallyinteresting personality in the opera world who has been here lately is Serge Prokofieff, the Russian composer. His composition, "The Love of Three Oranges," a riotously rich, fantastic, and lively work, was written by request for the Chicago Opera company a year ago. Maestro Campanini's untimely death interfered with its production at that time, since when it has not been deemed advisable to bring it out. Possibly this is owing to the extreme modernity of the work, which requires advanced technique to do it justice.

Prokofieff is young, a child of the new Russia, though not of bolshevik Russia. In a certain, delightful, peacock blue music room, a veritable shrine of music, the writer had the privilege of hearing the composer give a slight sketch of his abandoned work, describing its story and chanting, in an expressive voice, though one not made for melody, to a piano accompaniment, the strange, passionate, riotous music. The room was rather dimly lit, and the picture, with its mingling of sound, and suggestion, was one to be remembered.

The Friends of Opera are planning a ball, at which the opera stars will be the center of attraction. This is an annual event, and was really started by Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick the first two years of the Chicago Opera company's existence, when they gave two very superb receptions for the artists, inviting all the holders of season seats and boxes. And they all came, they came in droves and herds, they came like flocks of locusts, and left the land behind them stripped of every thing edible and transportable.

The Friends of Opera will not entertain on so lavish and generous a scale, though their ball, which is to be in the Gold ballroom of the Congress hotel on New Year's night, will be a smart affair. Mrs. Coleman, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. John Carpenter, Mrs. Marshall Field III., Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. J. H. Winterbotham, Miss Mary Waller, Joseph T. Ryerson, John Carpenter, and Augustus Peabody are some of those most active in getting up the affair.

Homes for Children.

For originality and enterprise in combining the charitable with the profitable and attractive certain Chicago women are unequaled. Now it is the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society which is going to profit by this local talent. For years the people backing this excellent enterprise—to wit: John Carpenter. Gordon Strong, Julian Mason, A. F. Shiverick, J. H. Winterbotham, Roy McWilliams, with R. J. Bennett, president—have gone out for funds with which to run the undertaking.

The object of the society is to provide homes for the many children who are so unfortunate either not to have any parents or to have parents who are not able to care for them. These homes are found in households where a child can be sure of affectionate care. The child is placed with people who receive him or her for a nominal sum. The society provides this sum and continues its interest in the children so placed, watching over their welfare until they are old and wise enough to fend for themselves.

Up to Nov. 1 of this year 2,376 boys and girls have been aided by this association, at an average cost of $80 a child. The work of the society is divided into two departments—the home and the aid department. The first finds homes for children; to the second come the father with his motherless child, the widow, the unmarried or the deserted mother, each with a problem.

It has not been an easy job to finance the society. Sooner or later men have to come to women to help them in their philanthropic enterprises. In this case the women who have come to the assistance of the men interested are Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Roy McWilliams, Mrs. John Borden, and Mrs. J. H. Winterbotham.

Latest Thing in Shops.

They are preparing to open the latest thing in shops, to be called "Le Petit Bazaar." It is to be on that increasingly fashionable boulevard, North Michigan avenue, under Castberg's blue hung windows. There they propose to sell rare antiques, chic little ornaments, personal and otherwise, and curios and fantasies. With them will be, in an adjoining shop, Mrs. William Vaughan Moody, with her home delicacies, where one can get tea and cakes, as in "chére Paris." One entrance to the bazaar will be by that attractive courtyard which is such an artistic feature in the adjoining building, where artists and ateliers are to be found. The court reminds the wayfarer of the Bargello in Florence. Balconies, stairways, terraces, iron railings, loggias abound. In the building, which is a block of old white stone houses remodeled, are Frederic Grant, Arthur Heun, Alfred Granger, and M. and Mme. de Lanux, all painting or drafting, or writing.

The building ought to be ten times as large to accommodate the Chicago artists needing homes and workshops combined. The coming annihilation of the Tree Studio building, is going to turn out into a cold world a whole colony of painter folk. Among the nearly 100 being evicted are such well known folk as Mrs. Pauline Palmer, Oliver Dennett Grover, Edgar Cameron, Alan St. John, John and Anna Stacey, Wellington J. Reynolds, and Alban Polasek. Some of the homeless ones are going to live in New York because there seems to them no place left in Chicago in which an artist may live and work.

Another Chicago Defect.

This is a distinct loss to this city. It is something which is always happening to Chicago. No sooner do we raise and equip a really gifted artist than he or she goes to New York or some other more inspiring place.

With the largest, most important art school in the country (the Art institute has over 3,000 pupils), we cannot make our town sufficiently attractive and worth while to the finished product. It is a serious defect, and the time is ripe for some well-to-do citizen interested in art and artists to do what Judge Tree did a quarter of a century ago when he built the Tree studios primarily to provide artists with suitable accommodations, the financial returns being a secondary consideration.

The only thing that makes such a powerfully materialistic success as Chicago's anything but an affront to civilization is a correspondingly vigorous artistic development. This we are apt to think we have, but what do we do to encourage it? Do we cherish and make much of our painters, writers, singers, sculptors, poets?

We establish excellent schools, and feel that our responsibility ends there. It is just as if we contented ourselves with starting seeds in a cold frame and then threw them out on the ground to grow as best they may. There is much to be done to complete the work so well begun and so carelessly abandoned.

One step would be to establish a fairly permanent colony of artists in an accessible and attractive neighborhood. Imagine Athens, Rome, Florence, or Paris without artists, poets, musicians! It is unthinkable.

Wild Flower Show This Month.

On Dec. 18 there opens for a month at the Art institute an exhibit of peculiarly piquant interest, because it brings the height of summer into the heart of winter. This is the annual show of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America, to give it its full name. There will be talks on birds and flowers, on insects and weeds, on butterflies and snakes.

The first day there will be bird records on the phonograph, taken from the actual feathered songsters of the forest, how or where or when is not revealed. The feat seems impossible.

There will be cases with interesting exhibits bearing on domestic habits of wild flowers, caterpillars, etc. It's like studying the construction of frost crystals in July or the habits and habitat of the polar bear in August.

Among those women interested in this society are the Mmes. Charles Hutchinson, James Vilas, Edward L. Ryerson, E. E. Ayer, Walter Brewster, Clyde M. Carr, Ralph Clarkson, George W. Eggers, Leverett Thompson, J. J. Glessner, C. H. McCormick, Potter Palmer, and Martin Ryerson, while Mrs. F. C. Farwell is president of the National Wild Flower association.

A special feature of the exhibit will be the children's programs. It is of prime importance to interest the youngsters in the preservation of and love for wild flowers. Some knowledge of the birds, flora, and insect life they come across on their walks in the fields and woods will make those walks so much more interesting to them.

Tonight's Program at the Arts Club.

That energetic and ambitious organization, the Arts club, is continually busy with its varied interests, picture shows, dramatic performances, and musical affairs. Tonight its members are invited to listen to a program of songs presented by Mrs. Jeanne Woolford and Eugene Berton, accompanied by Allan Coe and Herbert E. Hyde.

Tomorrow and Tuesday nights the drama committee offers for the first time on any stage "Mignonette," a play by Martin Flavin.

The members flock in such numbers to everything the club gives that it is necessary to issue tickets to those who ask in the order of their asking until the space is all taken, after which no more are issued.

The coming of any of the college glee clubs is always an occasion for much rejoicing and many festivities on the part of theri alumni and friends. The Harvard Glee club is due here Dec. 27, when it will give a concert at Orchestra hall. Its program seems, to the average observer, to be a more ambitious one than the customary glee club offering. Among the composers whose works will be presented are Bach, Brahms, Palestrina, Handel, Mendelssohn, and Rubinstein.

Already invitations are out for entertainments to do honor to the visiting singers and all the young girls are revamping their wardrobes so as to present a fair and sweet appearance. Youth to youth! What place have their elders in their scheme of things?

WEDDINGS

The marriage is announced of Miss Helen Virginia Le Gros, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Le Gros of 2925 Leland avenue, to Roy Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson of 846 North Central avenue. The wedding took place on Wednesday at the residence of the bride's parents.

MRS. RICHARD FISCHER PHOTO—MOFFETT

Mrs. Richard Fischer is a member of the board of directors of the Frances Juvenile Home association, which is planning to add to the present quarters of the Home at 433 East Forty-second street. The board's annual Christmas party for the children will be held on Christmas eve.

MISS MADGE NORTON PHOTO—KOEHNE

The Sacred Heart alumnæ, B. V. M., will hold a reunion this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Chicago chapter rooms, 165 West Madison street. Miss Madge Norton, recently elected president of the organization, will receive with other officers, and there will be a short program.

Frances Juvenile Home in Need of Larger Quarters

THE board of directors of the Frances Juvenile home, at 433 East Forty-second street, will have a meeting on Wednesday at the home to complete plans for the annual party for the children to be held on Christmas eve.

In addition to their normal duties, the directors are now expending their effort toward devising a plan whereby the present home can be enlarged to meet the increasing need for an institution where children in need of treatment can be given proper care. With the exception of Cook county hospital, the Frances Juvenile home is the only place where unfortunate little ones afflicted with social disease will be admitted. More than 1,000 such children come to the attention of Chicago hospitals and dispensaries every year for treatment.

Medical reports show that in the majority of cases a gross injustice is done the afflicted child by shutting it in with children who have been bedridden for months, when the patient in question is not really ill. Often no medical attention is given, and there is no chance for recreation, study, or work. The consequence is suffering in adult years from the lack of attention when it would have benefited the patient.

For such children a home is needed where they can be watched and carefully treated, at the same time surrounded by a homelike environment with opportunity to play and to continue their schooling during the time required for upbuilding their health.

The Frances Juvenile home was organized in 1909 to meet this need, and is the only institution of its kind in the country. Since its inception it has cared for hundreds of unfortunate children, who are given medical attention by an attending physician and a consulting staff.

While these children are undergoing the necessary medical treatment their studies are not neglected; the board of education supplies a teacher, under whose guidance regular public school courses, modified as circumstances necessitate, are given. Many children who are mentally deficient are given special training.

The home is essentially a charitable institution, regardless of creed. Parents, relatives, or guardians who are able pay in whole or in part for the care of a child; only a small percentage, however, are in a position to pay. Expenses include the salaries of a superintendent, attendants, and nurses, also clothing and food.

At the present time the limited accommodations of the home prohibit the care of more than a few children at a time. There is an urgent need for larger quarters, a nursery for babies, and space for an outdoor playground. Sunshine and fresh air are as necessary as medical attention.

The state department of public health, recognizing the good work being done at the home, has granted a stated sum whereby the services have been secured of a physician of excellent training in the latest methods of diagnosis and treatment. The association has the indorsement of the Chicago Association of Commerce and of the subscription investigating committee, and is a member of the Chicago Children's Benefit league.

The officers are: Mrs. J. P. Dugger, president; Mrs. Anne X. Smith, Mrs. Albert Stein, and Mrs. F. G. Harris, vice presidents; Mrs. M. K. Parker, recording secretary; Mrs. Louis Levy, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. W. R. Dawes, treasurer.

Congregationalists Plan a Special Pilgrim Night

By the Rev. Gardner MacWhorter

CONGREGATIONALISTS of Chicago and vicinity are going to hold their own distinctively "all Congregational" tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims Friday evening at the New First church, beginning at 8 o'clock. Many individual churches have held special services, and a great union meeting was held at the Sunday Evening club in honor of the Pilgrim tercentenary, but this occasion, though a "home folks" celebration, is expected to outdo them all.

THE REV. F. W. GUNSAULUS

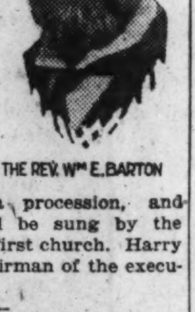
The addresses of the evening will be given by the Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, on "Our Pilgrim Heritage," and the Rev. Dr. William E. Barton, on "Our Pilgrim Vision."

Dr. Barton has written an historical drama or episode for the occasion, entitled "Ye Shall dwell In the Land," and the dramatic presentation will be in charge of Mrs. A. Starr Best of the Drama League of America, whose well known Pilgrim players will furnish the cast.



THE REV. W^M E. BARTON

Scenes from Pilgrim history will be portrayed in costume, the work of the Congregational church in all the world will be reviewed in a procession, and Pilgrim music will be sung by the choirs of the New First church. Harry J. Dunbaugh is chairman of the executive committee.

The third sacred concert of Bethany Evangelical Lutheran church, Thorndale and Magnolia avenues, will be given this evening in the church. The concerts of the last few years under the direction of Ernest H. Schwarz, director of music, and the Rev. Karl G. Schlerf, pastor of the church, have established a reputation for musical excellence. The soloists this evening will be Richard Czerwonky, violinist; James Hamilton, tenor, and Carl J. Weiss, organist. These sacred concerts are held in the interests of pure church music, under the direction of the pastor.

The Choral society of the First Presbyterian church, Forty-first street and Grand boulevard, assisted by members of the Apollo Musical club and of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will render Haydn's "The Creation" at 8:15 Thursday evening in the church, under the direction of Francis S. Moore, with Helen Worswick Ross at the organ and the following soloists: Jane Pickney Fritch, soprano; Marguerite Lauder King, alto; W. Victor Downer, tenor, and Frank H. Collins, bass.

To the Glory of God and in loving memory of Henry Grattan Moore
First Rector of this Parish, 1897 to 1907.
"A Faithful and True Priest, Teacher, and Shepherd."
Born June 28, 1948—Died Nov. 22, 1917.
May he rest in peace.
"He being dead yet speaketh."

A memorial tablet with the above legend was dedicated in Christ church, Winnetka, last Sunday by the present rector, the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard.

The sermon at the service of dedication was preached by the son of the late Father Moore, the Rev. Gerald Grattan Moore, priest in charge of the Church of the Advent, Chicago. A daughter, Miss Kathleen Moore, is the director of the bureau of charities in Evanston.

St. George's Episcopal church, Seventy-first street and Drexel avenue, the Rev. William B. Spofford, priest in charge, formally opened their new guild hall on Thursday evening with a supper served by the woman's guild and addresses by Bishop Griswold, the Rev. E. H. Merriman, secretary of the bishop and council, the Rev. Dr. Hopkins of the Church of the Redeemer, and the Rev. Dr. Roland of St. Bartholomew's church.

The priest in charge of St. George's church announced that an open forum will be inaugurated, beginning with the new year, when religious, social, and economic questions will be discussed following an address by an invited specialist. Mr. Spofford has served as a labor manager for one of the downtown business firms during the last year in order that he might become acquainted with labor conditions and the application of Christian principles in industry.

The Recital hall in the Fine Arts building, 410 South Michigan avenue, has been secured by the Seventeenth Church of Christ, Scientist, as a permanent location for the regular Sunday services and Wednesday evening meetings.

Temple Sholom, at Pine Grove avenue and Grace street, announces the Hon. J. Adam Bede, known as "The Humorist of the House of Representatives," in the second lecture of the lyceum course, to be given Tuesday evening in the temple.

Dr. Samuel McCord Crothers, minister of the First Unitarian church of Cambridge, Mass., an essayist known to all Atlantic Monthly readers, will deliver an address on "The Unfinished Business of the Church" in Kimball hall this evening at 7:45 under the auspices of the Unitarian Laymen's league.

The Case of Lucy Gray—

Lucy was explaining her experience to a group of girls.

"When I was 18 years old," she said seriously, "my father died.

"I had to go to work, but I didn't know what to do. I had just graduated from high school, and I had to have something quick. I simply couldn't afford to spend six months or a year learning shorthand or bookkeeping and I didn't know a thing about business.

"One night mother looked up from her newspaper: 'Lucy, dear,' she said suddenly, 'why don't you take up filing? It seems to me the work should be interesting and I hear the salaries are good.'

"Well, to cut a long story short, I took a course at the Illinois School of Filing. I graduated in 30 days and immediately secured a position paying $20 a week. I shall never forget how proud I was to get that first week's salary—the first money I had ever earned.

"That was a little over a year ago. Since then I have received two raises and today I am in charge of the Filing Department.

"The work is awfully pleasant. Best of all, it is extremely interesting. I meet nice people—I come in contact with the big men in the business.

"And I am just starting. Some day soon I am going to be getting a good bit more than I do now.

"There is a great future for most [illegible] who take up filing. I certainly advise any girl who wants to better [illegible] position to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges, hte principal of the Illinois [illegible] will be glad to talk to you. Write today for the free book."

THE POTTERS

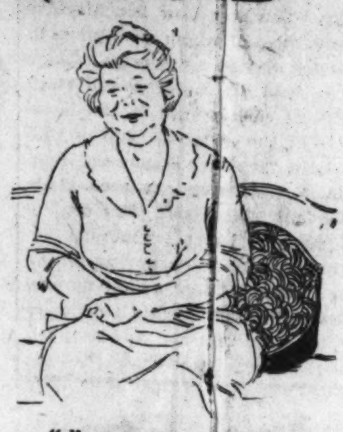
An Intellectual Afternoon

ILLUSTRATED by J. H. STRIEBEL

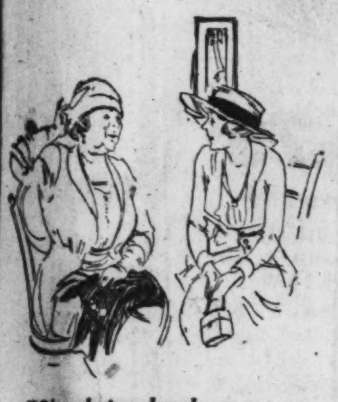
by J. P. McEvoy

SCENE: Mrs. Potter is entertaining The Neighborhood Ladies' Club at her home. The feature is a paper which Mrs. Wilkins is going to read (try to stop her) entitled, "Shakespeare, The Immortal Bard of Avon." The assembled ladies will listen, in a manner of speaking:

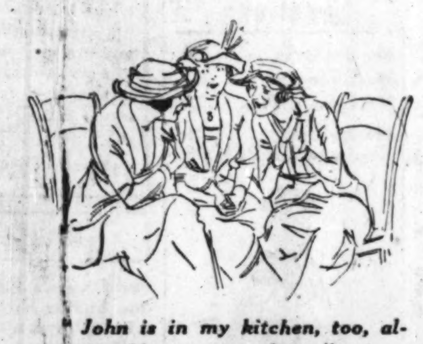
MRS. WILKINS (declaiming):
'Tis little news of Shakespeare's life has found the printed page,
But still we know he married first at eighteen years of age.
1ST LADY (in a loud whisper to neighbor):
Well, I was only seventeen.
2D LADY: Why, just a child! my dear,
You couldn't have known your mind at all,
But girls sometimes are queer;
1ST LADY (sweetly):
They sometimes get that way with age,
I'm sure you've noticed that,
2D LADY (aloud):
I've seen it in my friends, sometimes;
(Internally): (Well, isn't she the cat!)
MRS. WILKINS (touchingly):
A period of years ensued, alas, obscured to view;
In brief: from 1584 to 1592.
3D LADY (loud whisper):
I never could remember dates.
4TH LADY (even louder):
My dear, I'm glad you spoke.
I made John wait three hours for lunch,
Now, isn't that a joke!
3D LADY: My husband never waits for me,
He always hollers "Sue,
You're slower than the wrath of God,"
4TH LADY: Just like my Clarence, too.
MRS. WILKINS (doggedly):
But next in dear ol' Lunnon he greets our eager eyes.
For there he trods the Thespian boards in histrionic guise.
1ST LADY (gloatingly):
I've a jewel of a maid.
CHORUS: Oh, how lucky, my dear!
2D LADY: I've been doing my work
All alone for a year,
But my flat is so small
That I don't mind at all.



"I'm sure, my dears, you're starving for a little bite to eat."



"Oh, what a lovely wave you have. It's so becoming, too."



"John is in my kitchen, too, always cooking up some brew."

4TH LADY: John says if I did all my work
I wouldn't get so fat,
Now, isn't that just like a man!
3D LADY: My dear, they're all like that.
2D LADY: How did you find her?
4TH LADY: What did you spend?
5TH LADY: What do you pay her?
6TH LADY: Has she a friend?
7TH LADY: Wish I could get one, to come by the day.
8TH LADY: She can come when she likes
If she only will stay.
MRS. WILKINS (more doggedly):
Scholars do not all agree that Shakespeare's master hand
Wrote all the plays to him ascribed, nor do they understand
By whom was meant the Lady Dark in all those sonnets sweet.
MRS. POTTER (hospitably):
I'm sure, my dears, you're starving for a little bite to eat.
(To Mrs. Wilkins):
Oh, pardon me, it's my mistake, I thought that you were through.
MRS. WILKINS (plods on):
But if we search them earnestly mayhap we'll find the clew.
2D LADY (rapturously):
Oh, what a lovely wave you have,
It's so becoming, too;
I'd love to know who did it,
Give me the number, do.
3D LADY: A Frenchman runs the place, my dear,
I found it just today.
But I can't recall the street at all
And his name has slipped away.
(Aside to 4th lady):
She wants to know who waves my hair
And where I buy each hat,
And then she follows me around . . .
I hate a copy cat.
4TH LADY: You know you're flattered pink, my dear.
MRS. POTTER (aloud):
Is Mrs. Walter Dobbins here!
You're wanted on the phone, I think.
2D LADY: My husband's learned a brand new drink.
4TH LADY: John is in my kitchen, too,
Always cooking up some brew.
1ST LADY: She said she'd have to have a raise,
5TH LADY: They sure do want the earth these days.
MRS. WILKINS (triumphantly):
"He reigned supreme in plot and theme, in manner and invention,
And so I close. . . ."
ENSEMBLE: (Applause, applause.)
MRS. WILKINS: Thanks for your kind attention.
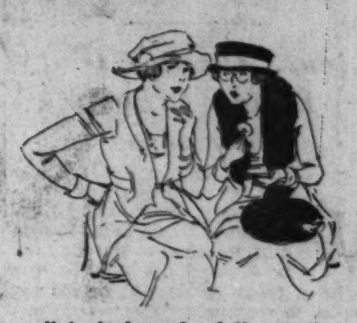
1ST LADY: A lovely paper!
2D LADY: Read so sweet!
3D LADY: The best I ever heard!
4TH LADY: Congratulations!
5TH LADY: Such a treat!
MRS. POTTER: We didn't miss a word!
(Curtain.)



"And then she follows me around. I hate a copy cat."

PIANOS!
Uprights
Grands Players

WE make no glowing statements but we do offer you real bargains at prices lower than you can get any place along the street. Our salesrooms are filled with the best display of good pianos and we have decided to move them even though we have to sacrifice money upon them.

We have listed them at prices which will surprise you when you see the names on the fall boards. Fine old standard makes are represented. All we ask is that you come in and see them. We know that once you see the beautiful cases and hear the fine tone of the pianos we offer at these special prices, you will appreciate what this advertisement means to those who wish to save money.

Penny wise merchants may not be satisfied with a reasonable profit but insist upon adding to original cost all kinds of fancy charges. When they offer a piano to the public it is overloaded with an unreasonable price. We DON'T look at things that way. We are satisfied to make a small profit because we are sure of large turnovers. That view is to your benefit. It makes money for you because you save money if you are shrewd enough to come in and see some real bargains.

Special Offer!

We will allow you to come in and make your choice of any type piano we have on display, and we will deliver it to your home for a 30-day trial. You can put it to any test within reason and you will find it exactly as represented. Then you can start to make payments as low as $1.50 a week. You cannot better this offer anywhere. Come in and see for yourself.

Here Is a Story of an Aviator's Battle for Life

Lieut. Austin's Diary Reads Like a Romance

WHEN Lieut. Austin started out on Oct. 6 to fly from France field, Panama, to Washington, D. C., he knew that he was in for a tough battle, but he did not realize how tough. He nearly met death in a wild sea, but by a remarkable struggle managed to fly his big D. H. back to France field and land.

Lieut. Austin wrote an account of the trip that reads like a fiction story. The most interesting parts of it follow:

"The whole post was out at 6 a. m. to see the take off. It was running beautifully. At 6:25 I took off. R. p. m. 1,600, climb almost a zoom. Throttled to 1,470 at 800 feet and headed to sea. Two other plants, piloted by Lieuts. Blessley and Chandler left with me to go as far as the first Eagle boat. I held the motor temperature at 180 degrees F. throughout the flight—with one exception. Air speed at 1,450—1,470 r. p. m.—95 m. p. h., touching 100 m. p. h. at 1,500 r. p. m. The sea was calm, with a long swell from the northeast. There was a light southwest wind. I set a course 15 degrees, which headed me well into the cloud bank to the north. It was clear to the east.

"At 7:10 Blessley and Chandler pulled up alongside, waved good-by, and put back to the south, where land could still be seen. I continued on the same course. About half a mile to the west of Eagle No. 6 there was a sub chaser under way, north bound. The swell was pitching her considerably, but there seemed to be little wind.

"At 7:25, one hour out, the oil pressure had fallen to normal and I was making 100 miles per hour on a course of 15 degrees. The cloud bank in the north and northwest was coming startlingly close. There was a dim horizon below it, hidden here and there by a squall.

"Shortly before 8 o'clock I passed through the first of these squalls, getting only a few drops of rain. The slant of the falling rain indicated a light northeast wind, and I swung slightly to the east. At 8:02 I passed a yellow stacked freighter, north bound, evidently on way to Kingston.

"The clouds in the northwest had gotten blacker and large squalls appeared ahead. About 8:15 I struck light rain falling from clouds which seemed to be at about 4,000 feet. Immediately afterward I encountered the squalls, which I passed through easily enough.

"At 8:25, two hours out, I was shut in by showers and flying through light rain at an altitude of 500 feet. At 9 I got out of the rain. The storm through which I had just passed, as viewed from the north, looked impassable. Ahead there was still a dim horizon. To the right and left ahead were squalls fifty or sixty miles across. I had failed to se the Eagle boats at stations 2 and 3, but that did not surprise me any, in as much as the visibility had been so very low.

"At about this time I began to entertain the idea of turning back. My best judgment told me that there would be no beter weather ahead, for everything indicated a general storm, probably not violent, but extending all the way to the West Indies. I know that I would not sight another Eagle boat and would have to depend entirely upon my dead reckoning to get me to Jamaica. But, on the other hand, I was perfectly aware of the fact that I would not be allowed to repeat the attempt should I fail this time. It was now or never, and I knew it. So I kept on.

"At 9:25 I was averaging 100 miles through the air. The sea was very rough with white caps on every wave crest.

"My first thought on entering the rain had, of course, been regarding my propeller. Sooner or later I knew I would lose the cloth covering on the tips, but I felt that this would not happen for a long time if I kept out of the heavy rain, and flew fairly well throttled. I kept a close watch on the leading edge of the horizontal stabilizer, believing that the condition of the paint there would be indicative of wear on the prop.

"As the fourth hour drew to a close I was striving to make a final decision on whether I should go ahead or turn back. I was close to 400 miles out of Colon. The wind was increasing and was now blowing about thirty miles per hour from the east. Unless the visibility increased I should have to run square into land before I would see it. Notwithstanding these facts, I had just decided to go on when, with a sound which I shall never forget, my propeller cover let go.

"As stated above, I had had these tips come off before and I was expecting to lose them at any time. But I was not prepared for the results in this case.

"Instantly a terrific vibration started. Fuselage and wings, wires, struts, instruments shook and danced. One compass started to spin like a top. The struts were vibrating about three inches. It did not seem possible for the motor to stay in the plane. I turned and headed south.

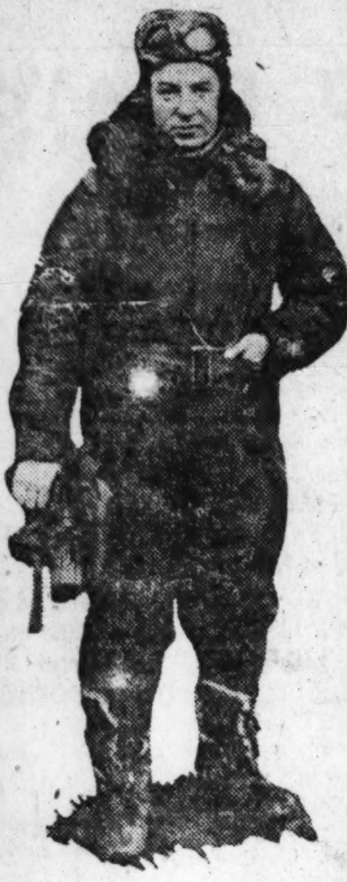
"I was scared. I'm not proud of it, but I might as well admit it. It was the fear of a slow, certain death after hours of fighting in the open sea. There didn't seem any chance of escaping.

"At 3:25, nine hours after the start, I picked up low islands, which proved to be the San Blas islands. I had struck the coastline 120 miles east of France field.

"At 4:12 the motor spluttered. But it couldn't give me a thrill. I had land below me, even if it was jungle covered Anyway it was only tanks No. 1 and No. 3 running dry after seven hours fifty-two minutes.

"At 4:45 I arrived over France field. It was really funny to see everybody pouring out.

"At 4:50 I landed—ten hours and twenty-five minutes in the air. And that motor was ticking them off on all twelve on either distributor—just as it had done in the morning."



As you ride to your office in the warm limousine these cold mornings pity the poor mail flyer who is up with the dawn ready to fly away in the subzero weather. Above you see Russell Jones, crack air mail pilot, as he looked last Friday after his flight from St. Louis. The two pair of sheepskin shoes, the heavy fur lined flying pajamas, the mufflers, and the helmet all help to keep out the cold, but the first thing a pilot does after his trip is to seek out the stove.

Legion Post.

Aviation post No. 651 of tht American legion promises to become one of the leading boosters of flying in Chicago. The post now has fifty-five members, most of whom were pilots in the United States air service. Meetings are held on the first and third Mondays of each month in the headquarters of the Aviation Club of Chicago, in the City Hall Square building. Armand V. E. Smith has been made commandant of the post. The organization plans to boost commercial flying, give its support to having an air section of the national guard, to help to get a municipal landing field close to the heart of Chicago, and to push all American legion activities.

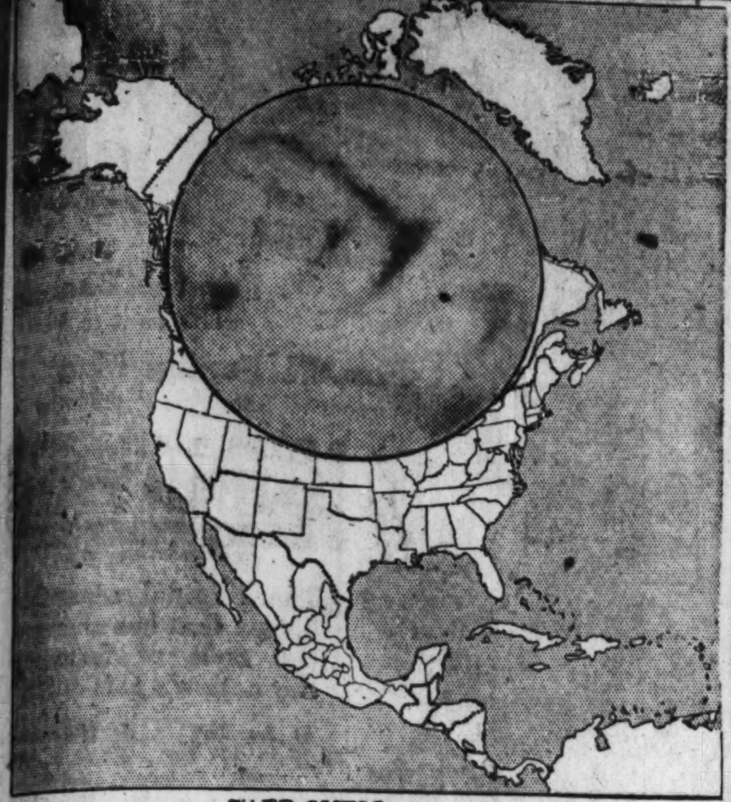
ASTRONOMY



MERCURY
HOW IT WOULD LOOK IF LAID OVER NORTH AMERICA
BY S. F. MAXWELL

Of the eight planets which constitute the major portion of the solar system, little Mercury is the smallest and the closest to the sun. He is 3,000 miles in diameter. Two moons in the solar system, one of Jupiter and one of Saturn, are larger than he. His distance from the sun varies between 35,000,000 and 45,000,000 miles, and he plunges along in his orbit with an average speed of twenty-eight miles a second, completing a Mercurian year every eighty-eight days. He has no moon.

THE FLEETING STAR: Although his surface is quite bright, Mercury is seldom an easy planet to see, for he keeps close to his ruler, and seldom ventures far out of the sunset or sunrise glare. At his brightest he is a ruddy star, about as bright as Betelgeaux, and of almost the same color.

He is a fleet wanderer, and does not remain for any time at all in the same spot. He can be seen best when in the winter sunsets and in the morning sky in the late fall.

The inclination of the ecliptic to the horizon determines whether Mercury can be viewed or not. If the path he is to follow stands high up from the sun, he will be sure to flash brightly out as he comes gleaming along, but if his orbit lies low, the chances are that the mists which always lies along the ground will hide him from our sight.

HIS PHASES: Mercury has phases like the moth. Any object which passes between us and the sun shows a crescent shape. The moon is at its dark, or old, as it is called, when it is placed between us and the sun. The same is true of Mercury, and Venus, too, the other planet lying closer to the sun than we.

There is, however, a difference in the order of the phases. The moon moves from the old to new, then to quarter, to full, and back to last quarter and to old.

Mercury goes from full to first, then back to old, out in the morning side to last quarter, and then to full. He is invisible except in large telescopes when near the full and old and new phases, and shows himself best when he is a fat crescent coming from or just going to the quarter.

A DESERT WORLD: Mercury is a desert planet like the moon. He is almost a thousand miles larger in diameter than our satellite, but, nevertheless, seems to resemble it in being devoid of all atmosphere.

In 1914 he took a path that led him squarely across the disc of the sun. Such an event is rare. Astronomers watching with great interest saw the planet's shape set in sharp silhouette against the flaming background of the sun. His edge was clear and fine, just like the moon's, and seemed to give no evidence, so far as could be told, that there was any gaseous shell at all about his form.

Seen in a telescope, Mercury is a ruddy, moon-like little world. There are dark shadings on his face, as if his land were mountainous and rugged like the moon. Looking through the solar glare, one sees these fleckings standing motionless from day to day.

Mercury does not rotate. The sun has drawn a great tide up in his mass itself, and holding it, prevents him from ever turning over. He always keeps the same face to the sun, just as the moon does to the earth.

Mercury is now in the evening sky, and will be a conspicuous object low in the southwest during the last weeks of December and the first ones of the new year.

G. D. C.—The earth has four principal movements in space. It goes around the sun, turns on its own axis; it and the moon go around each other, and together with the sun and all the other planets, it is plunging through space in the direction of the constellation of Lyra. As a result, the earth's path is a very complicated curve.

* * *

J. G. C.—If the earth were to stop its rotation the equatorial bulge would immediately flatten out, for it is held up by the centrifugal force from turning. This would result in the most violent earthquakes and volcanoes. The waters of the ocean would leave the equatorial regions and flood the poles. But such an event is not at all likely to happen. One of the great things that astronomy has done is to show that the earth has not varied one-thousandth part of a second in its rotations for scores of centuries.

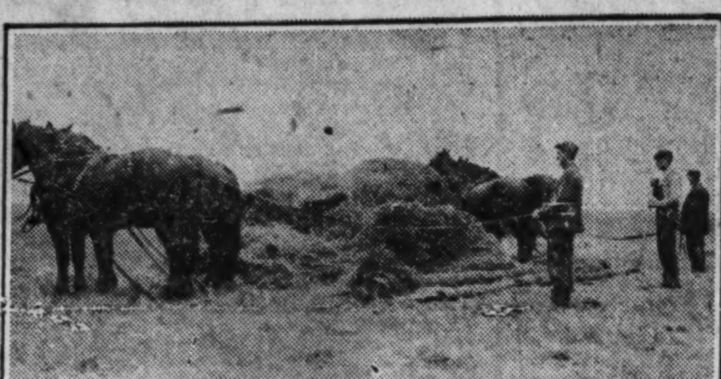
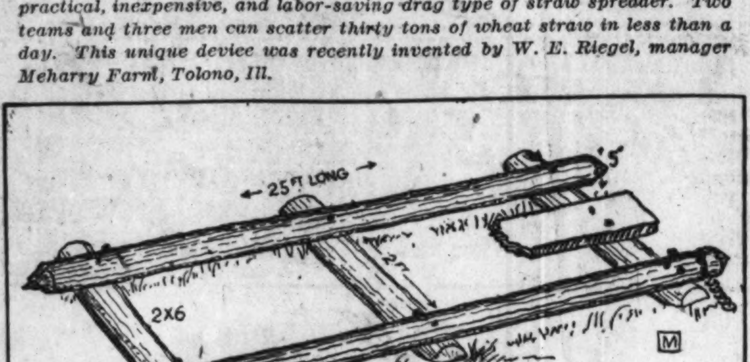
FARM AND GARDEN

Find Simple Device to Scatter Straw Stacks Over Land

By Frank Ridgway.



STRAW SPREADER—No loading and unloading with this simple, practical, inexpensive, and labor-saving drag type of straw spreader. Two teams and three men can scatter thirty tons of wheat straw in less than a day. This unique device was recently invented by W. E. Riegel, manager Meharry Farm, Tolono, Ill.



DRAG TYPE STRAW SPREADER—This spreader can be made by any farmer. The board used between the logs is left out of the drawing to emphasize the simplicity of this device. Note that the 2x6's bolted to the logs are sloped in front like runners.

WISE farmers who appreciate the fertility value of wheat straw, have been endeavoring for several years to find some practical and inexpensive means of getting it back on to the land soon after the grain has been thrashed. All over the state of Illinois straw stacks may be seen standing in the fields—straw stacks both old and new, some so old that they have rotted to the ground—waiting for some man to invent a device that would spread the straw back on to the fields.

Chemists have been working for years to find some way in which wheat straw might be utilized. In Canada the stacks become so thick in the fields that some of the Dominion farmers burn them to get them off the land. When the straw is reduced to smoke and ashes, most of its fertilizer value is lost.

Stacks Stand and Rot.

Farmers in the United States discontinued burning their straw several years ago, but with the serious labor shortage during the last few seasons many of the stacks have remained untouched since the day they were blown from the separator. The grain growers have considered that the market price of straw did not justify the high cost of baling and preparing it for sale. With the scarcity of labor, farmers have been forced to allow their straw stacks to stand and rot in the fields in order that other and more important work could be done.

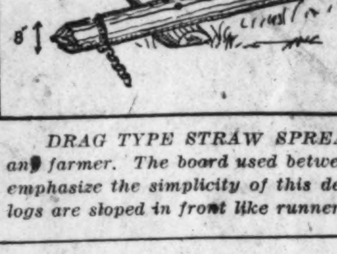
Like many other labor saving devices that have come out of the labor crisis that this country has gone through, a unique, practical, simple, and inexpensive straw spreader has been recently invented that will save thousands of dollars every year to the farmers. It was designed, built, and tested out in a practical way by W. E. Riegel, manager of the C. L. Meharry farm of 800 acres at Tolono, Ill

Straw Spreader Simply Made

It resembles a drag, being made of two logs twenty-five feet long These are connected together by nailing three two by sixes about three feet long flatwise, keeping the logs about two feet apart The front log is eight inches in diameter and the rear one five inches, these sizes being necessary to get the proper weight, preventing the logs from being pulled over the top of the straw.

The two by sixes keep the logs high enough above the ground for the straw to feed underneath, spreading a thin layer on the ground. A board one-foot wide is placed between the logs on top of the cross pieces for a man to stand on. This is also necessary to keep the straw from falling down between the logs and being distributed in bunches.

Three tons of straw can be dragged across the field with this spreader by hitching a team on each end. Two men will be needed to drive the teams and one man with a pitchfork to feed the straw, keeping it going properly in front of the spreader. In order to get the straw into bunches of a convenient size to be handled with the spreader, a tractor is used on the Meharry farm. A three-eighths inch wire cable is thrown around a portion of the stack and connected to the tractor. In this way the straw is dragged out in bunches to be scattered later with the spreader.



STRAW SPREADER LOADED—End view of spreader in operation, showing how the straw is carried under the front log, which leaves a uniform layer on the ground.

Hand Scattering Expensive.

"When we had finished thrashing this fall I rode over the farm and counted eighteen straw stacks," said Mr. Riegel. "I knew that meant an all winter's job to haul all of that straw out to the field on wagons. While we always thrash our grain in the field where it is grown wherever it is possible, because it is much cheaper and easy to get the bundles to the thrashing machines, leaving the straw stacks in the most convenient place to be spread back on the fields, we try to get the straw scattered as soon after thrashing as possible before it has lost any of its fertilizer value. Our time for such work is limited in the fall of the year, when we are rushed with the plowing and corn husking.

"During the last eight years we have tried different ways of scattering our straw in order to keep down the labor cost and lighten the work. For three years of that time we hauled it out and scattered it by hand with pitchforks.

"That method was not only expensive, but unsatisfactory because of the tendency to throw the straw in bunches, making it difficult to plow the ground. After using this laborious method for three years, we tried the end gate straw spreader. This was also expensive, for it took two men seven or eight days to spread a twenty or thirty ton straw stack.

Tried Various Spreaders.

"With the end gate spreader, which cost $60, we still had the hard work of loading and unloading the straw, but we got a more uniform distribution, saving little labor. We tried that for two years. Then we used one of the spreaders that is hitched to the back end of the wagon, and with two hay racks and five men we could move a twenty or thirty ton stack in three days. This was a great improvement over the other spreader, but we still had the tremendous expense of labor in loading and unloading the straw.

"This fall when I stopped to realize the enormous amount of work connected with handling eighteen stacks of straw—loading and unloading—I began to scratch my head trying to figure out some easy way out of it, and the spreader made with the two logs is the result. With this spreader three men and two teams can scatter a twenty to thirty ton stack of straw in less than a day, and they do not have to load and unload the straw.

Works Best on Frozen Ground

This new device can be made by any farmer and can be used on any field where straw is to be scattered. The manager of the Meharry farm says it can be used on almost any kind of land except where the ground is muddy or freshly plowed. On such ground the dirt piles up in front of the logs. It works best on frozen ground. It does effective work on dry wheat stubble or clover sod. In fact, Mr. Riegel says it always works good on the ground where the straw is needed. Effective work can be done with this drag type spreader in covering fall sown wheat with a straw mulch to protect it in cold weather.

"Spreading straw with this device, I find, fits in nicely with a well planned system of cropping," said the originator of the drag type of spreader. "We consider wheat straw worth from $3 to $5 a ton as a fertilizer and to improve the physical condition of our soil. We have a rotation system that we constantly adhere to, using field No. 1, corn with soy beans in the row; field No. 2 soy beans for seed and hay; field No. 3 wheat and clover in the wheat, and field No. 4 clover pasture.

In this way 100 per cent of our cultivable land is in legumes. Even with this system of crop rotation we want all of the straw we produce back on the land, and find the drag type of spreader the easiest, simplest, quickest, and cheapest way of getting it there."

Slams of Life By J. P. McEVOY

THE TENANT'S DREAM.

A landlord died—as landlords should—
And his remains were wrapped in wood,
But not his freed immortal soul,
Which sought its immemorial goal.
And straightway through the starry blue
To heaven's jasper gates it flew
And beat thereon a loud tattoo—
"Halloo, halloo," he cried, "Halloo."

St. Peter through a peep hole peered
And muttered in his ancient beard,
"Who is this pert, impatient chap
That spoils my apostolic nap?"
"It's me," the landlord made reply.
(Of course he should have said "It's I.")
"And who are you?" St. Peter cried.
"I am a landlord who has died
And I would like to come inside."

"Too bad," St. Peter said at that,
"We haven't got a vacant flat.
Besides, we have restrictions here,
And you are one of them, my dear.
Celestial tenants all insist
We keep all landlords off the list."
"But wait," the landlord cried, "you know
I've got to have a place to go."
St. Peter softly said, "Farewell,
I would suggest you go to Hell."

And so to Hell the Landlord slid
And knocked upon the flaming lid,
And out of a hot sulphuric flue
A devil hollered, "Who are you?"
"I am a landlord who has died,
A place in Heaven I'm denied—
I guess I've got to come inside."

"Well, guess again," the devil said,
And shook his hot and horny head.
"You do not understand, I fear,
The housing situation here.
For since your prohibition act
Our alcoholic wards are packed,
And all our warehouse space is jammed
With new unclassified bedamned.
Besides, our tenants would rebel
At letting landlords into Hell.
Go back to earth!" . . . He went pell-mell

But not as landlord, no siree:
A poor old tenant there was he
Condemned in his own flat to dwell—
And how he wished he'd gone to Hell!

What "Upkeep" Means to Your Watch

WHENEVER an intelligent man or woman wishes to buy anything it is a natural desire to purchase the best of its kind.

We all want fine furniture in our homes, fine china, silverware, clothes; we desire a fine automobile or to own a fine watch, or whatever we have set our hearts upon possessing.

We are never really satisfied with a lower standard than we have conceived. When the time comes that we can afford it, we invariably see to it that what we have desired becomes ours.

THIS worthy ambition is particularly true of a watch. When we go to our dealer's to make what should be an eventful, life-time purchase we are not going to jeopardize our investment for the sake of a few dollars. Especially if the difference between that watch at that price and this watch at this price will mean the difference between constant repair bills, uncertain time-keeping and a watch that is faithful in its day-in and year-out dependable service.

So, when we buy a watch, let us remember that it is not always what we see on the outside but the unseen things in the "works" that really count. And common sense tells us that if a watch good enough to challenge the world in the quality of its mechanism and the hidden superiorities of its exclusive inventions, costs more than a watch of so-called similar grade, we should not hesitate which watch is the one for us to own.

THE Waltham Watch is the only watch in the world that has taken the mystery out of the "works" of a watch. But the Waltham Watch has done infinitely more than that, it has proved beyond argument that this American built timepiece excels in advantages to every owner because of the advances in watch-making embraced in its construction.

Some of these inventions and practises are remarkable. But every one of them protects the owner of a Waltham Watch against big repair bills and insures those durable services for which the Waltham Watch is internationally famous.

AND the question of "Upkeep" should always be considered. The first cost of a watch has much to do with its final cost. We would need volumes if we published the record performances of Waltham Watches that have come to us in many thousands of testimonial letters from all over the world. Watches that have kept time for years save for occasional cleaning and oiling and are still faithfully ticking time for their proud owners.

We can truthfully say that no other watch in the world can show to the expert horologist the constructional superiorities contained in the mechanism of a Waltham Watch. They have amazed the foreign watch maker, as his published statements will verify.

WHAT then does the buyer of a Waltham Watch inherit? First, a watch the "works" of which guarantee horological art at its highest development. Second, a standardized watch, every part involving immediate replacement or repair and each unit of co-equal quality. Third, a watch value that is sustained by the oldest and largest institution of its kind. Fourth, the only watch in the world made under one roof. Fifth, a watch that has won the highest honors at the world's greatest Expositions. Sixth, a beautiful watch, and beauty that does not sacrifice time-keeping ability for freakish good looks. Seventh, a watch that will give maximum of service at the minimum of upkeep cost.

Last but not least, a watch that will outlive you. There are thousands upon thousands of Waltham Watches still serving the children and grandchildren of the parents, who, a long time ago, went to their dealer and came away with what the years proved to be one of the best investments of life—a Waltham.

Russian Portrays His Countryman's Traditional Traits

By Eleanor Jewett.

OUT of Russia have come many tales of bitterness, ruin, and desolation. It is a country born to weeping. Through the centuries it has been a land where terror has stalked with its fell complement of scourge and fire, bloodshed and plague.

Yet always a halo of almost romantic childishness has been about its people in the eyes of the outside world. Russian writers and painters have done little to lighten this impression of a gray mist through which their countrymen move darkly. The tradition of the pathetic child has become, to all intents and purposes, a fact. One forgives, automatically, a Russian for never growing up. One forgives him, often, on the ground that he has never grown up.

The reasonableness of the illusion is, of course, negligible. Nevertheless it remains. It stands back of the Russian novel, and it sets off the Russian painting. It clings like an aroma to the bearded Cossack and the philosophic Tolstoy alike. It haunts the courts of the bolsheviki as it haunted the throne room of the czars. It is found at the Arts club today in the exhibit of drawings by Ilya Ryepin, one of the most famous of contemporary Russian artists.

The drawings are portraits of men and women who have been, or who are, of note in Russia today. They are people of nearly all professions and practices of life. One of the most interesting is the portrait of N. A. Morosov, a celebrated poet, astronomer, scientist, and revolutionist, who made all his discoveries in chemistry and astronomy while in solitary confinement [twenty-nine years] in the Schlusselburg fortress near Petrograd.

The drawing of E. T. Chirikov has a truly Russian inscription on it. Chirikov is one of the best playwrights and novelists in Russia. The inscription reads: "One must spare his tears, otherwise there will not be enough of them if we spent them on every occasion of sorrow." In Russia that is true. It is a land of tears.

The sentence written on the drawing of Starsov, a lawyer and a friend of Tolstoy, by Starsov himself, runs: "Drawn from me in a parrot's cage in a black Russian month and a red Ryepin day, July 27, 1906." It was one of those months in the history of Russia when the czar's Cossacks shed most blood, and when the famine in Russia was great. The wording of the inscription is rich with that touch of mysticism which is unadulterated Russianism.

The portraits seem to have been made a number of years ago, if one may judge from the cut of the dress worn by the sitters. Particularly should one judge this the case with the women's portraits. There are several of these. For the most part the women are rather beautiful, decidedly practical, and more or less stern. They offer on these points a great contrast to the men, who appear in the guise of dreamers and thinkers.

That Russian trait of unworldly childishness shows in the turn of the masculine brow, the expression about the eyes, and the cut of the chin. It is something pliable, impractical, not weak, but equally not strong. It makes you feel any Russian man might be a fanatic; the women are of more certain quantity.

The best paintings of Ryepin hang in the famous Tryetiavov gallery in Moscow, including his masterpiece "The Murder of his son Alexis by John the Terrible." A man was once so impressed with this picture that, in an attack of nervous delirium, he attempted to destroy it with a knife. It was restored later in such a way that the damage done it is unnoticeable.

The drawings are loaned to the Arts club by the Countess Ridderstad of Stockholm, who has suffered herself from the brutalities of bolshevik rule in Russia. To put it graphically, her teeth were knocked out by the butt of a gun by some courteous Red on a not unrecent visit to that country of unrest.

Interest is divided at the Arts club between the drawings of Ryepin and a group of water colors by Foujita, a young Japanese artist now painting in Paris. These last are not so much unusual as reminiscent of the old Italian masters, such as Giotto and Cimabue, or even Masaccio. The pictures seem based on a lavish use of gold leaf and warm colors.

The figures appear indiscriminately draped and nude. In "Adam et Eve" the garden of paradise is presented fully populated with beasts and birds of all descriptions, while the man and woman are perched on a high bank beneath a green boughed tree. The apple, undoubtedly, has not as yet intruded upon their innocence.

In "La Balancoire" a band of maidens is flung against a deep blue sky astride a plank on which they teeter with splendid abandon, considering the fact that no land is anywhere in sight.

Perhaps the most spirited of these sketches is seen in the "Danse Orientale," where three young girls give themselves to the joy of rhythmic movement. The watercolor "Crysanthèmes" is the single modern note struck. In face, figure, hair, hands the women who control the motifs of the other pictures are all sister to the early Madonna type.

The exhibition will close Dec. 15.

The Palette and Chisel club is enjoying one of the most popular exhibitions is has ever had. As I explained some time ago, the paintings are entered by the members of the club and are not priced. One may bid whatever one wishes to on whichever picture one wishes. About $1,500 already has been received in bids. Several pictures have had two or more bids placed on them.

At the close of the exhibition the paintings will go to their respective highest bidders. The money is to be used by the club to enlarge its quarters and to give Chicago in this way a practical artistic center in the business section of the city.

One of the most beautiful paintings in the exhibit is of flowers, by Sigurd Schou. Some Spanish scenes by Arthur Rider are excellent. Tomanek, who will be remembered as a student at the Art institute, where he won a year ago an important prize, is represented by an exquisite pastoral group. Among the other painters are Torey Ross, with a delightful child head, James Topping, Edward Holslag, Theo Bear, C. H. Cooke, William Wier, Glen C. Sheffer, Peter Nielson, and L. O. Griffith. This exhibition will close the night of Dec. 18.

"The Drama of the Nativity and the Massacre of the Innocents," given last December under the auspices of the design department of the Art institute school, will be produced again in Fullerton hall this year. It is to be given four times. It will be seen next Friday night, Saturday afternoon, Sunday night, and Monday night, the 20th.

The book by Cloyd Head will be the original text with slight revision, and there will be some alterations in the costuming and scenery by Hermann Rosse. The musical accompaniment, composed and arranged by Eric Delamarter, is to be rendered under his direction by members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Tickets are $2.50 and are on sale at the Art institute front door.

The Edward B. Butler prize of $100 was awarded by popular vote to "Torn Lingerie," by Frieseke. A total of 1,217 ballots were cast. The majority vote was small, amounting to only 76 votes—which seems to show that the visitors to the American Oils exhibition at the Art institute possess their own individual opinions and are of catholic taste.

The NASH SIX SEDAN has greater value than cars which cost from $300 to $600 more

It is only the Nash manufacturing ability and the great Nash resources in factory, money and men which enable us to offer a car of the quality of the seven-passenger Nash Six Sedan at its price of $2895 f. o. b. Kenosha, with cord tires.

Compare it with other Sedans, even those selling from $300 to $600 higher in price. You will know why Nash owners agree that there is no closed car at its price approximating it in quality.

The Perfected Valve-in-Head Motor of the Nash Six Sedan makes it unusually powerful. It has the same quick acceleration and "life" as the open car.

And it is especially beautiful, designed and constructed in accordance with highest quality standards, more roomy than the ordinary and exceptionally easy riding.

MOTORDOM

Highway Building a National Issue in Year to Come

Illinois Officials Make Figures Combat Criticism

BY J. L. JENKINS.

EIGHT million motor vehicles—motive power sufficient to move the combined populations of Chicago and New York across the continent in a single trip—demand recognition as one of the most important factors in the national economic budget for 1921.

They have leaped to the forefront in the list of Uncle Sam's pressing affairs through a development unequaled in the history of transportation. They are no longer even considered in the luxury class and, having graduated from that class, they form a combine powerful enough to require nation-wide action on the one underdeveloped essential to their utilization—good roads.

A few figures, culled from statistics just issued by governmental and industrial authorities, help illustrate what the new national administration and state governments will have to consider this year in formulating highway programs: It is estimated that 20,000,000 people have been added to the country's population in recent years without corresponding additions to transportation facilities and that the increased highway tonnage due to frenzied buying in 1920 doubled that transportation burden, breaking down hundreds of existing highways because the growth of traffic had not been taken fully into account.

Cities and city pavements no longer take the lion's share of new motor car production. Approximately 3,000,000 passenger cars are now owned by farmers and farms employ more than 150,000 motor trucks. In 1919 farmers were the largest users of trucks. They owned 10 per cent more than did manufacturers and 15 per cent more than did retailers. This year's collection of license fees in Illinois shows that the trend of motor car increase is toward the small city and the rural district where there are few paved streets to operate on.

It is declared that intelligent improvement and maintenance of highways, if practiced nationally, would save enough in actual transportation costs to pay off the nation's war debt in the life of the present generation. Paved roads save 1½ cents per mile in gasoline, tires and wear on passenger cars and 17 cents per ton mile in the operation of trucks. Motor trucks moved well over a billion tons of freight during the year and hundreds of long distance motor transport fleets were organized desipte the general highway failure. But two states, California and New York, have developed what may be considered adequate highway systems.

Through the building of 325 miles of hard surface roads during 1920, Illinois has succeeded in lifting itself a trifle above the national rut, despite the criticism launched against the state highway department because of its refusal to go ahead with the $60,000,000 bond issue program.

As an answer to critics the department presents the following facts: Concentration on the construction of the federal aid highway system this year has made it possible to close all but 200 miles in the 850 miles of continuous pavement radiating from Chicago across the state to the south, southwest and the west and connecting the system between Marshall and East St. Louis. No more miles of road could have been built during the year, no matter how many additional contracts had been let, because railroads could not transport sufficient materials and contractors could not secure sufficient labor. It is better to complete one mile of paving where conditions make the work possible than to contract for fifty miles at unreasonable prices where it is obvious that the work cannot be finished. Of the 6,500,000 people in the state, 4,000,000 live along and are directly benefited by these connected federal aid roads and 75 per cent of the central manufacturing cities are along the highway.

Instead of building 1,800 miles of road as originally planned for the year, the state found it impossible to complete even the 400 miles of contracts left over from 1919 and the 50 miles of new contracts awarded, although every pound of building material that could be secured was used.

Simple Home Brew Advised for Cold Weather Driving

THERE are two popular and easily obtained anti-freezing substances which when used in proper proportions will prevent the radiator contents from suffering damage during cold weather, according to Ernest Coler in the current issue of Motor Life. The first of these is calcium chloride, the other alcohol.

Calcium chloride comes in the form of a salt, and is sold under its own name as well as under various proprietary names which usually indicate its freeze-proofing quality. When purchased in the open market calcium chloride is cheapest as well as most uncertain; it should be tested carefully, since it frequently contains impurities and free acids which attack aluminum as well as the metal and solder of radiators. Blue litmus paper, when moistened with a calcium chloride solution containing acids will turn pink. The salt may be neutralized by the addition of soda ash or ammonia until the litmus paper no longer turns pink.

The amount of calcium chloride to be used in the cooling system depends on the temperatures likely to be encountered and the capacity of the radiator. Two pounds of calcium chloride added to eaech gallon of water will keep the mixture from free freezing at temperatures not lower than 19 degrees Fahrenheit. Three pounds per gallon will withstand a temperature as low as two anad a half degrees Fahrenheit. Four pounds of calcium chloride in each gallon of water will not freeze at sixteen degrees below zero. Five pounds of the salt per gallong of water is required if the temperature is apt to be as low as thirty-eight degrees below zero.

The calcium chloride should be dissolved in hot water, and care should be exercised that none of the mixture is spilled over the radiator or other parts on which it is apt to leave a somewhat unsightly white deposit.

Whatever is lost of the mixture by evaporation should be replenished from a saturated solution of calcium chloride in water. Such saturated solution is made up by adding the salt to hot water until the liquid refuses to dissolve more of the salt and a layer of undissolved calcium chloride remains at the bottom of the container.

A point of great importance is to clean the radiator thoroughly before rendering it freeze-proof with calcium chloride solution. This cleaning is perhaps most competently done by one of the radiator cleaning compounds sold by dealers. The cleaning itself serves a twofold purpose. It frees the radiator from accumulated rust, scale, and dirt, and incidentally is apt to open tiny leaks which previous to the cleaning were kept closed by dirt. If the cleaning were neglected the calcium chloride solution would open these small leaks in short order, the solution, leaking out, would render the spot unsightly, and a certain chemical action would be set up at the mixture's exit. All this is avoided, however, if the radiator is cleaned out and all leaks are repaired before the cooling system is filled with anti-freezing solution.

Denatured alcohol, enjoys well-deserved popularity with motorists who during cold weather render their radiators and engine jackets immune to damage by adding alcohol to the water. The advantages of alcohol are that it does not have any destructive action on rubber connections or on metal, that it will not form deposits of foreign matter and produces no electrolytic effects. The drawbacks of alcohol—if they may be called such—are, that it is somewhat expensive, and that it boils at lower temperatures than water and must therefore be replenished from time to time.

Central Illinois Prepares to Open Great Paved Road

MOTOR clans of central Illinois are preparing to dynamite the mud lid from winter highway travel on Dec. 21 in a monster good roads celebration to be held in Mason City, the midway point between Peoria and Springfield on the Chicago-St. Louis transstate highway.

More than 1,000 car loads of appreciative motorists, including fleets from chambers of commerce and automobile associations of Springfield and Peoria and representatives from the towns of Athens, Petersburg, Greenview, Havana, San Jose, Delavan, Greenvalley, and Chatham, are expected to converge on the central rendezvous at noon. With national and state officials and Chicago and St. Louis highway boosters, they will officially open the 120 miles of continuous concrete roadway which state forces have now completed between Chatham, on the south of Springfield, and Chillicothe, on the north of Peoria.

The celebration will mark the opening of the longest connected stretch of paved highway constructed by any state in 1920 and the longest stretch of continuous pavement to be found at present in the Illinois federal aid system. Other short divisions of the highway, which begins with Ogden avenue in Chicago and ends at Eades bridge in East St. Louis, have already been opened.

Features of the coming celebration include short addresses by Gov. Frank O. Lowden, Gov. Elect Small, Mayor Woodruff of Peoria, Mayor Baumann of Springfield, and highway department officials.

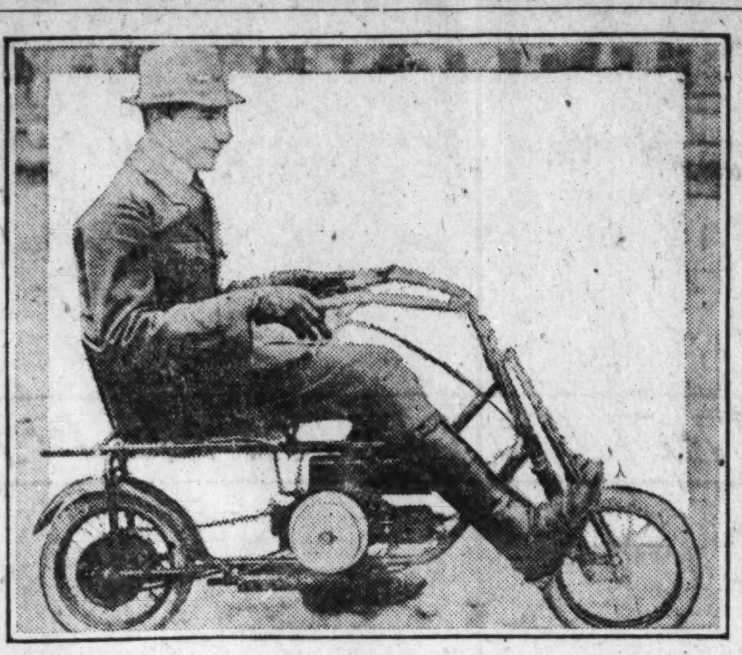
Lower Gasoline Prices Seen in Oil Development

Cut in Nine States Paves Way for Winter Readjustment

BY HIGH SPEED.

Are gasoline prices coming down? What is the position of this major necessity in the "march to normalcy" of practically every item that will affect the motorist's check book in 1921?

Volumes have been written about "gas" in the last year. Alarmists have seen the supply exhausted month by month. Optimists have pointed out inexhaustible supplies. Prices have climbed steadily and the trade generally has assured the motor world that they might continue to climb. Here is a layman's report on what he could find out about the status, present and future, of the nation's speed liquid.



VEST POCKET EDITION.—This thirty-two pound motorcycle has made its debut in Switzerland, where it is proving most popular because of its light weight and low cost. The tiny machine goes anywhere, and there's never any trouble about parking. Any convenient hallway, wall or space behind the bed in the apartment will serve as its garage.

GASOLINE prices are due for a slight drop in Illinois and a bigger drop in other sections of the country early in 1921. But, unless industrial, governmental, and trade authorities have miscalculated seriously, their line of reduction can never keep pace with the deflation in values of practically every commodity on the market today.

In the first place, gasoline is too new an essential and too uncertain a quantity to have acquired a "line of normalcy" as regards production, demand, and price stabilization. In a few short years it has jumped from the class of adjunct to the oil stove and cleaning establishment to that of international transportation agent, and its price, according to students of the situation, hinges largely on the development of its production. It is generally agreed that its cost of production and distribution should not advance perceptibly from now on, and that, in consequence, its retail price has climbed about as high as it is going to. Decreased demand this winter is given as the basis for its early drop.

Gasoline prices have already been cut in nine states within the last two months, and the price has dropped off 5 cents a gallon at the refineries in three months, according to Chicago authorities. This reduction has not been reflected noticeably in retail prices, dealers say, because much of the present stocks were purchased at the old prices and distributors refuse to take a loss. A recent review shows that the price of fuel and gas oil has dropped in New York and the east; that crude oil has dropped from $4.25 to $4 a barrel in Kentucky, and that several refiners have already felt the pinch of the general business readjustment and have closed down their plants; also that there is an ample supply on hand. There has been considerable talk of real price cutting throughout the oil trade, but some leaders have advised against it, fearing that such a step would halt the necessary development of the industry.

Official figures issued by the United States bureau of mines, American Petroleum institute, and Standard Oil company show that the production of oil in 1920 will break all records, and that continued increase in production through 1921 and 1922 should materially lower price levels. This year's domestic production is placed at 450,000,000 barrels of oil. United States imports from Mexico will reach 125,000,000 barrels, a total yield of 575,000,000 barrels from North American fields. The bureau declares that 300,000,000 gallons of gasoline can be saved annually by reducing evaporation of fuel in its delivery to refineries. The Standard Oil Company of New York has contracted for 150,000,000 barrels of gasoline from Mexico in 1921, one of the largest contracts recorded.

Contrary to predictions of underproduction, this year's totals show a gain of 19 per cent in United States fields alone. Three times as much oil came out of Mexico in 1920 as in 1919. Added to the possibilities of North American fields are those in South America, Egypt, and the East Indies. Russia is expected to be a mammoth source of oil in the future.

Gasoline prices in Illinois at present, as they have been throughout the touring season, are lower than those charged in any other state market, with the exception of Missouri. The retail price is quoted at 29 cents, with the filling station price 27 cents. In Denver gasoline is selling at 32 cents, in New York at 31 cents, in Philadelphia at 30 cents and in St. Louis at 24 cents. A comparison of prices in four years shows: Chicago, high point for 1920, 27 cents; 23 cents in 1919; 21 cents in 1918, and 19 cents in 1917. Denver, high point, 32 cents; 23 cents in 1919; 24 cents in 1918; 23 cents in 1917. New York, high, 31 cents; 24 cents in 1919; 23 cents in 1918, and 21 cents in 1917.

The comparison shows that the Chicago motorist has something to be thankful for, after all. Dealers interpret it to mean that Chicago prices cannot be expected to fall off as much as may be expected in other sections of the country; but students agree that the flexibility of the oil industry in meeting increased demands is sufficient to allow motorists to expect ample supplies of gasoline at lower prices in the future.

Traffic Cops a La Mode.

The police at a fashionable summer resort in Massachusetts have unearthed a unique method of smuggling illegal liquor to the consumer.

Traffic cop manikins six inches tall, with one arm extended to direct traffic, were sold as souvenirs. Each copper had a cork under his raised arm, and when this was removed the purchaser inhaled two drinks.

However, the revenue officers' efficiency has removed one booth of souvenirs into oblivion.—Motor Life.

The Leland-built Lincoln Sedan

One of the most popular of closed car types finds unordinary expression in the Leland-built Lincoln Sedan.

It not merely affords the weather protection expected of its type, but there are incorporated many new and appealing features which make for consummate utility and convenience.

The seating accommodations, all in one compartment, provide roomily for five adults, and there are two auxiliary seats which, when not in service, fold compactly into the back of the front seat.

The four doors facilitate easy entrance and egress for all passengers.

The windows are fine quality plate glass, snugly fitting in felt lined retainers. The side windows are adjustable; those in the doors may be lowered flush with the sills and are operated with utmost ease by improved regulators which hold them securely and quietly in all positions.

The upholstery, trimming, finish and appointments present an environment of rare attractiveness, and a bearing of tasteful elegance characterizes the car in its entirety.

Mounted on the Leland-built Lincoln chassis of superlative roading action, this Sedan brings into being a closed car conducive to an exceptional measure of ease and comfort in negotiating the highways as you find them.

A close-up of the ELMCO installation. Note the three terminals which enable you to regulate the intensity of the heat.

No more of this stuff.

"Come On With Your Cold Snap—Who Cares—I've Got an ELMCO HEATER on My Ford"

No more cracked cylinders; no more busted radiators; no more hard starting, spitting or bucking; no more engine racing.

An Elmco Thermo-Syphon Heater on your Ford makes you laugh at winter and a cold garage. No greater convenience for a Ford was ever devised. No man or woman who drives a Ford should do without an Elmco heater. It has a heating plant in your garage backed off the boards.

If you have a heating plant in your garage you will make money by shutting it off and putting an Elmco on your Ford. If you have no heat in your garage you should investigate Elmco at once.

The reputable accessory dealer right here in Chicago will put an Elmco on your Ford TODAY.

—or you can put it on yourself.

A screw driver, a pair of pliers—AND TEN MINUTES will do the job.

Your Ford is a fine piece of machinery. If you let its engine chill and freeze at night the next morning you will have to "warm her up" before you can get proper carburetion—that means racing her unmercifully.

An expert, who knows all about Ford cars, says: "Most of the serious abuse heaped on Ford cars comes from racing the motor on cold mornings. This beats up the bearings and wears out the working parts more than all the usage the car gets during the day."

* * * *

The engine in every Ford car should be kept warm during the night. Another reason why Ford cars should not be subjected to intense cold is this: When you try to start a cold motor you shoot RAW GAS into the manifold—this raw gas, being in liquid form, runs down past the pistons into the crank case and thins your oil. No Ford engine that is allowed to get extremely cold during the night can possibly be properly lubricated. Some kind of heat applied to the Ford engine during winter weather will greatly prolong its life—meanwhile it will make that engine of yours give far sweeter service.

The Elmco Electric Heater weighs practically nothing. It merely takes the place of the tube running from the bottom of your radiator up to your water jacket—no boring or fitting—ABSOLUTELY no work to install it.

* * * *

The Elmco Electric Heater is safe—it cannot set fire to anything. IT DOES NOT INCREASE YOUR INSURANCE.

* * * *

The principle on which it operates is simple—from the above illustration you can get the whole idea in an instant. Current from the electric socket in your garage heats the water at the bottom of your radiator—the Ford's own thermo-syphon system does the rest. For one year this device has been tested—it does the business POSITIVELY and without fail.

* * * *

* * * *

One of the best electrical engineers in America designed it. With every Elmco goes an iron-clad, money-back guarantee—try an Elmco for ten days and if it does not please you PERFECTLY, bring it back and your money will be instantly refunded—NO QUESTIONS ASKED. You do not have to even say WHY you do not like it.

* * * *

The Company behind the Elmco is STRONG. Investigate us through Dun's, Bradstreet, or your own bank. What we promise we DO.

People outside Chicago who want the Elmco and who can't get it from their dealers will be taken care of promptly BY MAIL. We will send it to you with simple, clearly-understood instructions for installing. A twelve-year-old boy can put it on in ten minutes with a screw driver and a pair of pliers. After you get the Elmco on your Ford, give it a ten-day trial, and if it isn't all that we claim for it, fire it back to us and we will immediately return your twelve dollars and a half—no questions asked, no arguing or haggling. This device does the business—if it doesn't, WE MAKE GOOD. The makers of this device are RESPONSIBLE. When ordering USE THE COUPON—it will save your time and ours.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY LANDS.
Your last opportunity. In Central Alberta and Saskatchewan are rich park lands—open prairie ready for the plow, interspersed with trees, which afford excellent shelter for stock. Here grain growing, dairying, and live stock raising are being carried on successfully. The country is ideal for mixed farming. The Canadian Pacific Railway is offering a large area of these fertile lands in Lloydfinster and Battleford districts. This fertile land will become the home of thousands of prosperous farmers. On similar land Seager Wheeler grows world's prize wheat. Near Lloydminster the world's prize oats have been grown, and butter of the highest quality is made. A man can soon become independent on a farm in this district. These lands can be bought now at an average of about $18 per acre. You pay down 10%, no further payment of principal until end of fourth year, then sixteen annual payments. Interest is 6%. M. E. Capital of the state.

Fertile lands adapted to cotton, cane, rice, corn, etc., and especially adapted to dairying, trucking, and stock raising.

Our firm either owns or controls many thousand acres in tracts of 20 to 2,500 acres, much of which is well improved land. Prices range from $10 to $100 per acre, representing, we believe, the best farm land values in the United States. The following is an example of the bargains we have:

320 acres ten miles from Baton Rouge, nearly half of which is already graveled, balance being finest kind of sandy loam; dirt road over slightly undulating land, easily traveled by auto the year through. 300 acres open, balance susceptible of cultivation. Good fences and cross-fences. Old plantation home, in fair condition; new five room bungalow, two tenant houses, small barns, two modern chicken houses, etc. School van passes front to consolidated high school; on r. f. d. route daily mail. Very fine fertile land that will grow cotton, cane, corn, oats, lespedeza, truck, etc., in big yields. Ideal for stock farm. Fine drainage. Pure soft artesian water obtainable at 300 feet.

Price $50 per acre, one-third cash, balance two, three, and four years, 6½ per cent interest. Would bring $200 to $400 per acre, no better land, if located in central western states.

Owing to the stringent money market we are now offering many improved farms of 40 to 100 acres and several plantations at ridiculously low prices. This condition cannot last long, and the man with money can make big profits by acting now.

Be sure to state definitely in what you are interested. Write any bank in Baton Rouge for reference as to reputation or financial standing.

Way to Oust Management Needed.

Some way ought to be provided for the small stockholders of a utility or other corporation to oust a management which is exploiting the company for the benefit of officials or their friends. Suppose thousands of small stockholders of a company are convinced that its directors and officers own stock in subsidiary companies which do business with the big corporation and that these several parasite companies are making more than moderate profits.

In effect, such officers are grafters on a large scale. Their operations may be carried on legally under the advice of high priced attorneys whose fees come from the same graft. They are therefore immune from criminal prosecution. What can the stockholders do about it?

At present they can do nothing unless a disagreement arises in the management. When two factions begin to battle for control of a corporation the small stockholders may have the deciding voice, on the principle that when thieves fall out honest men get their dues. However, such disagreements are usually settled in private and the small investor is left without a remedy.

Would it not solve the problem if utility commissions were authorized to receive the proxies of stockholders and vote them at the annual meetings? Then any stockholder who had reason to doubt the ability or integrity of the management could make himself heard, and if any great number of stockholders became dissatisfied, the management could be turned out of office.

Brief Answers.

L. S., Charles City, Ia.: The American Ship and Commerce company is unseasoned and has made public only incomplete information. The principal cause of its decline in the market probably is the dullness of ocean freights.

L. C. M.: The London Guarantee and Accident company has been operating fifty years. Its United States branch has a statutory deposit of $500,000 and a surplus of $751,658 in addition.

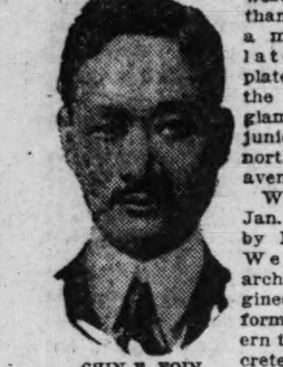
GORGEOUS CAFE PLANNED FOR JUNIOR LOOP

Mandarin Gardens to Cost Over $250,000.

BY AL CHASE.



CHIN F. FOIN.
[Moffett Photo.]

One of the most luxurious and best equipped restaurants in the middle west, to cost more than a quarter of a million, is the latest contemplated addition to the gayety and glamour of our junior loop to the north—the Wilson avenue district.

Work will start Jan. 1, from plans by Minchin & Weller, Inc., architects and engineers, in transforming the modern two story concrete structure at 931-33 Wilson avenue, just west of Sheridan road and across from the Sheridan Plaza, now occupied by the owner, the Louis Geyler company, as a motor salesroom, into a gorgeous café. It will be called Mandarin Gardens.

Chin F. Foin, president and treasurer of the Mandarin inn, in South Wabash avenue, has leased the property for twenty-five years from Jan. 1 at a term rental of $600,000, and will operate the new restaurant solely as a high class American café, with entertainment and public dancing. It will be finished about April 1.

Glass Dancing Floor.

The building is 100x200, and, with the exception of space for a shop on each side of the main entrance, all the space will be used by the café. A splashing fountain will greet visitors as they enter the lobby. There will be a stage at the south end, with a glass floor in front of it for exhibition dances with colored lights.

There will be one of the largest dancing spaces for guests of any café in the city; also a mezzanine floor with two private banquet rooms and tables. The restaurant will accommodate 1,200 guests at one time.

Mr. Foin came to America from Canton, China, thirty years ago, when he was 13 years old. For twenty years he has been in the restaurant business, all in Chicago. He started with a chop suey café in South Clark street, over "Hinky Dink's."

"In those days the oriental fixtures and decorations were the big features of Chinese restaurants," said Mr. Foin. "Later on I've had bigger and better eating places, one on Randolph street and my last one, the Mandarin inn. Now we've cut out the far east features and operate a strictly American restaurant, and that's what the Mandarin Gardens will be."

Mrs. Foin is American born, and so are their five children, who speak English like any Chicagoan, but, to Mr. Foin's regret, their Chinese is shaky. One son is at the University of Chicago.

Accomplished Youngsters.

"One child plays the violin, another the piano, and two are toe dancers," said Jacob M. Weller, president of Minchin & Weller, Inc. "Mr. Foin says he could almost put on a good cabaret with his own youngsters as entertainers."

Robert B. Clark was broker in the lease, representing both parties. Montgomery, Hart & Smith were attorneys.

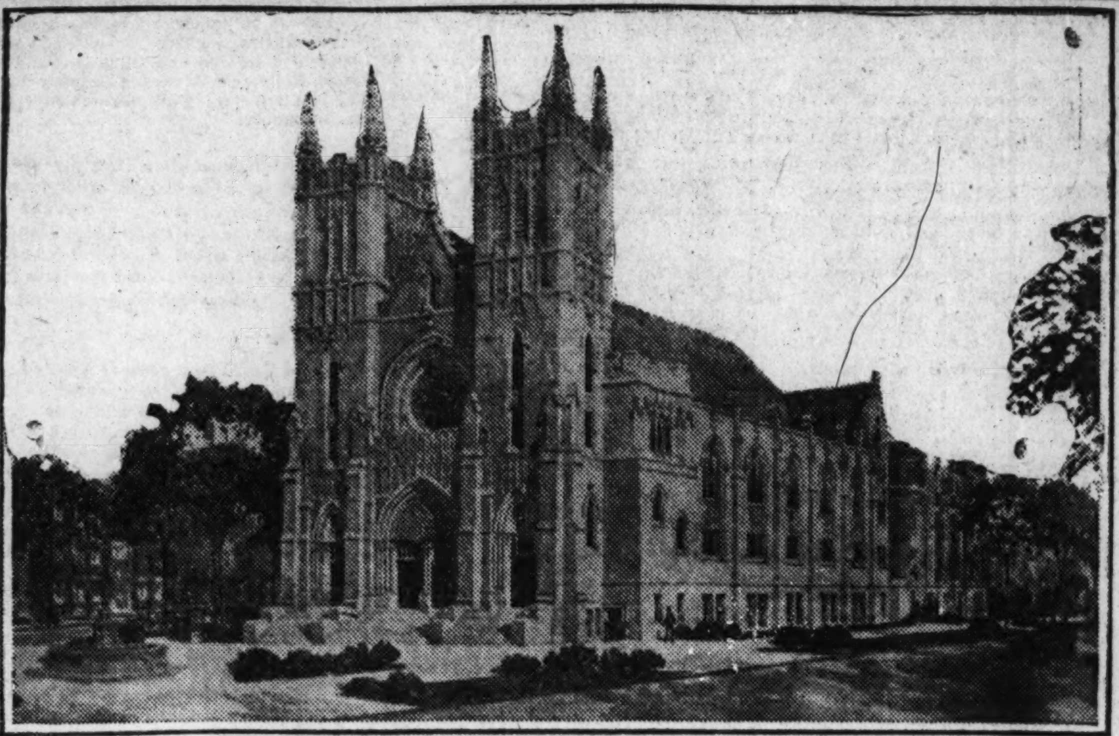
SHERMAN STREET LEASE.

Patrick J. Ryan has leased from the William A. Giles estate, through E. F. Keebler & Co., the four story building at 440-44 South Sherman street, 46x106, for ten years from March 1, 1921, at a term rental of $80,000. Mr. Ryan will occupy all the upper floors and sublet the two stores. Keebler & Co. are in charge of the building.



One of the north side's best known corners, the intersection of Broadway and Sheridan road, is going to be improved with a new $175,000 edifice to take the place of the present modest Buena Memorial Presbyterian church. Last Sunday the Rev. Henry Hepburn's congregation raised $150,000 toward the building fund. The remaining $25,000 is expected to be given today. Work will start early in the summer from plans by Architect Ivar Velhe-Haess. The building will seat 1,600.

WORK TO START NEXT MONTH ON NEW BANK FOR UPPER MICHIGAN

Work will start next month on one of Upper Michigan's most important and imposing building projects—the four story building of the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank, at the northeast corner of the boulevard and Ohio street. Plans by Architects Marshall & Fox have been approved and bids will be called for about the middle of January.

The original idea of having a tall office building has been abandoned. The new building will be a monumental structure with stone columns and with a maximum of window space. It will front 100 feet on Upper Michigan and 117 feet on Ohio.

The main entrance to the bank will be on the boulevard, with two shops on each side of the entrance. The bank will use all the Ohio street side and will have a banking room extending up the full height of the building. There will be offices on the second, third, and fourth floors.

The building will cost approximately $325,000. The bank will move from its temporary quarters at 610 Upper Michigan avenue into the new building as soon as completed, about July 1.

News of the Architects

EDWARD H. BENNETT.
[Kaufmann & Fabry Photo.]

Edward H. Bennett, architect and city planner, will give an illustrated lecture on "City Water Fronts" next Tuesday evening at the monthly meeting of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects at the Art institute. Mr. Bennett will be preceded by a short description of the Centennial building at Springfield, Ill., by H. H. Bentley of Schmidt, Garden & Martin.

The executive committee of the chapter has voted that each member attending dinner preceding future meetings will be charged $1, instead of having the chapter use its funds for that purpose. Dinner will be at 6 o'clock.

Beg Your Pardon

The Columbia Steel and Shafting company of Pittsburgh is to build a plant at the southwest corner of Kedzie avenue and West Forty-seventh place, and not at Kedzie and Forty-seventh street, as announced in Wednesday's real estate department. The Henry Bosch company's wall paper plant is at the southwest corner of Kedzie and Forty-seventh street.

Small Hotel May Be Built in North Clark Street

A modern, popular priced hotel is contemplated at 223-27 North Clark street as the result of the purchase of the leasehold and building, 37x40, by Samuel A. Cohn and James M. Lovellette from Charles E. Patterson for a nominal consideration. The buyers are owners and managers of the Hotel Astor at 172. The four story building now at 223-27 is occupied by the Aantlers hotel. The original lease called for $3,000 annually.

"Boul Mich by 10:30" Slogan for Fast Moving Realty Banquet

Louis B. Beardslee's famous realtors' chow slogan, "Feet Under the Table," etc., is going to be the feature of the Chicago real estate board's thirty-eighth annual banquet next Saturday evening in the gold room of the Congress hotel. Think of it, men—"feet under the table at 6:45—out on Boul. Mich. by 10:30!" That ought to appeal to the most hardened banqueter, used to missing the last train because of a slow moving dinner schedule. There'll be a reception starting at 5:30 p. m. in the Elizabethan room.

SENATOR HOWARD SUTHERLAND.
[Underwood Photo.]

EDWARD JAMES CATTELL.

To make the realtors' banquet a snappy affair Mr. Beardslee and his two fellow banquet committee members, James B. Kaine and Frank G. Saida, after weary search through the effete east, made arrangements for only two speakers, instead of the usual six or more.

Who They Are.

Here's what he says about the two: "United States Senator Howard Sutherland of West Virginia will be the speaker of the evening. He will talk about questions confronting us today. He's known everywhere as one of our greatest orators. He was a nominee for president on the Republican ticket at the Coliseum last June.

"Edward James Cattell has the reputation of being the greatest after dinner speaker in the United States. He's known as the 'parcel of sunshine,' and he can make you chuckle or wipe your eyes at will. He's a wonder. He's written several books under the name of Francis H. Hardy. He's a statistician and lives in Philadelphia, but don't think he's slow. I heard him in Philly and never heard a better speaker anywhere."

30 Piece Jazz Band!

The invocation will be given by the Rev. George Craig Stewart of Evanston. President Adolph F. Kramer will make his final report and the incoming president, Lewis M. Smith (everyone says he'll be elected next Wednesday) introduced. The toastmaster will be Byron V. Kanaley and the chairman of the reception committee is former President Ivan O. Ackley.

"There won't be any orchestra," added Mr. Beardslee. "We're going to have a thirty piece band—BAND—and with plenty of jazz, stunts, and only two long speeches we'll guarantee to get every one out of the hotel by 10:30. That ought to be snappy enough, hadn't it?"

We'll say it had.

BIG BUILDING PROJECT FOR ALBANY PARK

Work will start this week on a building project which will cover an entire block in the Albany Park district bounded by North Kimball, Carmen, Foster, and Christiana avenues. All of the sixty-two lots will be improved with bungalows on Christiana avenue, two flat buildings on Kimball, and two twenty-four flat buildings on Foster. The bungalows will sell for $8,500 and up and will have five and six rooms.

The property known as Johnson's subdivision and owned by Elos Johnson for the last thirty-five years, was bought by Walter R. Koerner, builder and contractor. C. M. Healy of the Lawrence Realty company represented all parties. Improvements are in on Foster and Christiana. Carmen and Kimball will be paved next spring.

P. T. Johnson, formerly manager of the sales department of the Hool Realty company, has become associated with Phillips & Co., 5 North La Salle street.

One of the best known of the family hotels on the south side, the seven story fireproof Kenwood, at the southwest corner of East Forty-seventh street and Kenwood avenue, has been sold for a price understood to be apaproximately $800,000, subject to a $415,000 bond issue. The buyer conveyed in part payment a North Dakota ranch.

George F. Kriterbrink, a banker of Grand Fords, N. D., bought it from the hotel company of Kenwood, through K. R. Beak & Co., who will have the management of the property. PLAN $500,000 ISAIAH TEMPLE ON BOULEVARD

Hyde Park will have one of the largest and most magnificent Jewish synagogues in the city as the result of the purchase by Isaiah temple of the former Counselman residence, at the northeast corner of Greenwood avenue and Hyde Park boulevard, 297x300, from Max Goldstine, for a reported $78,000. Rosenberg & Lurie were brokers.

Although no architect has been retained, competitive drawings being contemplated, it is understood the new edifice will cost at least $500,000 and will have a large community house in addition to the temple. Joseph Stolz is rabbi. The congregation now worships at 4501 Vincennes avenue.

The Counselman residence was for many years the show place of the south side. It is of stone and is surrounded with a high ornamental iron fence. The new temple will face on the boulevard.

Lease Jefferson Hotel in Peoria, $1,500,000

Peoria's leading hotel, the ten story Jefferson, with 400 rooms, has been leased by the Watson-McMahon Hotel company of Indianapolis from Arthur Lehman and W. E. Hull for twenty years from Dec. 1 at a term rental of $1,500,000. All the furnishings were purchased. P. H. Reed & Co., Chicago hotel brokers, negotiated the deal. The lessees formerly operated the English hotel in Indianapolis.

"JITNEY TO DOLLAR" CHAIN STORES TO OPEN IN CHICAGO

Chicago is to have a new set of chain stores—the "5c to $1" shop, operated by the L. R. Steel company, Inc., with its main offices in Buffalo, N. Y., and with establishments throughout the United States and Canada.

The premises at 6308-10 South Halsted street were leased from Henry Friend for ninety-nine years at a rental of $15,000 annualry, and the four story building bought for $75,000.

From Teninga Bros. & Pon, the 54x159 on Michigan avenue, between One Hundred and Eleventh and One Hundred and Twelfth streets, was leased for ten years. The lessors are erecting a mercantile building, the net rental to be fixed later.

The Steel company bought from Ira Rosenzweig, 112x120, on Sixty-third street, between Ingleside and Ellis, for approximately $800 a front foot.
